Mercury May Reach 15° Today In Cold Wave

Most Frigid Day Of Season Forecast On Heels of Snow And Windstorm

The coldest weather of the season will descend on Washington and vicinity early today with the mercury dipping to about 15 degrees on the heels of a cold wave that swept upon the city last night. The Weather Bureau predicted continued cold weather during the day with temperatures remaining below freezing.

However, there will be no repetition of the high winds of yesterday when the velocity averaged 40 to 50 miles an hour and a maximum of more than 60 miles during the city's first snowstorm. Yesterday's high temperature was 50 and during the snowstorm it tumbled to 32 at 4 p. m. Low for the day was 24 at midnight.

The snow melted here as soon as it fell and the sun, coming from behind clouds and the brisk wind, dried the streets almost immediately. During the height of the wind four burglar alarms in the Northwest and Northeast sections of the city were sounded when the wind drove wires together to form short circuits. Several fires were reported but none was serious.

Shortly after 10 p. m. last night fire destroyed a 10-room frame dwelling at Sandy Spring, Md. The house was situated in an open field and was not occupied at the time as it was undergoing repairs. Residents of the section said it belonged to a Mrs. Tilford, whose address they did not know. No other buildings were endangered, they said.

Tornado Hits Southeast Georgia

A tornado hit southeast Georgia leaving a death toll of five persons and at least a score of persons injured.

Several homes were leveled in the neighborhood of Lincolnton, Ga., when the high winds swept through. Property damage also was reported in Millen and Washington, Ga.

14 Drown as Tug Sinks in Lake Erie

Cleveland, Dec. 2 (AP).—In the worst disaster on treacherous Lake Erie since 1936, the 94-ton tug Admiral plunged beneath icy wind-swept waves today, drowning her crew of 14.

Hampered by adverse weather, Coast Guard cutters sought meanwhile to rescue the 19 crew members of the 250-foot barge Cleveco. The barge was under the Admiral's tow when the tug went down a dozen miles northwest of Cleveland and not far from Avon Point—the same area where the Canadian

21 Sailors Feared Lost as Small Boat Capsizes in Bay

Newport, R. I., Dec. 2 (AP).—A Navy liberty boat, filled with men returning from shore leave, capsized in Narragansett Bay shortly before 3 a. m. and between 14 and 21 sailors were feared lost.

Two, J. B. Kelly and L. J. Hinsen, both seamen, second class, were known to have survived. Navy officers at Newport said they were not sure, but that they believed the boat had carried 16 men. Earlier, however, one survivor was quoted as saying he thought 23 were aboard.

Jamestown firemen recovered five bodies and the motor whaleboat itself.

One of the survivors stumbled up to a farm and said the boat capsized and that he clung to the side of the craft until he felt it strike something.

"The next thing I remember, I found myself lying on shore near the boat," he was quoted as saying.

The other known survivor spent the night in a haystack.

Rescue workers expressed the hope that some of the sailors might be drifting in their life belts.

November Bond Sale 65 Million Short

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced yesterday that sales of war bonds in November fell $65,400,000 short of the 800 million dollar quota.

The November sales totaled $734,600,000. Sales of series E bonds, which include those purchased by payroll deduction, were $541,600,000 as against 587 million dollars in October. Series F and G sales in November were 193 million dollars, compared with $236,500,000 of these two series in October.

Labor Peace Seen Near Again

Union Committeemen Agree On Formula to End Disputes

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

A. F. of L. and C. I. O. "peace" committees yesterday agreed on a formula to settle troublesome inter-union jurisdictional rows, which committeemen described as a step toward organic unity of the two labor organizations.

The formula which is similar in many respects to proposals advanced months ago by the War Labor Board and later by C. I. O. President Philip Murray but never put into effect makes provision for eventual "final and binding" arbitration of all unsettled differences involving the two labor groups.

Councils Must Ratify

The agreement which was reached by the conferees after two days of discussion behind closed doors at Hotel Willard will be submitted to the executive councils of both organizations for ratification.

A joint A. F. of L.-C. I. O. committee will be set up to hear and decide "any disputed jurisdictional differences that may arise between the two above-named organizations," a formal press statement indorsed by members of both "peace" committees said.

"If the joint committee fails to agree upon a complaint lodged with the committee, it will select a disinterested arbiter to render a decision on the dispute in question," the statement said. "The arbiter's decision shall be final and binding on both parties. In the event an arbiter cannot be agreed upon by the committee within five days, the President of the United States shall be requested to name an arbiter."

First Since 1935 Split

The conferees recommended that the agreement be allowed to remain in effect until labor unity is effected.

After inviting reporters into the conference room, Murray told them that they had just "perfected the first agreement between the two organizations since the split in 1935."

He added that it was "a broad declaration" designed to bring the two groups together as a result of a "wholesome desire" to work out differences, without doing anything that "might impede war production."

Daniel J. Tobin, president of the A. F. L. Teamsters Union, stated that the move was a step toward uniting the two labor movements.

No Data on Kaiser Units

Harry C. Bates, representing the A. F. L. Bricklayers Union, added that conferences would be resumed in the middle of the month in an effort to work out a plan of "amalgamation."

Others present at the conferences were William L. Hutcheson, A. F. of L. Carpenters; R. J.

WLB to Limit 'Escalator' Pay Raises

'Formula Prohibits More Than 15 Per Cent Boost Over Jan. 1, 1941

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The War Labor Board announced yesterday that labor union "escalator" contracts—providing pay increases when the cost of living goes up—would be limited in their operation by the WLB wage stabilization formula in the "Little Steel" case.

The formula limits increases, to correct maladjustments, to 15 per cent above the level prevailing January 1, 1941.

Dr. George W. Taylor, public member, prepared the unanimous opinion.

The Pyrites Co., Inc., of Wilmington, Del., and the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union joined in requesting WLB approval of a 2-cents an hour raise which was provided for by a union contract if the cost of living rose three index points.

Fixed at Sept. 15 Level

Dr. Taylor, in the opinion, recalled that by executive order wages are fixed at the September 15, 1942, level, unless increase is necessary to correct maladjustments or inequalities, to eliminate substandards of living, to correct gross inequities, or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war.

The WLB has declared that increases will not be granted to correct maladjustments in cases where the employes concerned already have received increases of 15 per cent over the January 1, 1941, scale.

The WLB found that "escalator" clause increases came under the maladjustment classification.

Action Sets Precedent

Already (last August) the opinion pointed out, the pyrites workers have obtained raises of 19 per cent over the January 1, 1941, level, and "under the wage stabilization program they have no proper claim" for further increases as a cost of living adjustment.

The "escalator" clause, the opinion added, cannot be used to provide a further cost of living raise because "any material and widespread increases in September 15 wage rates would also nullify the efforts now being made to hold the cost of living at present levels."

For the first time yesterday, the WLB revoked a union maintenance-

U. S. Decrees $67,200 Yearly Salary Limit

Most White Collar Pay to Be Pegged At Present Levels

The Treasury yesterday issued detailed regulations designed, generally speaking, to limit top salaries to a "basic amount" of $67,200 starting in 1943 and to hold salaries of most other white collar workers at about present levels.

Although the regulations, issued in accordance with Presidential orders, ran into many thousands of words, officials freely acknowledged that they left many questions unanswered, and advised interested persons: "When in doubt, consult the nearest stabilization office."

Except for farm workers, the regulations cover all salaries over $5000 a year and those under $5000 which are paid to unorganized executive, administrative and professional persons.

Some Increases Allowed

Dealing with the higher salaries, the regulations say that no salary may be paid which after deduction of Federal income taxes would exceed $25,000. But for the purpose of the regulations, the phrase, "income taxes," is defined in such a way that the "basic salary" allowable is $67,200.

In addition, higher salaries may be paid under certain circumstances. Allowances over and above the $67,200 will be permitted to

Fuel Oil Rationing Full of Errors, Truman Charges

Kansas City, Dec. 2 (AP).—Senator Harry S. Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, head of a committee delving into the Government's methods of rationing fuel oil and gasoline, exclaimed at a hearing today that "there has been nothing but errors to come out of this whole thing."

Ralph C. Kanaar, regional fuel oil administrator from Dallas, was testifying as to the basis on which fuel oil allotments were made in this area.

"It seems to me we could use a little horse sense and set up a basis that would work in this area," Truman told Kanaar. "It's not working now."

'Stop Passing Buck'

Revised Fire Escape Bill Wins Speedy Committee Approval

(Boston night club fire toll reaches 490, Page 18.)

Moving to buttress Washington's fire protection laws in the wake of Saturday night's night club disaster in Boston, the Senate District Committee yesterday gave speedy approval to the "fire escape" bill with the revisions recommended by the District government.

Approval of the measure came at the close of a session which saw Chairman McCarran order police, fire and building officials to "stop passing the buck" and clamp down on violators of the fire ordinances. It was admitted, in reply to direct demands from McCarran, that violations probably do exist in some of the city's amusement spots.

Before approving the bill, the committee followed the suggestions made Tuesday by James W. Lauderdale, assistant corporation counsel, and eliminated several of the House-approved measure's provisions. It struck out the section requiring installation of fire alarm systems connecting to the municipal system—the provision which has held up Senate passage of the bill because many feared that it would create a monopoly for two firms manufacturing alarms.

It also gave the Commissioners power to promulgate fire regulations for all buildings over 30 feet in height, which are not private dwellings, plus all such places as hospitals, schools and amusement spots. The measure originally gave them jurisdiction over board-

Italy 'Bulldozed' Into War, Says Premier; Admits Stab at France

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 2.—Benito Mussolini, coughing and puffing defiance in his longest speech of the war and the most urgent apparently, necessitated by the faltering of the will to war among his countrymen, admitted today Italy had been bulldozed into the conflict by pressure from belligerents but declared she would not be bombed out of the hostilities as promised by Prime Minister Churchill.

He added, however, that Italy "was clearing her cities of women and children; only combatants and those necessary must remain."

He spoke bombastically of the exploits of the Caesars and said for Italy it now is the question:

"To be or not to be . . ."

The Italian premier flayed President Roosevelt and took Prime Minister Churchill to task as one "intoxicated" on tobacco and liquor, but he got around to agreeing with Mr. Roosevelt's charge of long ago that Italy had stabbed France in the back.

"Only One Stab"

"Let us admit that we stabbed France in the back," Mussolini said, "but this is only one stab in the back compared to a hundred stabs France has made on Italy in history."

In his 81-minute speech to millions of bomb-conscious Italians, Mussolini ranged from justifications of Italy's entry into war to a rather lightly-considered determination to see it through.

He complained that none "ever really understood Italy," a statement that conceivably could have included Germany, and added that a neutral Italy could have been maltreated by both belligerents, an inclusive statement certainly embracing Germany's pressure.

He even acknowledged that the German high command had dictated postponement of impatient Italy's entrance into the war to a few days after Italy's own intended entry.

Admits Africa Menace

He admitted that the Allied positions in North Africa poised a menace over Italy, but said that with German help Italy would survive.

Of the choice to quit or submit to a "shattering air attack" from Africa and Britain, Mussolini said:

"The Italian people are not inferior to the British and Russian peoples. In our veins flows the blood of the ancient Romans. We shall hold fast."

Turning on Mr. Roosevelt again, he said:

"If there is a man who ever diabolically wanted this war, it is the President of the United States.

"It is logical that Japan did not wait for an American attack but chose the right time for starting it."

Reds Consolidate Positions, Punch New Holes in German Lines

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), Dec. 3.—The Red Army punched more holes in the German lines between Velikie Luki and Rzhev on the Central Front yesterday and captured a strategic height southwest of Stalingrad in a continuing point offensive that left more than 3800 dead Nazis in its wake, the Russians announced today.

The toll of Nazi killed and captured in two weeks has mounted to more than 166,000 on the basis of Russian announcements. Hundreds of tanks have been knocked out, and vast piles of equipment captured in drives that slackened somewhat in some sectors so the Russians could consolidate their positions on the snow-covered steppes.

The hilltop stormed and captured southwest of Stalingrad was not identified in the regular midnight communique, but earlier the newspaper Red Star said Yuzhnaya Height had fallen to the Russians. That hill had dominated the southern approaches to Stalingrad and the Germans had used it for weeks both for valuable artillery and observation posts.

Other Localities Taken

Several inhabited localities were reported seized by the Russians, but their names were not disclosed.

The Russians again spoke of "stubborn enemy resistance" on both fronts, but said 2500 Nazis fell yesterday in two battles between Velikie Luki and Rzhev where the Red army again "forged ahead." Nineteen enemy tanks were crippled, and 12 guns, 8 tanks, 8 mortars, several hundred motor vehicles and other material were captured, the communique said.

(The German radio acknowledged "local Russian successes" at Bely, well inside the Velikie Luki-Rzhev-Vyazma triangle on the central front, and also at Demyansk, southeast of Lake Ilmen, a sector thus far not mentioned by the Russians. The Germans also suggested another powerful Russian offensive was brewing southeast of Voronezh, between the present active theaters. The Nazis told of a heavy concentration of Russian forces and equipment in the Buturlinovka-Kalach-Pavlovsk triangle below Voronezh and said Nazi airmen already were attacking there.)

Driving Down East Bank

The Russians said they had knocked out or captured a total of 42 German tanks yesterday, and that the Red air force destroyed another 20 on Tuesday, as well as 150 trucks with troops and supplies.

Northwest of Stalingrad, where the Russians are fighting their way down the eastern bank of the Don River behind the Nazi siege army that has been stalemated for 100 days before that Volga City, the communique said the Red Army

Young Convict Gives Life For His Country in Navy Tests

By the Associated Press

Boston, Dec. 2.—Voting a posthumous pardon to Arthur St. Germain, 27, of Haverhill, the Massachusetts Executive Council revealed today that the young man, serving a long term at the Norfolk State Prison Colony, had given his life in secret Navy tests which may involve the saving of thousands of lives.

Neither Gov. Leverett Saltonstall nor Corrections Commissioner Arthur T. Lyman would discuss the tests, on the ground that they were naval secrets. St. Germain had served 18 months of a 5-to-7-year sentence. State officials said that in view of the heroic nature of the young prisoner's death, they felt the nature of the offense of which he was convicted should be withheld.

To the mother, Mrs. Beulah St. Germain, Lyman wrote: "I am not at liberty at the present moment to say much to you. I do want you to know that in my opinion your son gave his life for those in the armed services and for other members of his country just exactly as much as my boy, who is on a destroyer, would if he were to lose his life fighting the enemy. I saw Arthur and spoke to him the afternoon before he died and he had been showing steady improvement and was in relatively good spirits."

Commissioner Lyman made public a letter from Mrs. St. Germain in which she wrote:

"It has been just one week since I laid my Arthur away to rest. It was a great shock to me and I am still in a daze. Arthur was a lovely son; he was so kind and so loving and even in prison he was always thinking of me. Arthur and I had great plans made what we would do when he came home. He was good about his money and I always came first with him. Arthur would always tell me I was the best mother in the world. I loved him so much and it will take me a long while to get over his death, perhaps never. Your nice letter did a lot to help lift my burden. My oldest son is in the Army and my youngest son is waiting to be called. My children are my life. I want to thank you for myself and my children for your letter. When I kneel at night to say my rosary I will ask our Lord to watch over you and Mrs. Lyman and that dear boy of yours. May you never have to know the sorrow I am going through. I am going to try so hard to smile. . . ."

Buzz Wagner, Hero of Bataan, Overdue on Alabama Flight

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Lieut. Col. Boyd D. (Buzz) Wagner, twice decorated and twice promoted for his exploits against Japanese airmen, is long overdue on a routine flight in the United States, the War Department announced yesterday.

The 26-year-old top-flight ace of this war took off in a fighter plane Monday from Eglin Field, Fla., for Maxwell Field, Ala. He has not been heard from since.

His course would have carried him over a portion of the Gulf of Mexico and across several stretches of desolate and swampy land along the Gulf Coast. An extended search is being conducted by air and surface craft.

Colonel Wagner became almost legendary before the United States had been in the war two weeks. On his first day of action, over the Philippine Islands, Wagner shot down five Japanese aircraft. Then and as long as it was possible to fly and fight in the air above the Philippines, he practically lived in his airplane. They stopped trying to count the Japanese planes he destroyed on the ground.

A first lieutenant when the Japanese attacked Hawaii and the Philippines last December, he was promoted to captain in January. Then, in April, he was made lieu-

Ickes Named Wartime Czar Over U. S. Oil

Decision Apparently Settles Proposed Shift in Cabinet

President Roosevelt yesterday centralized administration of oil in the hands of Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, thus making it possible to set up a program for the allocation of the country's oil resources to see that they are used most effectively.

Ickes will exercise authority over oil comparable to that now held by Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers over rubber. His broad new powers will be lodged in a new Government agency—the Office of Petroleum Administration for War—which will absorb Ickes' Office of Petroleum Coordinator for War. . .

Would Have Accepted

Acceptance of the job by the Interior Secretary apparently put to rest plans to reshuffle the Cabinet making Ickes Secretary of Labor and manpower "czar." It is understood that President Roosevelt offered Ickes the top labor post, but that Ickes told the President that he preferred to remain in his present post.

Ickes friends stated that he would have accepted the labor job if the President had pressed him.

In a statement accepting the new post, Ickes broadly hinted that he had no plans to accept additional responsibility by pointing out that the oil job by itself was "enormous."

"In assuming the duties of petroleum administrator," Ickes said, "I desire to accent two major facts; first, that the supplying of oil to our armed forces and those of our allies is no less than a prerequisite to survival; and, second, that the successful carrying out of this task is one of enormous proportions—one which will call for tireless effort, unending study, and continu-

Use of Dakar As Allied Base Believed Near

U. S.-French Chiefs Meet in Algiers; Fleet May Join Up

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 2.—The Allies appeared tonight to be on the verge of acquiring Dakar without bloodshed for use as an antisubmarine base and of obtaining a valuable part of the French fleet there on the bulge of West Africa, which once was considered a potential dagger pointed at Brazil.

The decision throwing Dakar open to Allied use was expected to come out of conferences in Algiers among Pierre Boisson, one-legged Governor General of French West Africa; Admiral Jean Darlan, and the Allied army and navy commands in French Africa.

Conferring with Darlan, as head of the new imperial council set up to rule French Africa, and Boisson as a member, were:

Capt. Colin Kelly's Widow Quits Job To Care for Son

Seattle, Dec. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Colin Kelly, jr., widow of the first of the widely acclaimed American air heroes of the war, disclosed today that she had quit her job in California and taken a secluded residence here to get away from public appearances and devote more time to little Corky.

Corky is the 2½-year-old who bears proudly the name Colin Kelly 3d.—A name that was engraved among those of the Nation's wartime heroes when his father flew to his death to sink a Japanese battleship in the first month of the war, a year ago.

12 Miles Per Minute

U. S. Army Pilots Fly Planes 725 M. P. H. Straight Down

By the Associated Press

Farmingdale, N. Y., Dec. 2.—How two Army lieuteants dived their fighter planes at a speed of 725 miles an hour—more than 12 miles a minute and faster than the high-altitude speed of sound—was disclosed today.

A bystander, if there could have been one, would have seen the planes streak by before he heard their thunderous roar, because speed of sound at sea level is 736 miles an hour, decreasing as one travels into higher altitudes of less dense air.

The terrific speed — perhaps faster than any human being has traveled before—froze their control sticks, the pilots reported, causing them to resort to the use of emergency cranks to move the elevator tabs and pull their ships out of the dive.

Here's the story:

Lieut. Harold Comstock and Lieut. Roger Dyar, both 22, went aloft in Republic P-47 Thunderbolts for horizontal speed runs at 35,000 feet, then at 30,000 and at 25,000 feet.

Finishing at the high level, both put their planes into power dives to reach the 30,000-foot level.

Their air-speed indicators leaped. The air pounded against their straightened-out control surfaces with such force that neither could budge his stick. Both resorted to the emergency cranks to move elevator tabs.

Decisive Battle Reported Raging In Africa as Our Forces Drive on

By Blake Sullivan
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 2.—Superbly equipped and desert-toughened American streamlined armored forces spearheaded Allied action today in hurling back the heaviest German counterattack of the Tunisian campaign as Allied troops pressed forward on Bizerte and Tunis under the protection of increasing aerial forays.

A dispatch from Wes Gallagher, Associated Press correspondent at the headquarters of the Allied forces in North Africa, quoted a headquarters spokesman as saying that the Americans "played a big part in repulsing the German counterattack at Tebourba," a rail junction within 35 miles of Bizerte.

[John McVane, N. B. C. correspondent, implied in a broadcast from Allied advance headquarters, quoted by United Press, that the counterattack was not checked until it had driven the Allies back five miles from Djedeida to Tebourba. McVane said the going in Tunisia was "very tough," with the Axis using parachute troops and artillery to good advantage and holding local air control.]

Tunis Airfield Again Bombed

American medium bombers, escorted by P-38 fighters, assaulted the Tunis airdrome in the fifth Allied raid on that field in 44 hours. At least 12 Axis bombers were destroyed on the ground, the pilots reported.

The decisive battle for Bizerte and Tunis apparently has now been joined with heavy Allied air, land and sea forces converging on remaining Axis defenses.

The Allied communique said that the "Royal Navy is assisting in the provision of cover for the advance of our forces," showing that the British men-of-war are bringing their big guns into the action against the German-held fortress.

Allied headquarters reported the Germans have suffered "heavy losses" in their unsuccessful counterattack.

In the continuing action, United States P-38 pursuit planes were reported to have knocked out a number of German tanks in the Djedeida area near Tunis.

Allies Drive Toward Coast

There also were reports of heavy action around Mateur, 12 miles southwest of Bizerte, as the Allied columns drove on toward the coast to cleave the naval base from Tunis, the capital.

Fierce fighting was also reported at the apex of the Allied wedge around Djedeida, 15 miles northwest of Tunis. The battle in this sector, where the Axis has concentrated the bulk of its forces, was believed by London observers to be entering its final phase.

Tunis was reported by Reuters New Agency to be within artillery range of the forward Allied forces. Pont du Fahs, a startegic point near the capital, was stormed by French troops while British parachute troops occupied another important airfield in the Bizerte area, forcing the Luftwaffe to resort more and more to Sicilian bases.

Decisive Batle Indicated

Light bombers and fighters also are operating in support of the forward troops, the communique said. It acknowledged the loss of five planes but declared that seven enemy aircraft were destroyed.

London newspapers published a report, attributed to the Morocco radio and unconfirmed from any other quarter, that the British First Army had cut the coastal highway between the strong points, thus freeing its hand for a drive on Tunis, already less than 12 miles away from Allied advance units and within artillery range. U. S. Hits Back

N.Y. Man Gets 45-Year Term For Treason

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 2.—Anthony Cramer, 42-year-old Yorkville mechanic convicted of treason in aiding two Nazi submarine-landed saboteurs, was sentenced today to 45 years in prison and fined $10,000, thereby escaping the death penalty asked by the Government.

Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, pointing out that it was "substantially equivalent to a sentence of life," explained he would not impose the death penalty because he felt no "real proof" had been shown that Cramer knew of the Germans' mission to destroy the American aluminum industry.

The saboteurs, whom Cramer was accused of giving "aid and comfort," were Werner Thiel and Edward John Kerling, who, with four companions, subsequently were executed in Washington.

In another Federal court today, Kerling's sweetheart, Miss Hedwig Engemann, 34-year-old waitress, was sentenced by Judge Alfred C. Coxe to three years' imprisonment on her plea of guilty to misprison in the concealment of alleged treason by Helmuth Leiner, Long Island gardener who earlier this week was declared innocent of treason through association with Kerling. He was interned as a dangerous enemy alien. Miss Engemann also was fined $1000, which was remitted.

Cramer's court-assigned counsel, Harold Medina, announced he would appeal. The defense has contended that Cramer had no knowledge of the two Germans, mission of sabotage.

U. S. Planes Blast Enemy Positions 4 Times in Day

United States soldiers and marines, pounding loose the weakening Japanese grip on Guadalcanal Island, killed 51 Japs and captured 3 cannon and 6 machine guns in one day's patrol actions, the Navy Department said yesterday.

Patrols engaged in mopping up the fringes of the American position on the island Tuesday (Solomons time) ranged into the reaches of the upper Lunga River west of Henderson Airfield. There they seized a 75-millimeter field gun and a 30-millimeter gun and killed 25 Japanese.

An Army patrol killed 11 Japanese and captured a 70-millimeter gun and a Marine patrol killed 15 Japs and took 6 machine guns in another action. It was not revealed where these fights took place.

Aircraft Blast Foe

Army aircraft blasted enemy positions four times during the day.

Since the powerful Japanese attempt to reinforce their forces on Guadalcanal was beaten off with heavy enemy losses in the naval battle of November 13-15, the position of those remaining on the island has come increasingly to resemble the position of the American forces on Bataan Peninsula last spring. Their supplies cut off, their ammunition dwindling, lacking medicines and without hope of reinforcement, they are rapidly nearing the time when resistance will be impossible.

Meanwhile, they are being given no respite from attack by land and air.

Status of Darlan Not Worrying U. S., Hull Declares

Secretary of State Hull made clear yesterday that the United States is too busy winning the war in North Africa to worry about the report on the Morocco radio that Admiral Jean Darlan has taken over authority as chief of state in the area.

Hull told his press conference that the United States at present is absorbed in the task of driving Axis forces out of Africa.

This Government, he added, had no time to sit down and talk politics with various groups interested in the future status of personalities there. The time will come later, he said, when the people themselves will decide. The Fighting French have expressed bitter opposition to recognition of Darlan, former Vichy leader.

Hull gave a similar reply to a question about the status of Otto of Hapsburg, pretender to the throne of Austria-Hungary.

Hull disposed quickly of Mussolini's 80-minute speech excoriating the British and blaming President Roosevelt for the war. Asked for comment on the speech, he said he had not yet seen it and doubted if it would have been worth commenting on if he had seen it.

Reds Battle to Extend Gains

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

RUSSIAN FRONTS—West of Moscow the Russians reported continued success in the Rzhev and Velikie Luki zones although Rzhev, and possibly Velikie Luki also, remained in German hands. Further Russian gains were reported along the Don River west of Stalingrad, and in this same region the Red air force reported destruction of 50 German transport planes used to supply Nazis whose rail and road communications were reported cut. In the Caucasus region bitter fighting continued. There have been no reports recently which would confirm or discredit Berlin reports that a new Russian offensive was in the making in the Voronezh sector (A). Sikorski Says Hitler Hopes To Hold Out for a 'Lame Peace'

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, Polish Prime Minister and commander in chief of the Polish forces, expressed the belief here yesterday that Hitler would fight to the end in the fortress of Europe, hoping to so prolong the war that the Allies would become demoralized and agree to a "lame peace."

The stalwart Polish leader, whose soldiers, sailors and airmen are still very much in the war, came here at President Roosevelt's invitation to be the Nation's guest. He talked to the President at length in the White House and then saw newspapermen at Blair House.

In saying that Hitler, facing defeat, would try to prolong the war so as to get a "lame peace, General Sikorski said he meant a negotiated or compromise peace. Such a peace, he said, would be the worst thing that could happen, a peace "infinitely worse" than that of Versailles.

General Sikorski made it clear that he was talking about what Hitler would hope to do, not what he himself expected to happen. He was reminding his interviewers at the time that the war was not yet won, and that Hitler and his Nazis, having played the part of barbarians, would go to great lengths to escape the very harsh treatment that their deeds have merited.

"We are now witnessing great events," General Sikorski said, looking at the war picture in general.

He said that Hitler had lost the initiative on all fronts where Germans were fighting—Tunisia, Libya and Russia. He said the latest news from Tunisia was very favorable and expressed the belief that Rommel was too weak to put up a prolonged defense in Libya.

Russia's Red army, General Sikorski said, was not only not routed or destroyed, but was giving proof of its great vitality and fighting qualities.

"I never underestimate Hitler," he said, "but I believe that the Germans will lose the North Caucasus. At any rate, the Germans have lost the initiative, and I believe that their loss of it is permanent."

With Polish Ambassador Jan Ciechanowski serving as interpreter, General Sikorski disclosed that 75,000 Polish troops were being reorganized in the Near East and would be ready for battle when needed. These troops were among prisoners freed by Russia after Hitler attacked in 1941. Prior to their release, there were 35,000 men in the Polish armed forces.

Hailed by all Allied airmen have been the Polish air squadrons, which, fighting alongside the R. A. F., had by last June shot down 500 enemy planes, and probably a further 250.

The Polish Navy also has been playing its part. Three destroyers—The Grom, Burza and Blyskawica—escaped to England after the fall of Poland, and with them two submarines, the Orsel and Wilk. In addition a number of Polish merchantmen managed to get away and play a role in the war.

Biddle to Urge War Powers Bill Passage

By Edward Ryan

Post Staff Writer

Attorney General Biddle and key war officials are expected to return to the Capitol today to urge again passage of legislation that would empower the President to slice through legal red tape hampering the war effort, but there was every chance their visit would prove little more than a formality.

Their appearance will mark the beginning of formal open hearings on the war powers bill scheduled yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee after it defeated, 13-to-7, a motion to kill the legislation outright. With only a month left to the present Congress, members predicted that the hearings, which promise to be lengthy, would delay the measure enough to kill it.

Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina said that the hearings would surely run into next week and possibly longer. If they continue beyond next week, he said, the chance for legislation during the present Congress would be gone.

Farm Interest in Tariff

At the same time, other commiteemen reported rising interest in the war powers plan from agricultural groups concerned about how they would be affected if the President received authority to suspend tariff laws during the war.

As now written, the bill would carry a blanket authority for suspending laws and regulations affecting movements of goods, information, and of persons going out of the country. The immigration laws covering movements of aliens into the country would remain untouched.

Representative Jenkins (Republican) of Ohio and other members reported that they had received growing protests against granting the Administration broad authority to suspend the tariffs from cattle, dairy, grain and other interests.

Senate Hearings

Besides the prospect of extended hearings in the House, Senate Minority Leader McNary of Oregon has served notice that he would insist on full public hearings in the Senate if the bill reaches there.

Along with the Attorney General, these witnesses, all of whom testified earlier on the war powers proposal in secret sessions of the Ways and Means Committee, were scheduled to be heard today: Undersecretary of War Patterson, Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, Maritime Commission chairman; Herbert E. Gaston, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Breckinridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State, and Tariff Commissioner Oscar B. Ryder.

E. M. Ebert Named To Commerce Post

Edgar M. Ebert yesterday was appointed director of the Interstate Commerce Bureau of Inquiry, the unit which investigates violations of the Interstate Commerce laws.

Ebert had been assistant director and will fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of William H. Bonneville. Harry L. Underwood was named assistant director to succeed Ebert.

Allies Beat Off Naval Convoy Rushing Aid to Japs at Buna

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia, (Thursday) Dec. 3.—Allied airmen have downed 23 Jap Zeros and driven off a naval convoy which attempted to reinforce the entrapped Japs at Buna on the northeast New Guinea coast, the high command announced today.

The ground fighting for control of all northeast New Guinea continued in favor of the Allies.

"With support of our artillery and with close bombing and strafing by our air units, our troops have driven in from the left beyond Gona and are advancing along the beach toward the center of the enemy's position at Sananda," the communique stated.

"We are mopping up strong points which were overrun on our attack.

"On the right, we have infiltrated into the outskirts of Buna village."

Allied planes battled throughout yesterday afternoon and last night against the enemy naval force together with its air escort before driving it off. Against the reported downing of the 23 Zeros, the communique reported "our air losses were light."

The Jap ground forces, pinned against the sea, were resisting the advancing Allies "with the greatest fierceness."

Gannett to Run For Chairman Of GOP Committee

Frank E. Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., newspaper publisher, announced yesterday that in response to many requests he would permit his name to be presented for the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee at a committee meeting, December 7.

Gannett recently resigned as assistant chairman. If selected chairman, he would succeed Representative Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts who has announced his resignation in order to devote his full time to his duties as House minority leader.

"My one motive for continued participation in politics," Gannett asserted, "is to bring about the complete and final defeat of the New Deal."

Senators Aid Appeal

Senators Wagner and Mead, New York Democrats, will join Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Undersecretary of Navy James V. Forrestal today in an air appeal for support of the United Hospital fund campaign. They will be heard from 5 to 5:15 p.m. on a broadcast to be relayed to station WABC, New York City, through WJSV, Washington. Ted Collins, radio producer-director, will present them.

Armament-Makers State Their Aims

Guns and Tanks not Made to Win People's Revolution, Head of Manufacturers Says

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 2.—"I am not making guns or tanks to win a people's revolution—I am making armament to help our boys save America," William H. Witherow, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said today at the opening of the wartime convention of the association.

"I don't want any modified free enterprise or bill-of-rightless democracy," he added.

Witherow, whose speech dealt primarily with the difficulties of industry and business under wartime controls and with the desire of business for quick post-war relaxation of these controls, was echoed by J. Howard Pew, president of Sun Oil Co., and a vice president of N. A. M., who said:

"Since the very survival of our country now depends on industry's output of war materials, it follows that we must hold firmly to that system which will give us the maximum of goods for our war effort.

Dare Not Change Patterns

"Even if totalitarian effort were more efficient than our American way, we dare not change overnight the patterns of thinking that have guided us for over a century.

"... Any action that penalizes ingenuity in industry would result inevitably in so cutting down our production that we would lose this war.

"This is the catastrophe that threatens us today, as Washington, with tongues of Babel and in pell-mell fashion, proclaims directives on top of restrictive orders and restrictive orders on top of directives."

Pew objected to the limitation on net salaries to $25,000 a year during the war as injuring the 3000 men who, "more than any others have been responsible for making possible the largest war production of any people at any time in history."

Eugene E. Wilson, president of United Aircraft Corp., said:

"Mankind needs the American type of leadership; let it not be discredited by those who are out of sympathy with it, who don't understand it or are incompetent to administer it.

Confession of Incompetence

"In America, the demand for the power to compel is confession of incompetence to lead."

Ferdinand Eberstadt, vice chairman of the War Production Board, said the United States may be called upon to supply a "rejuvenated" French army.

"You must not forget that war is a matter of change and hazard and that what is true today may not be true tomorrow.

"We may, for example (it is to be hoped), have the privilege of supplying a rejuvenated French army which, although it would cause a change in our calculation, would be a very agreeable burden indeed."

Eberstadt said this country's war production volume has been "enormous" although it has fallen short to some extent and in some fields of the "inspiring goals which our President very wisely set for us."

He told the Nation's top-ranking industrialists gathered for the convention that:

"You, of all people, should be gentlest in your judgment of the degree of confusion, intricate regulations, and conflicting instructions which must necessarily have accompanied the creation in so short a time of a war business exceeding 100 billion dollars."

N. A. M. President Witherow, who is also president of the Blaw-Knox Co., suggested that private capital be encouraged to provide the motive power for post-war reconstruction and added:

"Personally, I am not interested in any other form of government or form of economy than our own. I admire beyond expression the stand the Russians have made. . . . They are fighting nobly for Russia and Soviet ideals. We're fighting for America and American ideals.

"I am not making guns or tanks to win a 'people's revolution.' I am making armament to help our boys save America. . . . I don't want any 'modified' free enterprise or bill of rightless democracy.

"Immediately after the war, Government aid to war-torn countries is a foregone conclusion. But not the rehabilitation of their economy or the reforming of their lives. I am not fighting for a quart of milk for every hottentot, or for a TVA on the Danube, or for governmental handouts of free Utopia."

Witherow described "rationing, renegotiation, shortages, investigations, indictments, questionnaires, antitrust suits, conflict, overlapping, red-tape and confusion, National Labor Relations Board, WLB and other alphabetical slow-downs that took the time of management" as so many things in the knapsack industrialists have to carry.

John Milburn Dies in Crash Of Army Plane

By the Associated Press

Second Lieut. John G. Milburn, 24, second son of the internationally famous polo player Devereux Milburn, was killed Tuesday night when the plane he was piloting crashed near Waterford, Va.

Officials at Pope Field, Fort Bragg, N. C., said Second Lieuts. Francis A. Nance, Robert Nottkember and Stanley B. Nolander parachuted to safety from Milburn's plane.

Lieut. Milburn's brother, Devereux, jr., is a bombardier in the Air Corps. His father died on a golf course August 15.

Young Milburn married Miss Ruth Harris of Georgia, a year and a half ago. They had no children. The pilot also is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Steele Milburn, and two sisters, Mrs. Arthur D. Weekes, jr., and Miss Kathryn S. Milburn, both of Old Westbury, Long Island, N. Y.

Lieut. Milburn left college at Oxford in England in the fall of 1940 and joined the Air Corps as a cadet in November of that year.

He had a three-goal handicap as a polo player.

Silver Sale Bill Reported Out In Senate

By the Associated Press

A long-disputed bill to permit the Government to sell its unpledged silver for consumptive uses emerged from the Senate Banking Committee yesterday, but it will die unless its backers can gain approval of both House and Senate by January 2, when Congress adjourns.

The sponsors are mainly New England lawmakers.

Senators from the Western silver-producing States were ready last night for a finish fight against the bill, despite amendments adopted at their insistence. Senator Murdock (Democrat) of Utah voted against it in the committee and declared later that every ounce of silver sold by the Government would "rob the people of 79 cents"—the difference between the monetary value of silver, $1.29 an ounce, and 50 cents, the minimum stipulated sale price.

Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut, who advocates selling surplus silver to industries, expressed belief the amendments "greatly improved" the bill.

As finally revised, the measure provides that the Secretary of the Treasury, upon a recommendation from the chairman of the War Production Board, can sell, or lease upon terms he deems advisable, any Government-held silver to persons, partnerships, associations, corporations or any Government department "in furtherance of the war effort, including but not limited to the making of munitions of war and the supplying of needs contributing to the war effort, and the converting of existing plants to those purposes."

But the average price could not be less than 50 cents per fine troy ounce, and the Treasury at all times would be required to maintain silver equivalent to the face amount of outstanding silver certificates.

Manufacturers of jewelry and small instruments formerly were able to buy foreign-mined silver at around 35 cents an ounce. A WPB order halted such purchases November 15 to conserve the imported metal for war uses. Unless the bill is passed, the manufacturers will have to obtain their supply at the United States market price, pegged by law at 71.11 cents. (Only when coined does the silver take on its monetary value of $1.29.)

Canada's Chief Sees no Place For Monopolies After War

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 2.—Monopoly of power by any one country or class must have no part in the new after-victory world order based on human rights, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada said tonight.

Envisioning a universal rule of law, the Prime Minister said in a speech prepared for delivery before the Pilgrims of America, at whose dinner he was guest speaker:

"If peace and freedom are to be our portion, an end must be put once and for all to aggression and domination on the part of any power."

May Prove Blessing

Deploring the fact that the war has extended to all parts of the world, the Prime Minister continued, however, that this might prove in time to have been a blessing in disguise, bringing a realization that "the interests of mankind are one and that all claims of humanity are supreme."

Paying tribute to those nations which have resisted aggression and lost as well as to those which still resist, Mackenzie King declared:

"If we on this continent have thus far escaped invasion . . . it is because of the resistance of other nations.

"Who will say that the freedom of all nations might not have been lost but for the resistance of the Chinese and the Russians? Who can begin to estimate what freedom owes to the people of Czecho-Slovakia, to the Poles, to the Norwegians, to the Dutch, to the Belgians, to the Yugoslavs, and to the Greeks?

"Who can estimate the debt that freedom owes to the Fighting French?

Special Tribute Paid

"Today we pay a special tribute to the patriotism and sacrifice of the brave officers and men of the French fleet at Toulon who have revealed anew the true spirit of France."

The Prime Minister predicted that "it will yet be seen by the peoples of Germany, Italy and Japan that, to the countries which have broken the might of their militarist regimes, they will owe a freedom which otherwise would have been lost to them for centuries."

Canada's war effort would not have been possible, he asserted, had it not been for the help in machinery, steel, coal, aircraft, arms and ammunition from the United States.

ing and apartment houses only if sleeping quarters were provided for 10 or more persons above the first floor.

A violator would be punished by a fine of from $10 to $100 for each day he continues the illegal practice after being warned. If he still refuses to correct the conditions, the Commissioners can step in, make the repairs, and assess the cost against the owner.

Other Measures Reported

At the session, the committee also reported favorably on three other local bills, one of them the measure recently voted by the House to permit women war workers here to stay on the job longer than the eight hours a day and 48 hours a week to which they are now restricted by law.

Of the other two, one would authorize the Board of Barber Examiners to regulate the opening and closing hours of District barber shops, while the other would simplify the procedure in redeeming tax sales certificates against local property. Both have been passed by the House.

McCarran's accusation of buck-passing in enforcement of fire protection laws came when he told a conference of municipal authorities that since the Boston fire, he had received numerous complaints from citizens concerning local establishments which were violating the safety standards. When police and building inspection officials seemed hazy as to just who had jurisdiction over several establishments, McCarran told them impatiently that they must get together and "stop this nefarious and illegal practice."

Club Census Started

Commissioner Guy Mason told him later that the Commissioners had begun a census of all places of public assembly in the city and would see that each one was promptly and rigidly inspected.

Both Mason and Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter indorsed the fire-escape bill, asserting that it would aid greatly in protecting lives and property here. They explained that present laws are outdated but inflexible, while the new bill would give the Commissioners power to alter the regulations to meet changed conditions.

As a further precaution, Mason suggested that steps might be taken under his board's regulatory authority to ban smoking in all theaters and in department stores which operate "bargain basements."

Mersch Indorsed For Register Post

The Senate District Committee yesterday approved the nomination of Victor S. Mersch for the post of Register of Wills in the District, to succeed Theodore L. Cogswell who was recently commissioned a major in the Army.

Mersch has been first deputy register here since 1927. His appointment as Cogswell's successor was recommended by all District Court justices, and was indorsed to the committee yesterday by the District Commissioners.

New Office to Deal With Foreign Areas

Creation of an office of foreign territories within the Department of State to deal with all nonmilitary matters arising out of American occupation of foreign territories was disclosed yesterday.

The new office will be headed by Hall Appleby by a special assistant to Secretary Hull. The State Department, calling attention to the recent appointment of former Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York as director of foreign relief and rehabilitation operations, said:

"There will of necessity be close collaboration between the functions of Governor Lehman and the functions of the office of foreign territories."

As has been customary for many years, more than $14,000 will be distributed on Christmas Eve to all employes of Julius Garfinckel & Co., the amounts depending on length of service, William E. Schmid, president, announced yesterday.

MORE MEN WEAR BOND CLOTHES THAN ANY OTHER CLOTHES IN AMERICA

Get off your high horse, Mr. Big

Times have changed, mister—the satisfaction of owning a Rochester-tailored Overcoat is no longer reserved for the chosen few. This year, Bond opens the way for a lot of men to enjoy Rochester quality who could never afford it before. Yes, we mean the same suave style, same long wearing fabrics, same smooth needlework in which you've always taken pride. But look at Bond prices! You see, Bond is the only retail clothier with a tailoring plant in Rochester. The Bond store near you is part of that plant. As a business man, you know how such a streamlined system cuts costs. So if you notice many of the men on your payroll wearing overcoats like yours, give them credit for knowing a good thing when they see it. Why not join the swing to Bond's yourself?

Guest-Host Congeniality Plan Adopted

In order to avoid awkward situations, the home service committee of the War Hospitality Committee decided yesterday that the personal interests of servicemen should be tallied with the interests of persons wishing to entertain them in private homes before sending the men out.

Because of the lack of such a system, it was reported at the meeting held in the Servicemens Club No. 1, any number of soldiers have spent trying evenings with families because of a complete diversity of interests and pursuits.

Investigations might be made of the homes offered to the servicemen before actual assignment is made, it was voted. Some parties which appeared satisfactorily mild, it was said, turned out to be drinking parties.

Centralization of all such home facilities available to the servicemen, and handled through the home hospitality committee, was urged at the meeting. Suggested by one member was that a secretary be hired to take care of all the requests for the military guests.

Many requests for soldier-guests at Thanksgiving dinners had to be declined because the demand exceeded the supply to some degree. At the same time, it was reported, as many as 250 from one Government worker group would have liked hospitality at the various homes.

The home hospitality committee is composed of members of civic organizations, churches, fraternal organizations and interested home owners.

Week's Power Output Gains 12.8% Over '41

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Electric power production in the week ended November 28 declined from the previous week's record high but still was 12.8 per cent greater than the like period of 1941, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Output this week stood at 3,766,381,000 kilowatt hours, compared with last week's record figure of 3,795,361,000. In the comparable week a year ago the total was 3,339,364,000.

Two Dancers Deny Show's Specialties Are Indecent

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 2.—Strip teaser Margie Hart and fan dancer Noel Toy today exhibited to a judge and jury the props they use in their specialties in the show "Wine, Women and Song." They testified at the trial of three officials of the show charged with giving an obscene performance.

Miss Toy identified a "G-string" for the court, then showed how she maneuvered the two fans she uses. The 95-pound dancer held the fans so they virtually covered her.

"There is not enough room here," she complained, backing toward the bench.

"You stay where you are," commanded General Sessions Judge Owen W. Bohan gruffly.

Asked by District Attorney Sol Gelf if she showed her body, Miss Toy replied:

"Yes, at the very end I flash it. When I am dancing the fans fly apart, and I can't help that."

Miss Hart, whose real name is Margaret Bridget Cox, testified that after removing certain of her scant stage apparel she was adorned "with flowers here and there."

Miss Hart denied that she exposed her body to the adience.

Today Miss Hart wore a purple dress and hat to match.

What she wore—if anything—in a scene of the show October 31, was a question for the jury to decide.

Testimony yesterday in the General Sessions Court trial of three officials of the show on charges of presenting and indecent performance raised the question whether:

(1) Margie was as nude as she seemed; (2) she wore net stockings that "came way up"; (3) she was modestly covered by a flesh-colored, skin-tight garment.

1000 Yearly Reports Required of Two Firms

Two large manufacturing concerns producing military supplies for the armed forces were required to send approximately 1000 reports a year to Federal agencies, according to a study on file with the Joint Economy Committee which today is scheduled to resume public investigation of the Government's questionnaire "snowstorm."

The study, embellished with graphs and drawings and prepared by the National Association of Manufacturers, gave a detailed analysis of the Federal "paper" load on the Worthington Pump and Eastman Kodak companies.

Worthington Pump, the study asserted, was required to submit 546 reports of 66 different types to 12 Federal agencies a year. To fill out the forms and answer all the questions the Governments wants answered, six separate departments of the concern were kept at work either part or full time, the N.A.M. report stated. It added:

"Five hundred forty-five reports a year is a lot of reports and this is entirely in addition to 478 other reports per year to 80 State, county and city governments, which brings the total number of government report forms . . . to 1023 a year."

The reports dispatched by Worthington run from 1 to 20 pages in length, contain from 10 to 100 questions and cost the company about $90,000 a year.

Eastman Kodak, in the three-month period ending last June, submitted 262 "periodical" reports and 147 "nonrecurring" reports to Federal agencies, the study declared. To prepare the documents, it was stated, a total of 51,400 man-hours of work were required, of which 8600 man-hours or 17 per cent was at overtime pay rates.

Committee Chairman Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia announced last night that witnesses to be heard today will include representatives of the N. A. M., the American Farm Bureau Federation and Eric A. Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Leon Henderson, price administrator, in a statement issued yesterday regarding testimony before the committee on Tuesday, contended that the E. R. Squibb and Sons, of New York, could have sold its "Anti-Pertussin" serum for treatment of whooping cough "subject to later price determination."

He said he was "amazed" by testimony by C. M. Van Kirk, vice president of the Squibb company, that the OPA delayed six weeks in giving his company the price this "new" product should bear and his "admission" that it had been held off the market, "particularly when he and his representatives knew that a price order was being drafted."

Tool Plot Indictment Upheld

Justice Bolitha J. Laws in District Court yesterday overruled a demurrer to an indictment charging two former WPB officials and three machine tool dealers with conspiracy to defraud the Government by withholding 71 critical machines from war production.

The defendants had attacked the legality of the indictment on the ground that the War Powers Act under which it was brought is unconstitutional.

Prosecutors indicated the five men would go on trial shortly after the Christmas holidays. Those accused are Robert Blee Rhoads, former chief of the WPB Available Tools Section; his assistant, Ralph Lamont Glaser; Louis E. Emerman, president of a Chicago used machine tools firm; and Clarence J. O'Brien and Frank L. O'Brien, jr., of the O'Brien Machinery Co., Philadelphia.

In a memorandum opinion dismissing the demurrer, Justice Laws wrote:

"Plainly it is an evil, a wrong of grievous character, to frustrate or impede a government function, whether that function is to be performed as a part of a constitutional or an unconstitutional law. The wrong is the frustration and impeding, and it exists whether the law is constitutional or not."

The decision upholds a contention by Arthur B. Caldwell and George M. Fay, special assistants to the Attorney General, that the question of constitutionality is irrelevant to the legality of the true bill.

Indicted August 31, the men are specifically accused of plotting to keep $150,000 worth of machine tools out of use for a period of 6 weeks by failure to report their availability to OPA and WPB. The dismissed WPB officials are said to have made $30,000 by selling an option on the tools to the O'Briens.

Stenographer, 54, Dies After Tooth Extraction

Baltimore, Dec. 2 (AP).—Miss Mary McGreevey, a 54-year-old stenographer, died in the Bon Secours Hospital a few hours after she had a tooth extracted.

She went to the hospital after returning home and complaining that she felt ill. Hospital attendants said she was treated for shock.

Major Clagett, 57, Dies in Hospital At Fort Dix, N. J.

Maj. Noble Clagett, 57, native of Washington, and brother of Judge Brice Clagett of the Municipal Court, died yesterday at an Army hospital at Fort Dix, N. J., following a lengthy illness.

He had been in the Army for a year and a half, having previously been stationed in New York City with the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Major Clagett made his home at Rockville Center, Long Island, N. Y. After entering the Army he was stationed at Raritan Arsenal, N. J.

He was a graduate of Central High School here, where he was captain of the track team. He later attended George Washington University, where he also was on the track team.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Betty Clagett of Rockville Center, his mother, Mrs. Maurice J. Clagett of Landover, Md., and Judge Clagett.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Bill Imperils Air Conditioning

Workers in a number of Washington Government buildings will have to endure next summer's heat without benefit of air conditioning if a bill approved yesterday by the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee is enacted into law.

The legislation would authorize the Government to sell to defense plants mechanical equipment which is urgently needed for the war effort and which cannot be procured elsewhere.

John Jex, jr., head of the War Production Board's air-conditioning section, told the Grounds Committee at a hearing on the bill that air-conditioning units are particularly coveted. The bill would also enable the transfer of some 600,000 typewriters from civilian departments to the armed forces.

Jex explained that air toning plants were not going to be used to cool off factory workers at the expense of Federal employes' comfort. The units are badly needed, he said, in the manufacture of aircraft, steel and synthetic rubber.

Already five of the seven units now operating in the Social Security Building—offices of the WPB among other agencies—have been tentatively allotted to a Midwest airplane factory. The three-million plant which cools the Capitol and congressional office buildings might well be taken if the bill passes, Jex hinted, unless the Congressmen wanted to seek preferential treatment.

Altogether, he estimated, there are about 600,000 horsepower units of equipment available in Federal buildings here.

Passage of the legislation was asked Monday by President Roosevelt. At present, no authority exists for the transfer of property out of the agency to which Congress originally gave the funds for its purchase.

Dividend Approved

Philadelphia, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Securities and Exchange Commission today approved payment by North American Co. on or about December 30 of a common stock dividend in the form of not more than 156,000 shares of Detroit Edison Co. capital stock.

District Jews Mourn Brethren Under Nazi Rule

Heeding a call from the World Jewish Congress, Washington's Jewry yesterday joined brethren of 29 lands in observing a day of Zionist Organization and the World mourning for those of their faith under the Nazi heel.

The day coincided with the eve of the launching of Chanuko, Jewish Festival of the Lights, the celebration of which begins tonight

Judge Louis E. Levinthal, president of the Zionist Organization of America, commenting upon the Chanuko Festival, said, in part:

"Today the entire world faces the same challenge as that which was met by a small group of Maccabeans more than 2000 years ago against overwhelming odds to rescue their nation from oppression."

George Sees Defeat for Plan To Clip Income

The answer of Congress to President Roosevelt's interest in broadening the $25,000 net salary limitation to cover investment income, will be an emphatic "No," Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia predicted last night.

George, chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, said the new Congress convening next month is more likely to pass legislation repealing the President's executive order than to broaden it.

President Roosevelt had stated at his press conference Tuesday that he would be interested in seeing what Congress does with his recommendation that a ceiling, after taxes, be placed upon incomes from investments as well as salaries. He said he had heard there were complaints that excluding investment income is unfair.

Senator Gerry (Democrat) of Rhode Island, a member of the Finance Committee, said Congress already has given its answer on the President's proposal to put a ceiling on the amount of money an individual may retain from investments.

This was done, he said, when the last revenue bill was pending before the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee.

And Senator Davis (Republican) of Pennsylvania, also a Finance Committeeman, said he believed "it is all wrong for the executive branch to put ceilings on income." That is a subject on which Congress alone has jurisdiction, Davis said.

George said his committee undoubtedly will look into the legality of the President's order, as promulgated by Economic Director James F. Byrnes, prohibiting the payment by any company or the receipt by any individual of a gross yearly salary of more than $67,200. This is calculated to leave the individual only $25,000, after payment of taxes.

George said Congress never intended that a flat, inflexible limitation be placed upon net incomes of individuals; that "a rule of reason" should be applied, and consideration be given to circumstances in each case.

"I think Congress," he said, "will keep the thought in mind that while a relatively few American taxpayers will realize an income which by any yardstick can be regarded as excessive, nevertheless there are millions of our people with ambition, energy and courage, who hope to become large income earners and who hope to maintain the free American economy which we have known throughout our history.

"This freedom has been limited only by such taxes, on a basis of ability to pay, as may be necessary to impose from time to time to meet obligations of the Government."

Camden to Launch 3d Aircraft Carrier In 15 Weeks

Camden, N. J., Dec. 2 (AP).—The New York Shipbuilding Corp. will launch its third aircraft carrier in 15 weeks here Sunday, the day before the Pearl Harbor anniversary, the Fourth Naval District announced today.

The ship will be christened the Belleau Wood in honor of Marines who fought in the Belleau Wood battle of the first World War.

Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of Lieutenant General Holcomb, Marine Corps commandant, will act as sponsor.

The corporation launched the carrier Independence on August 22 and the carrier Princeton on November 9 at its Delaware River yards here.

Berle to Discuss War, Postwar Finances

Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of War, will discuss financial implications of the Atlantic Charter in a free lecture at the Agriculture Auditorium at 6 p. m. tomorrow.

Sponsored by the Department of Agriculture graduate school, this will be the fifth in a series of talks on "War and Postwar Financial Problems." A seminar meeting for further discussion on the topic, open to qualified students regularly enrolled in the course, will follow the lecture.

130,000,000 AMERICANS . . . WITH

One Thought—One Purpose—VICTORY!

JUST one year ago, come Monday, December 7th, they asked for it at Pearl Harbor. And today, just twelve months later, we're dishing it out!

Yes, this "soft, luxury-loving" nation of ours, disdained by the forces of deceit, brutality and oppression, has become a people aroused to the defense of its liberty. Devoted to the ways of peace, we have turned with one thought and one purpose to the grim designs of war.

Men and women, young and old, in our factories, our farms and our homes have answered the call. For twelve months, we have tightened our belts without complaint, asking only to be shown the way. We have learned to do without, and to get along with less. We buy War Bonds. We ration our food, our gasoline, our tires. We scour our homes for rubber, savé fat for powder, turn in scrap for guns. We volunteer for Civilian Defense jobs, for USO service, for the Red Cross, for War Chest drives, for a hundred and one causes allied with war.

And meanwhile, we have worked. Our fighting forces are in the field today, carrying the war to the enemy, because the men and women of American industry have achieved an undreamed-of miracle of production. In twelve short months, we have delivered to our heroic soldiers and sailors the planes, tanks, guns and ships to challenge foes who have had a decade of preparation.

As the anniversary of the infamous day rolls past, the men and women of Philco who have had a part in this vast program of preparation, pause only to reflect on what America's strength and unity of purpose can achieve. We are ready now for any sacrifice—to work and to fight for Victory! Not as slaves under the dictator's lash, not with minds poisoned by false prophets, but as a nation united in freedom, eager and willing to work together for the common goal.

Rep. Sumners Assails Aides Of New Deal

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The veteran Representative Sumners (Democrat) of Texas lambasted policies of Government agencies in the House yesterday in a sharply worded speech that revived Capitol Hill speculation on the possibility of an open break in Democratic legislative ranks.

He leveled his attack at a group of New Deal administrators whom he characterized as "this bunch of people who don't know anything about the American Government and care less."

Members of this group, he said, "do not much more than get into this country before they are trying to tell us how to run this Government."

Interrupted by Applause

The Texan was interrupted several times by applause in which both Republican and Democratic members joined, and at one point Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia, who a few days ago warned the House that the new Congress would find "coalescence" of Republicans and Democrats, broke in to ask:

"Can the gentleman agree with me in the observation that the people of this country, North, East, South and West have reached the point where they are willing to break with tradition and no longer remain bound to any sort of an organization being used as an instrument for its undoing, that the people of my and your section of the country are suffering indignities, hardships and humiliations that were not excelled in the days of the carpet bag rule?"

"The people do not like this trend . . . that is putting more and more Federal employes on the job of ordering them around," Sumners declared. "They are getting pretty tired of being ordered around."

"The people are awakening from being doped by borrowed money," Sumners said.

Sumners told the House that because Office of Price Administration price ceilings were too low, one dairy in his district went out of business while another shipped its cows to another dairy whose price ceiling was higher. Because farm hands migrated to war industries, he stated, three dairy herds in one county in his district were sold in a single day.

"If we had any desire to make it impossible for the farmers of America to produce the crops we require, we could not have pursued a better program," he said, warning that without a change in policies "people are going hungry."

Dean Daggett to Speak At Rutgers' Dinner

Several hundred Rutgers University alumni in the Washington area are expected to attend a dinner meeting at the New Colonial Hotel at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow to hear Dean Parker H. Daggett of the college of engineering speak on "Rutgers in the War."

Two other university officials, Stanley R. March, alumni secretary, and Earl Schenck Miers, editor of the Rutgers Univeristy Press and Alumni Monthly magazine, also will address the group. Arrangements are being made by Lieut. Col. George W. Hervey and Lieut. Christian A. Strandboe.

How Point-and-Coupon System for Meat Rationing Probably Will Work

By the Associated Press

You'll have to learn how to juggle a new kind of money soon to put meat on the table.

Shortly after New Year's everyone will get war ration book No. 2. No. 1, the sugar book, also is being used for coffee. Book No. 2 will contain 192 coupons of different colors, denominations and lettering, the OPA explained yesterday.

These coupons are the coin of the new money system which Americans will have to master. Instead of pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters and halves, you'll have a red A-1 coupon, a red A-2 coupon, a red A-5 coupon, a red A-8 coupon, a red B-1 coupon, and so on through the whole alphabet (except I and O), and then all over again for the blue coupons in the same book.

When meat rationing starts, OPA will assign certain letters for use first month or series of weeks—perhaps red A, B and C for February—and then will put out a price list, in points, on various kinds of meat—maybe something like this:

Cut.	Points per Pound.
Hamburger	1
Porterhouse	8
Lamb chops	3
Round steak	4
Bacon	5

Officials haven't yet settled the point values to be assigned different kinds of meat. The points represent the figures on the coupons. An A-1 or an S-1 is good for one point, a B-5 or a T-5 five points and so on. Two C-2's can be used for a 4-point purchase.

You budget your points just like your money. You might have a ration of 48 meat points for February and spend all your coupons on porterhouse. If your taste runs to hamburger, you get more of it for your coupons.

The Government has printed 160 million of these new "ration money" books. While meat is expected to be the first commodity rationed with it, other things may be allotted with the same book.

For instance, all the red coupons could be used for meat, leaving all the blue coupons for something else.

In some cases OPA might juggle the points from month to month to influence the public to choose more plentiful things by making those items "cheap" in points. In the case of meat, for instance, steaks might be made very "expensive" in points to get people to eat more plentiful roasts.

P. S. You'll still have to pay real money, of course, as well as coupons.

Henderson Offers Apology to Those Offended by Talk

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Price Administrator Leon Henderson offered his apologies yesterday "to all honest opponents" of mileage rationing, who misinterpreted his radio remarks last Thursday to mean that all opponents of mileage rationing "were ignorant or traitorous."

Apparently due to a kick-back from opponents in Congress on business who may have felt they were unfairly criticized, Henderson hastened to say that his remarks were not directed at them, but certain organized groups misleading the American people.

His statement said:

"The facts are these: In my radio talk last Thursday, I said a Government survey showed certain organized groups were misleading the American people. All through the broadcast my remarks were directed at this group, and not toward loyal individuals and members of Congress. A reading of the radio script will satisfy anybody as to this. Moreover, I had knowledge that Nazi propaganda, broadcast over short wave, by a traitorous American, had sought to influence resistance to rationing.

"I offer the above as explanation, and offer my apologies to any and all I have offended."

PUT A WAR SAVINGS STAMP ON EVERY CHRISTMAS CARD YOU SEND

This Christmas, Americans will send their families and friends
More than one billion Christmas cards.

A ten-cent War Savings Stamp on each of these cards
Will fill 20 million War Stamp Books, and start a million more!
Enough to put more than 100 million dollars in the U.S. Treasury!
Enough to buy 500 long-range bombers!
Enough to buy 2,500 fast fighter planes!
Enough to buy 1,000 sixty-ton tanks!
Enough to buy 3 heavy cruisers!

In this year of war, there is only one thought in our minds,
Only one hope in our hearts . . .
To win the Victory that will bring our boys home to us,
And make possible, once again,
"Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men."

So, in this year of war
Let's add a Victory note
To our customary Christmas greetings . . .
Let's put a War Savings Stamp on every card we send!
On every Christmas card to our families and friends;
On every Christmas message we've planned to send to customers;
On every Christmas card and letter we address
To every Soldier, Sailor, and Marine!

Yes, this year, let's all join in
And make a Christmas Card Crusade for Freedom!
For every War Savings Stamp we buy and send
Will help bring Victory nearer . . . will help create
A vast reserve of buying power which,
Unleashed by Peace, will bring prosperity and jobs
For all our boys when they come home.

A SUGGESTION FROM CALVERT

HOW YOU CAN JOIN IN . . . AND HELP TO WIN THIS CHRISTMAS CARD CRUSADE FOR FREEDOM!

Paste the Stamp directly on the greeting card. It may then be cut out or steamed off and placed in a War Stamp Book. Do not paste on outside of the envelope.

Stationery and drug stores can help by selling War Stamps at greeting card counters and displaying reprints of this message (free on request without our name).

Business organizations can help by putting a War Stamp on every greeting card they send to employees, customers, business associates and acquaintances.

Department stores can aid by displaying this message in advertisements over their own names; and by selling War Stamps at greeting card counters.

Factories, schools and theatres can help by displaying this message (reprints free on request without our name) on bulletin boards, in their lobbies, and corridors.

Organizations or companies desiring reprints of this message suitable for their own signature are invited to communicate with Calvert Distillers Corp., 1500 Chrysler Building, New York, N.Y.

Tuesday's Blackout

If the blackout Tuesday night was "spotty," it was spotty not so much because of the failure of private individuals to screen their lighting promptly as because of the delay in extinguishing public lighting. Some householders, it is true, were slow to black out. But for 9 of the 25 minutes the test lasted, likely targets in the downtown area were clearly outlined by street lights. This, it seems to us, was a pretty poor showing and illustrated the need for greater attention by civilian defense officials to the public lighting system. At present, policemen are charged with turning off street lights. But the air-raid warden service takes care of this in other cities and we see no reason why the recommendation of defense officials that local wardens extinguish Washington's street lights should not be accepted. Certainly, this would be in line with giving wardens the measure of responsibility and authority which should be theirs as civilian guardians during an alert.

Tuesday's blackout came entirely by surprise and for that reason was perhaps the most effective test to date of the District's preparedness. It is a fact, however, that needless irritation could have been avoided, without impairing the usefulness of the alert, had the test been made later in the evening. As it was, many persons were kept from getting to social and business appointments on time, as, for instance, the symphony concert at Constitution Hall. In a real emergency, of course, this would not matter. But it does matter when there is no better an explanation for the timing of an alert than the whim of responsible officials.

"Quiz-Dizzy"

The WPB and OPA now know, if they did not know before, that the American people can be pushed just so far and no farther without raising an almighty holler. Because the holler is unmistakable, and so is the reason for it. Anybody who has gotten around the country in the last six months has been perfectly well aware that private resentment over Government questionnaires has been building up like a volcano getting ready to blow its top. All that was needed, in fact, for the ultimate explosion and outpouring of bitter complaints was an unusually potent catalyst. This, of course, has now been provided by the devastating indictment of Federal red tape by witnesses appearing before the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures. And we dare say there is not a hamlet in the entire country that will not warmly second the proposed investigation of Government questionnaires, reports and "paper-work" requirements.

The fact is, as Senator Vandenberg aptly points out, the Nation is "quiz-dizzy." It has been made so by too many Government demands for too much information. As a result, business concerns and private citizens alike have been made to expend time, energy and money to no really essential purpose. This is proved in the first instance by the testimony presented to the joint committee on Tuesday, and, doubtless, further proof of a similar nature will be forthcoming at the committee hearing scheduled for today. But the even more important thing is that such testimony, broadcast throughout the land, confirms the private experience of millions of Americans who have labored with countless forms and applications without griping about them publicly. It, therefore, strengthens the common conviction—as why shouldn't it?—that the war effort is being seriously hampered by Washington's insistence on inquiries that are unnecessarily detailed and frequently repetitive, and that consequently contribute to a persistent snowballing of bureaucratic process.

By this time it is painfully evident, of course, that the burden of public resentment is directly traceable to inept handling of the administrative end of rationing. Federal officials are still tyros at the business of planning how best to restrict civilian consumption. And because they are tyros, they make the mistake of believing that the surest way to guarantee equitable rationing is to issue a mass of rules and regulations that will cover every business concern and private individual in every conceivable circumstance. Such reasoning is fallacious, and the proof of its lies in the existing confusion and waste that have made the public righteously indignant. As a Nation we have somewhat of a reputation abroad for being able to distinguish the important from the unimportant, to reduce any particular job to its simplest essentials and then to do the job well in a hurry. It is a reputation, however, that is badly in need of reaffirmation if there is to be effective administration of the war effort on the home front. For this reason, therefore, it is imperative not only that there be an investigation of Government questionnaires but also that the investigation be concentrated on the intelligent simplification of rationing procedure.

Way Of The Censor

If the price of liberty is eternal vigilance, we may be grateful for the vigilance of the investigation committees of Congress. The new inquiry scheduled for next week by the Senate Judiciary Committee into the Office of Censorship is especially to be welcomed. For, if a tithe of the current charges are true, war necessity has become the cover for a noxious censorship. The charges in connection with the postal censorship already have resulted in the recall by the committee of a censorship bill authorizing censorship of all communications between the United States and its territories and possessions, including Alaska. Governor Gruening's disclosures of high-handed abuses in the censorship on communications between Alaska and the United States provoked the recall. But the grumbling over the postal censorship is merely one aspect of a general complaint coming from other parties, including the correspondents in this country for British newspapers. What is resented is the blanket authorization to the operating censors to delete matter according to a yardstick which in the final analysis is their own subjective judgment.

Such a definition of the authorization of the Office of Censorship would, doubtless, meet with objection in Mr. Price's office. But no other conclusion is possible from the rulings emanating from that organization. News and comment for transmission must not contain military or other information which would give aid or comfort to our enemies. Clearly, since this war is almost as much psychological as military, the censor is left with considerable discretion. Consider, for example, the poll-tax filibuster in the Senate. Goebbels doubtless cited this debate as evidence both of disunity in the Senate and of an imperfect democracy in America. Thus, within the general framework of the censor's terms of reference, the reporting of this debate called for particular watchfulness in the censor's offices. And it got it. The blue pencil seems to have been used without much restraint on the dispatches which were filed in this country to foreign newspapers. The fact is, however, that any debate these days in the Senate or elsewhere could be adduced as showing disunity, and the reporting of it abroad, therefore, might be deemed helpful to our enemies. What is the poor censor to do? If he follows the usual newspaper motto, he will leave out when in doubt, and that is said to have become the operating rule of censorship.

Just as arbitrary is the censorship of matter which in the censor's view might display disunity among the Allies. It is said that news and comment on criticisms of Britain, even when reproduced from American newspapers, are withheld. Raymond Clapper has said that references in his column to British policy in India have been deleted from dispatches abroad. Of course, our enemies would capitalize the slightest sign of dissension among the Allies and elevate any frank talk such as always occurs between the English-speaking people into evidence of disunity. They may even get aid and comfort from it. But this kind of censorship provokes the suspicion that the authorities in Washington are disinclined to let the British know in time of our common war of the existence of American criticism of British policy. Even the individual censor might be persuaded to use the blue pencil on his own assumption that such criticism is injurious to the morale of the home side.

The problem is, of course, as complicated as the weapons of modern warfare. It is precisely on a par with the problem of giving out information for home consumption. Here, as we have stated the problem before, the effort must be made to keep a balance between over-informing the enemy and under-informing our own people. In the field of information there has lately been a greater recognition of the danger residing in under-informing the American people. We would commend to the Office of Censorship the same recognition in respect of our Allies. Knowledge of American criticism of British policy will get to the British people in one way or another and, doubtless, will be puffed up out of all proportion to its importance by verbal repetition. In fact, the censor's acts themselves exaggerate the importance of the banned comments in people's minds. This puts an unnecessary strain on transatlantic friendship, and if the comments are not known till the war is over the result might well be a boomerang. For proof of the danger of under-information, the Darlan case is in point. Censorship of British comment on dispatches filed in Britain to America has led to the feeling that the condemnation of our policy in Britain must be pretty widespread.

Finally, as little discretion as possible should be left to individual censors and the constant quest at the Office of Censorship should be to sharpen rules and regulations in the light of experience. It is not so much the stringency as the vagary of our censorship that makes for the difficulty of the correspondent for newspapers abroad. That applies to our postal censorship as well. The American people appreciate the care that must be taken to wage the war on all fronts, but they are jealous of the liberties for which they are fighting and any high-handedness with them which cannot be justified on grounds of military necessity is bound to generate resentment.

Women's Wages

Equal pay for equal work has long been a battle cry among the women of America. It makes a strong appeal to the sense of fair play. Accordingly the ruling of the WLB authorizing employers to raise the wages of women employes to equality with those of men doing comparable work is to be welcomed. However, the enunciation of the principle of equal pay will not prevent disputes arising when attempts are made to apply the principle.

For instance, the aluminum workers at one of the Pennsylvania Alcoa plants threaten to strike because of a controversy over women's pay. They demand that the wages of women now receiving 72 cents per hour shall be raised to 87 cents, allegedly the rate paid men for the same work. We may be sure the union members are not fired by a crusading desire to fight for the rights of women. What they fear—and rightly—is that women will displace men at lower wages, become institutionalized and stay on when the war is a thing of the past.

It might seem that, with the WLB ruling as a guide, no future controversy would arise as to the proper scale of remuneration. But it is often difficult to compare the work of men and women. In the present instance, the union maintains that the women are doing men's work; the company says flatly that they are doing work never performed by men. In view of the simplification of industrial processes made necessary by the wartime shortage of skilled men, it is doubtless true that a large proportion of the tasks performed by women in heavy war industry are not strictly comparable with the work done by the men replaced. In the Alcoa case, we have no information as to the nature of the difference, if any, in the character of the work done by women substitutes. If the management's contention should be substantiated, however, raising the women's wages to the extent demanded by the union would result in raising wage costs above the level fixed by the rate schedules for men. It would mean not equality for women but preferment—and higher costs for war equipment.

Care must be taken, therefore, to prevent an excellent principle from being applied improperly. Stability and security of employment for women will be much greater if their wages are neither more nor less than their services are worth by comparison with men engaged in the same or similar work. Overpay will lead to speedy dismissal when men once more are free to apply for jobs. Underpay is unjust and encourages the hiring of women when competent men are available for essential war jobs.

Banks And The War

Some time ago there was talk of trying to finance the war chiefly by taxation and borrowing of the people's savings. There was to be only residual reliance upon the banks. The fact remains that the banks are carrying the lion's share of the burden of war financing. Moreover, from present indications they are going to be called upon to carry an increasingly heavy load. Accordingly the banks have been encouraged by all the banking agencies of Government to increase their investments. A joint statement to that effect was issued last week by the Federal Reserve Board, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks. The banks were advised that they would not be criticized for buying Government securities even if such purchases forced them to borrow temporarily from the Reserve Banks or to sell Treasury bills to the Reserve Banks. It was also suggested that the banks permit individual subscribers to Government issues to borrow to pay for them, providing the loans are repaid within six months.

With Government borrowing on an astronomical scale inevitable for the duration of the war, it is imperative to utilize the resources of the banking system to the utmost in placement of new Government issues. The more widely those issues are distributed among the banks, small as well as large institutions, the better it will be for the country and the banks themselves. Peacetime tests of sound banking practices and customary limitations imposed upon expansion of lending cease to be valid when war comes. That is the gist of the message which Government officials are conveying to the banks. They are saying in effect: "Buy Government securities to the limit without fear of harassment from bank examiners or criticism from the Federal Reserve authorities and the FDIC.

TOWARD DAWN

Under the gloom of night
Earth spins toward dawn. (O deep
The promise of that light
To those asleep!)

Stand winter branches bare?
They hold the joy that rings
In sunny April air
When the thrush sings.

And I who know, who know
Even in joy's eclipse
Its coming, still shall go,
Song on my lips,

As one borne on far tides
(But buoyed by knowledge stronger Than all the darkness hides)
Singing yet longer.

Guadalcanal

The recent publication of a National Geographic Society communication in the papers giving the etymology of Guadalcanal seems to have been the signal for dozens of etymologists by avocation to flood the press with their own private derivations of this name. A careful tabulation of these shows that about 98 per cent are totally impossible and another 1 per cent only partially correct. The only contribution they make is to show how dangerous it is for amateurs without the proper linguistic equipment and training to play around with the science of etymology; if the well-established phonetic laws are not properly adhered to the result can only be the chaos into which most of these contributors have fallen.

The etymology of Guadalcanal given out by the National Geographic Society is the correct one. The first element is "wadi," meaning "stream bed, valley, channel," while the second is "al-qanal," meaning "canal" or "channel." The word "qanal" was borrowed by the Arabs in Spain from the Spanish word "canal" and has become thoroughly incorporated into the Arabic language. It is in common use today, and the Suez Canal is currently called "Qanal as-Suways," or "the Canal of Suez." As for the Wadi al-Khanat theory, the less said the better. Suffice it to mention that "khan" means a warehouse or caravanserai, and nothing else. It has nothing to do with Reader A. N.'s "hanat" (by which I suppose he means "hanut"), signifying a shop or booth. "Khan" is of Persian origin, whereas "hanut" is an Aramaic loan-word in Arabic.

Guadalcanar as a variant of Guadalcanal can be perfectly well explained from Spanish phonetic laws without having recourse to Melanesian or Japanese mispronunciation. It is nothing more than a case of dissimulation, or an avoidance of the repetition of two identical consonants in close proximity to each other. There are many examples of this in English, as for example "marble," from Latin "marmor," where the second "r" has been changed to "l" whereas the French "marbre," from the same Latin original, has retained the original "r".

Extending Home Hospitality

Due to the demand exceeding the supply, several misconceptions have arisen in Washington concerning home hospitality for servicemen rendered by the service organizations in Washington and the War Hospitality Committee. Since March, 1942, Mrs. Martin Vogel has served as chairman of the Home Hospitality Committee, a subcommittee of the War Hospitality Committee, Civilian Mobilization Division. With the aid of a secretary paid by Mrs. Vogel, the committee has registered over 1000 potential hosts, provided hospitality for 5000 servicemen, and established excellent liaison relations with servicemen's clubs and military authorities. The committee's work has developed to such large proportions that over a month ago, the War Hospitality Committee made provisions to expand the committee's activities and to relieve Mrs. Vogel of the tremendous work involved by including:

Mr. Coleman Jennings, 1910 Twentieth-fourth Street Northwest, Decatur 5973, representing the churches.

Mr. Charles H. Cunningham, 1101 M Street Northwest, Metropolitan 2284, representing the zone organizations of the Civilian Mobilization Division.

Mrs. Alice C. Hunter, 72 R Street Northwest, North 2585, president of the Federation of Parents and Teachers.

Maj. Charles S. Coulter, U. S. A. (Retired), 700 Tenth Street Northwest, National 8603, director of welfare, Masonic Service Association, representing the fraternal organizations.

Mrs. Martin Vogel, 2800 Woodland Drive, Adams 1404, representing city-wide Home Hospitality Committee.

Mr. Donald Murray, 1407 L Street Northwest, District 3254, United Federal Workers of America, representing labor.

Any person interested in extending home hospitality to servicemen may place their name with any of the above persons.

There are two areas which supply servicemen to the above central headquarters, namely, the military installations and the servicemen's clubs. Mrs. Vogel's experience in the past 10 months has demonstrated that it takes from two days to a week to arrange dinner parties when the men are invited from a military station; the directors of service clubs have discovered that home hospitality is their greatest worry. The men visiting the clubs are on leave and are not always interested in going to homes. Many times servicemen have agreed to accept an invitation, and then do not appear at the home.

Both the club directors and Mrs. Vogel have demonstrated infinite patience with the many weird daily requests for servicemen that range from: "Please furnish us six tall soldiers of ——— faith for six tall girls;" or a hostess calling at 4 p. m. requesting 24 officers for a cocktail party at 6 p. m.; or the young girl who wanted an attractive officer to escort her to a dance.

To insure the complete dissemination of the committee's activities, posters are being prepared which will be placed in every camp and service club within a 200-mile radius of Washington. A home hospitality conference of club directors, committee members, and church vestrymen was held at which the entire home hospitality service was thoroughly discussed by the conferees.

The public must bear in mind that it is not possible to supply servicemen to all persons who would like to entertain them. Let us hope that all the world's problems are of this nature—there are more giving than there are to receive.

L. JOSEPH CAHN,
Executive Secretary,
War Hospitality Committee.

Complaints About Rations

Don't misunderstand me: none of us can ever learn too much about planning meals with sufficient nutritive value to provide all the necessary food elements. We all welcome new recipes and ways to provide variety in meal planning.

What I really resent is all the advice about how to "stretch" rationed foods, when the rationed amounts are ample for our needs. We are now, and probably will be throughout the war, the best fed Nation in the world. We don't know what hunger means. Yet in spite of this, every time I turn on my radio some sweet-voiced woman commentator begins telling me how to "stretch" 5 pounds of fresh meat, all the liver, fish, poultry, eggs and bacon I can buy, over a one-week period for two people. Then, nine times out of ten, before she has finished she will tell me butter on my biscuits will be spread a little thin; I won't have any watermelon or bleached celery. Of course, she tries to comfort me by saying that the experts by that time will have figured out some way to "get by" on such rations. The whole terrible prospect is explained in a tone that says "We ain't seen nothing yet!" Well, she's right. We ain't seen nothing, and probably never will.

What kind of a nation of women are we, that we need all this? What means more to us, catering to our appetites or winning this war? If we really need reassurance it's simple enough to get it. Let us read of people who know what not only hunger, but starvation, means. Don't read about the British, even if they don't have bacon, eggs or oranges. They are getting by. Read "This Is Starvation!" in the December issue of Readers Digest and see what's happening in Greece, where it is estimated that more than one-fifth of the population has died since the Nazis came. It cannot be accurately estimated because the families secretly bury their dead in order to save their bread cards to prolong the agonizing lives of the rest of the family. Learn of Athens, where 85 per cent of the population of millions spends all its time at the canteens waiting for food and where the death rate runs to 500 a day.

Knowing these things, if we can even once say, "I just can't get along on my sugar allotment," or "I get a headache when I have to do without my morning coffee;" if we can speak of "stretching" ample supplies of the few rationed foods while having a goodly amount of the real essentials; if we can do this without seeing the innocent faces of all starving children in the world rise up to accuse us, then we are not worth the fight that is being fought in our names.

The Post Impressionist

Ambrose Bierce Mysterious Olympian

It may seem strange that I should be writing of Ambrose Bierce, for there must still be many persons in Washington who knew and remember him. But I should hate to see this miserable year 1942 pass without some recognition of his centenary, which so far I have seen no mention of.

It was in 1924 that I became a Bierce enthusiast (one result of Prof. Frank Luther Mott's course in American literature at Iowa City), and little did I suspect then that I should ever traverse any of Bierce's stamping grounds. Not that I have ever gone deliberately on a Bierce hunt. To do that I should have to go to San Francisco, London, and finally to Mexico, as well as Washington. Rather, I have been on his trail in a more casual way.

When I came to work in the Smithsonian Institution in 1931 we had there a veteran illustrator-artist, DeLancey Gill by name, who had been so long in the employ of this great reservoir of science as to take on an omniscience quite appalling to the newcomer. His "office," far up in the southeast attic of the old National Museum, was itself a veritable museum, containing as it did the motley possessions of the somewhat eccentric Gill that had been accumulating since the time of Secretary Langley. My first visit to this storehouse of dust and memorabilia was something of an experience. In the middle of the studio was a revolving bookcase filled with photographs, pamphlets, prints, drawings and books. As I waited for DeLancey to do some lettering for me, being entertained meanwhile by some juicy anecdote of his, my eyes fell on a title: "Tales of Soldiers and Civilians."

"Where did you get this?" I exclaimed, holding the book up.

"Oh," said DeLancey, "I've had that a long time. You see, Bierce and I were pretty good friends."

He then proceeded to tell me many things about Ambrose Bierce that now I wish I could remember. Be it said that those two or three firsts of Ambrose Bierce, incribed by their author to my friend Delancy Gill, did nothing to enhance my observation of the Tenth Commandment. Not many years later DeLancey Gill was retired from the Government service, and he moved out and turned his hot old attic over to his successor. Last year when I read that he had died in Alexandria I did not think of him as the man who had painted all those pictures (some of them now hanging in the Cosmos Club and one watercolor in my living room), or as the man who had so faithfully illustrated those innumerable ethnological reports, but as the man I knew who was a friend to Ambrose Bierce. I have never learned what became of his priceless volumes.

Many may recall that 1929 was the big Bierce year. In that year four biographies of him were published—one by C. Hartley Grattan, entitled "Bitter Bierce;" another by Carey McWilliams; one by Bierce's publisher, Walter Neale, and still another by Adolphe de Castro (Rabbi Danzier), over whose head Bierce once had the pleasure of breaking a cane. The best and most illuminating of these were the McWilliams and Grattan works, and their final judgments of Ambrose Bierce are worth repeating. "Whatever judgment may be passed on his work," wrote Mr. McWilliams, "it does not affect the important fact that Bierce was one of the most provocative figures of his generation . . . To some of us whose early enthusiasm for his work has somewhat waned, every light that has been thrown upon the facts of his life has brought a glowing certainty that this man was one of the immortals and that around his name has grown up a tradition that we will not willingly relinquish."

But Bierce, I suppose, was something of an aberration in American letters, and not everything he wrote deserves to live. For that reason some critics have relegated him to that boundless purgatory inhabited by "minor writers." It sometimes happens, however, that by virtue of the prayers of the faithful and the quirks of fortuity a doomed one is allowed to pass from this adumbral limbo to his greater reward, and Ambrose Bierce, I'd say, has at least one foot in heaven. It is pretty much as it was when he was alive and he himself wrote, astutely:

My! how my fame rings out in every zone—
A thousand critics shouting: "He's unknown!"

Bierce lived in Washington off and on several years preceding his mysterious disappearance late in 1913. For a while he lived at 603 Fifteenth Street. Williams tells how he spent his eventless latter days. He would walk down to the Army and Navy Club for his mail, back to his office at the New York American, to the club for lunch, have a few friends in at night to play anagrams, a few others to the Sunday morning breakfasts in his apartment (invitations to which were much prized)—a peaceful and idle life indeed for this old veteran of Chickamauga who was used to fighting, especially with his lively tongue and pen. All his fights were now behind him, all except that one last fight that he feared. But anything was better, he felt, than growing old and falling down the cellar stairs and breaking your neck, even wandering away never to be heard of again.

But I have a feeling that Ambrose Bierce will always be heard of again. Only the other day a man read, on my recommendation, Bierce's stories "The Man and the Snake" and "The Monk and the Hangman's Daughter," and I feel that has helped a little in celebrating the hundredth birthday of the greatest satirist of American literature.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

"The Realists"

WE HAVE been hearing lately from our friends "the realists," and the burden of this talk is that they are shrewder judges of the realities of the war than Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill combined. They profess to be giving utterance to the unspoken fears of unnamed but exceedingly high American military commanders that the President and the Prime Minister, who have just brought off the greatest strategical success of the war, are sentimentalists who do not know what they are doing in dealing provisionally with the relations between France and the United Nations.

LIPPMANN

The inspiration of this whole pother might be worth tracing down. For we may rest assured that even if the Army held such views, our commanders are men who would not dream of stooping to the insubordination of inciting propaganda to undermine the declared foreign policy of their commander-in-chief. And we can be equally certain that the suggestion now being bruited about by these "realists" is false when they suggest that in relation to French affairs the President and the Prime Minister are or have been working at cross-purposes. There is as little foundation for this story as there was for so many other similar stories which they have vouched for: that Churchill and Stalin quarreled last summer about the "second front": that no agreement on high strategy was reached by Stalin, Churchill and Roosevelt; that there is an unresolved conflict among them as to the order of business in dealing with our enemies in Europe and Asia. The same realists professing to have innermost inside information available to no one else have promoted all these stories of division and discord among the Allies.

THE PROCESS by which these rumors are fabricated is evident enough to any experienced and reasonably well-informed newspaper man. It may be useful to explain the process to newspaper readers who, being busy with their own affairs, can only be bewildered and dismayed by the rumor-mongering.

In Britain and America, and no doubt in Russia and China, too, if we knew enough about their internal affairs, there are differing views among the services and among diplomats on many strategical and even tactical questions. These views are often matters of deep conviction and, therefore, the subjects of ardent controversy. There are also frequent differences of view among the Allies, though oftener than not these national differences arise from the fact that in one country certain professionals have influence and in another country certain other professionals. Thus anyone who talks as if the differences of opinion are due to an alignment of "American experts" against "British experts," or of "Anglo-American experts" against "Russian experts," or of "the State Department" against the "Foreign Office," is talking fiction and not reality.

THE ARGUMENT over these differences always precedes a great decision like that which is now being carried out in Russia and North Africa. In so far as these arguments are reported at all, the question for the reporter is whether he will dramatize the argument until it sounds like a quarrel which is about to disrupt the United Nations, or will hold it in perspective by remembering that the men of the highest responsibility, Roosevelt and Churchill, and Stalin, must resolve their differences because they would be utterly lost if they did not. This is the controlling fact which ruins so many exciting stories that are got up by the pseudo-realistic inside dopesters of discord and division.

Common sense is enough to make us realize that in a war which is waged on so many fronts by so many allies with such complicated weapons it would be absurd to suppose that everyone concerned is automatically inspired at the same moment with the same exact plan of campaign. Agreement on what to do and when to do it and how to do it must inevitably be reached through the stages of exploration, investigation, negotiation and final decision, and it is a phoney realism to treat the smoke from these arguments as evidence of great fires within the edifice of the coalition.

THESE "realists" are for the moment trying to teach Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill the facts of life about France and the politics of North Africa and to undermine the declaration of policy made by the President on November 17. It will be found, if it were worth while to examine the record, that men who boast about their "realism" are like women who boast about their virtue. It was these realists who told us on expert authority that Petain was right when he decided in 1940 that Germany had won the war, and that Britain was incapable of becoming a great air power, and that Germany was the supreme and invincible air power of Europe, and that the German panzers would go through Russia like a knife through cheese, and that the British had no generals and no armies capable of dealing with Rommel, and that the Germans were coming down through the Caucasus and Turkey to meet the Japanese who were coming through India.

Scratch these pseudo-realists and what you find are defeatists. That is why they have always been so much attracted by Marshal Petain and his collaborators, why they never cease to snap at the heels of Roosevelt, Churchill, and Stalin, and De Gaulle and all those who, because they have the will to shape reality, evoke those invincible energies in men which never figure in the calculations of the armchair realists.

THEY ARE the worst of all guides in the conduct of war because, being at bottom defeatists, the armchair realists are quite incapable of understanding and of dealing with the decisively important imponderable elements. Anyone can see that a plane without gas will not fly and that a gun without powder will not shoot, and it ought to be no less easy to see that a nation which is prostrate and divided like France can never live again unless it recovers its soul through the example of those Frenchmen who never betrayed it. To describe this elementary truth as sentimentalism or ideology or doctrinaire prejudice is to exhibit an utter incomprehension of human history, and of the part which the heroic spirit and the heroic example plays in the life of nations. It is to imagine that any little calculator of the expediency of the moment would have done as well or better than Washington at Valley Forge or Lincoln before Gettysburg.

No one is a genuine realist who forgets or ignores the will of man, and least of all in the awful ordeal of war when men face the ultimate issues of life and death. The realism of Petain ended the other day in the tragic suicide of the demoralized and cornered navy of France. Let us not be deceived, then, by the little realists into thinking that anything durable can be built upon the foundations of that disaster, or that an expedient is anything more than an expedient to be administered lucidly, generously, but firmly and with confident self-respect.

ABOVE all, when we pass the ammunition, let us not deny the Lord. Let us not in the name of realism deny the realities, and fall into the heresy of believing that our morality is incompatible with our practical necessities. It is not. There is no such horrid dilemma, and the event will show that there is none.

U. S. Wings Flap Louder

Plane Output Doubled

The United States more than doubled its warplane production during the first year of war and since Pearl Harbor American fliers have shot down five Axis planes for every U. S. plane lost, the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America reported last night.

Reviewing the miracle of aircraft production during the past year, the chamber listed this record of achievement:

1. More planes have been produced in one year than were turned out by the industry in all the 23 years following the First World War.

2. Production tonnage has increased nearly 300 per cent.

3. Production of engines has jumped 240 per cent in terms of horsepower.

4. The number of women employed in the industry has jumped from 4300 to about 115,000—an increase of 2575 per cent

6. The value of planes sent to various war fronts was 4¼ billion dollars—compared with 1¾ billion dollars during the last year of peace.

Equally amazing is the ratio of victories achieved by American fliers. The chamber reported they had increased their ratio over Axis planes from 2 to 1 last February to 14 to 1 at present. In other words, they are shooting down 14 enemy planes for every one lost, making the average ratio for the first year of war 5 to 1.

The percentage was given a tremendous boost at Guadalcanal where American fliers knocked out 42 Jap planes in one day without suffering a loss. On another occasion, the report said, a United States naval task force destroyed 65 of an armada of 80 Jap dive bombers and torpedo-carriers.

Commenting on the production phase, Robert P. Newton, senior vice president of the A. C. C. A., said the "ingenuity and cooperation within the aircraft industry and other industries, such as the automobile," have helped accomplish the great strides in production.

"It is this unprecedented, wholehearted pooling of talent and strength and know-how that has helped make possible our record," he said.

He cited the so-called four-engine bomber pool—in which a half dozen companies swapped designs, tools and engineers—as a "fine example of this cooperation."

He also paid tribute to the East and West Coast aircraft war production councils.

White of Eggs Found Beneficial In 3 Cancer Cases

Chicago, Dec. 2 (AP).—A preliminary report that daily drinking of large quantities of whites of eggs has had a beneficial effect on three advanced cases of cancer was made yesterday by two New York doctors to the Radiological Society of North America.

The report was made by Drs. Ira I. Kaplan and Milton Zurrow of the radiation therapy department of Bellevue Hospital, New York. Dr. Kaplan, who read the paper, pointed out in an interview that the experiment produced no claim for a cancer cure.

"The experiment," he said, "merely opens a field for further research and study in the hope of finding something that might be useful in developing a cure for the disease. The duration of the study (three months) and the small number of cases preclude the possibility of definite conclusions."

In a discussion following presentation of the paper, Dr. Lowell S. Goin of Los Angeles said the report was based on "inclusive findings." Dr. Robert S. Stone of San Francisco stated that "this dissertation would do great disservice to suffering humanity if it were construed as offering any gleam of hope that the problem of cancer can be solved by diet."

Japan's Air Power

By Kurt D. Singer

Production Rate Behind The Allies

BY THE END of 1940 Japan's air forces had risen to 2300, according to estimates by the better-informed foreign military intelligence services. Later direct estimates are not available. But the length of time Japanese warplanes remain in service, the availability of raw materials, and the production capacity of the island empire's aircraft industry make 3500 to 4000 machines a likely figure for the eve of the raid on Pearl Harbor.

This counts planes of all types, including civilian transports. Between 2000 and 2500 of the 3500 to 4000 were combat planes—fighters and bombers. This is also a likely figure for today, since new production has probably just about balanced losses in the first few months of the war.

An air fleet of 2000 to 2500 planes is small in comparison with the armadas of the Western powers. Germany, Britain, Soviet Russia and the United States all count combat craft in terms of 10 thousands.

Small as it was, the Japanese air force in mid-December outnumbered its foes by more than 2 to 1 in the theater of war as a whole. The ratio may even have been greater than 3 to 1. And, as we shall see, the Japanese were able to boost this margin to insuperable levels at the specific points of attack.

Early in 1940, even before the formal signature of the Tripartite Pact in September, however, Tokyo began to import Nazi technical experts, and the combined efforts of the Germans and Japanese boosted production to 2500 planes a year by January, 1941.

The increase since then has been between 50 and 80 per cent, and the current rate is 4000 to 4500 a year. This includes trainers, transports and utilities, as well as bombers, fighters and scouts.

This increase is not unimpressive, but it still leaves Japan with a production rate far behind those of the four big Western powers.

Japan's limited plane production, despite expansion efforts of the most intensive kind since the start of the China war, has many causes, the most important of which are limited raw materials, shortage of basic machine tools and a complete lack of some of the most up-to-date tools, domination of the industry in its early stages by influences uninterested in aviation, if not hostile to it, and lack of an accumulated "know how" or mechanical tradition of a caliber to be found in the United States or Germany.

If all Japan's aluminum output could be applied to plane-building it would be enough to perhaps triple the present plane output.

Fortunately this is not possible. In Japan a large part of the aluminum production must be diverted to the electrical industry as a substitute for copper, and probably not more than one-third of the Japanese output of aluminum is available for the aircraft industry.

Nor is the total output or that part available to the plane-makers likely to increase rapidly. Between 1934 and 1937 extensive efforts were made to produce aluminum commercially from the Japanese Empire ores, such as alunite. With a single exception, they were unsuccessful.

For the rest, Tokyo depended on imports, chiefly from Bintan Island, in the Netherlands Indies and Johore in Malaya. Until the imposition of embargoes by London and Batavia last July, Tokyo had been taking 80 per cent of the Bintan and Johore output. Capture of Bintan and Johore thus cannot result in any swift expansion of Japanese bauxite reserves. Tokyo will, in fact, be lucky to get as much as previously.

* * * *

A second brake on Japanese aircraft manufacturing is the supply of machine tools.

Until two or three years ago, a large percentage of the machines installed in Japanese plane factories each year were imported. Many of these are now made in the island empire.

Tokyo is thus both more and less self-sufficient in machine tools than two years ago. A greater percentage of the tools now going into Japanese plants is Japanese in manufacture.

But the tools are frequently not so efficient as those the Western powers are using. In any case, Japan's limited supply of steel keeps the output of tools below need. The lack of a long-rooted aeronautical, internal combustion, and production engineering tradition of accumulated "know how," affects the Japanese aviation picture in two ways.

First, it means that Japanese plane plants take longer than might otherwise be necessary to put into production items of equipment that have not been produced in Japan before.

Second, it has made the industry dependent on foreign designs to a notorious degree. An industry which finds its principal inspiration abroad inevitably produces obsolescent aircraft. Thus, the principal single-seat fighters in use in the Japanese army now are a copy of the earlier Messerschmidt 109 models, and a ship that bears a close resemblance to the Seversky P-35, the American pursuit plane dating back to 1938.

The Japanese carriers are not as efficient plane carriers as are corresponding American ships. America has nearly double the capacity of the Japanese.

The Japanese, however, turned the inferior striking ability of their individual warships to an advantage which they could keep so long as the United States was unable to undertake a major fleet action in the western Pacific, namely, superior dispersal to minimize risk of loss and to strike successively at more Allied points of resistance.

The seaplane carriers are another example of the Japanese ability to extract the maximum military advantage from inferior material.

Possessing a multitude of well-scattered naval aviation bases, Japan, during the '20s neglected the development of flying boats, relying on small short-range float planes instead.

A few years ago, Admiral Yamomoto realized that the rapid advance in flying-boat construction technique abroad, particularly in the United States, had given flying boats ranges so great as to render the short-based seaplanes almost useless, despite the profusion of Japanese bases.

Instead of scrapping the seaplanes in favor of flying-boats, in which the Japanese were (and are) backward, the Japanese Navy decided to keep them and extend their range by providing them with mother ships which could take them near the scene of action, and from which they could be launched.

Japan has equipped at least 11 seaplane carriers, three of them especially designed, the balance converted from merchant ships. Some of these have recently been lost in the Coral Sea and Midway engagements.

In the long run, provided Europe does not require the exclusive attention of the Allies for any length of time, Japan cannot prevail in the air. Not only are her three enemies already outproducing her in planes, but one is increasing production at a rate which she cannot match.

American production today is at least six times the Japanese. By the end of the year Japan will be producing only 550 to 650 planes monthly, while America should be producing eight times as many.

Nevertheless, it would be the height of folly to underestimate the foe. The present Japanese numerical advantage in the Far East is of the order of two or three to one but this figure actually understates the case.

Partly for geographic and partly for political reasons, the Japanese have been able to boost this margin at individual points of attack.

The same general considerations apply to Japanese land power. Air power plus land power spells conquest. The prospect is thus for continued enemy advances—advances which will be halted and then reversed in the end.

But unless the important air strength of the Soviet Union at Vladivostok is thrown into action against the Japanese, thus upsetting the present strategic advantage of Tokyo—this will not be done cheaply. It will take time, material and men.

The Once Over

Dear Harriet—Inclosed you will find some snapshots of me on a Algerian race horse. It is named Abuka which is Algerian I gess for Whirlaway. Noo fooling Harriet it is a real race horse and runs at the native tracks over here and on days when it ain't entered in no race it is rented out. That is a regular custom with race horses here. The wogs (everybody here is called a wog) say this skinner has won plenty races even if he don't look it. But from the way he acted with me on his back he must of been drugged or else he was doing a Vichy.

Me and a bunch of the boys got a few hours leave and went horseback riding on these double duty goats yesterday. Imagine back home if you could go for a canter in the park on a livery stable skinner and find out you was on Alsab! Some fun, eh, Harriet! I don't know if this beetle will ever be able to race again after me riding around on him but I know he finished in better shape than me.

Harriet what the natives do to us Yanks in business deals is a crime. If what we call racketeering back home did not start in Africa then Africa must of got the idea awful early. The natives have got the army mixed up with the tourist trade. I took a taxi ride (the taxi was pulled by a pair of horses right from a museum) and when I got out after a couple of blocks on account of I could make better time on my hands and knees the driver charged me $5. I settled for three after nearly starting another war.

It is the same with everything. I went shopping around for some souveneers to send you and all prices went up 500 per cent as soon as the storekeepers seen I had on a uniform. The one thing the boys wood like to get more than anything else is a all-hot but I bet if we found one the native dog-wagon wood want $11 for it with $7 extra for mustard.

Even movie picture houses give us the works. They have swell up-to-the-minute filums over here like "Broken Blossoms," and Pearl White in "The Adventure of Pauline" also a few early Mae westerns. Sergeant Mooney says he saw a newsreel which showed Calvin Coolidge acting in the Boston police strike.

Well, Harriet, all is well with me so far, but I still wish them scientists who are doing such wonderful work with dehydrated food wood get out a dehydrated geography. Something I mean that would come in powder form and take up no room, but which would turn into a map when wet and make it possible for me to get a better general idea where I am in this war.

It don't make much difference to others, but personaly each time I get onto a new continent I wood like to find out right away if it is too far away from you to do any telephoning.

I went into what I thought was a pay station the other night, but it turned out to be a native sentry box. Four Mosolems and a couple of ponies was in it.

It is a small world. After I had been trying to talk to these Mosolem a half hour by sign language one of 'em says maybe we could get along better if I knew any English and he asks me whatever happened to the Dodgers that they didn't cop the pennant last fall. It turns out he once lived in Astoria and worked in a hat-blocking shop. I asked him how he ever happened to get back in Algeria and he just said it was the depresshun.

Well, Harriet, this will have to be enough for now except to say we will have this war over in no time. Hitler is already answering ads for male delicatessen clerks in Switzerland. And I heard a rumor today that Mussolini was suing him for crooked partnership papers. Write me a long letter. All my love, OSCAR.

If you get a picture of me looking like I was made up to play Othello or Gunga Din it will be okay. I will just be posing in native dress.

Italy On The Eve

By Barnet Nover

Mussolini's Reply to Churchill

IF THE SPEECH which Benito Mussolini delivered to the Fascist Chamber of Corporations on Wednesday was the best he could do by way of a reply to Winston Churchill's latest blast at him, then Italy must, indeed, be close to collapse.

NOVER

The Mussolini who spoke this time was not the boastful, blustering, vainglorious Mussolini who for so long strutted across the world's stage all dressed up as a Twentieth Century Caesar; the Mussolini who so blithely ordered his legions to give battle to the primitively armed tribesmen of Ethiopia; who, without compunction, stabbed France in the back; who grew lyrical about Graziani's "lightning thrust" across the Egyptian border to Sidi Barrani and other "victories" of the vanished past.

Wednesday's speech was that of a broken-down and bewildered man who sees the houses of cards he spent 20 years in erecting falling to pieces about him. Mussolini has lost everything—his honor, his empire, his reputation, his authority—everything but his voice. And even that voice is only a faint and feeble echo of its former self.

The sands are running out for Mussolini and Fascist Italy and no rhetorical posturings by the Duce will avert the inevitable end.

MUSSOLINI'S speech was nonetheless significant—significant that he found it necessary to make it, significant for what it said.

It is evident that the B. B. C.'s round-the-clock, day-after-day broadcasts of Churchill's words have reached the Italian people. And accompanied as they were by block-buster bombs rained on Turin, Milan and other Italian cities they could not but have a powerful effect. Mussolini could hardly afford to ignore the plea of the British leader. He had no choice but to reply.

But his reply was all rhetoric and no reason and it is doubtful if it will have any effect in stemming the panic that is sweeping the Italian kingdom.

The Italians are, at bottom, a logical and practical people. They know the grim facts of their situation. They know they have lost their empire. They know they have already lost the war. They know that their cities are being bombed into rubble with worse yet to come. They will not be comforted or cajoled by Mussolini's boastful references to Japanese victories or German promises of aid or predictions that in the long run all will be well.

IT IS CHARACTERISTIC of Mussolini that he is incapable of concealing his alarms. His speeches are like photographic negatives. They reveal, in reverse, the image of his worries.

Thus when he declared that if the Italian people gave up it "would renounce forever its dreams of being a great nation" you can take it for granted that large numbers of Italians are now quite willing to allow Italy to sink to a third-rate power if in so doing they could win peace.

Similarly, when Mussolini boasted that the Italians "will not be inferior to the British and the Russians" he was by implication expressing his concern over the real probability that they will go to pieces as a result of their defeats and the bombing of their cities. Indeed he specifically admitted as much when he announced that mass evacuation of civilians from the bombed centers have been ordered. And when he declared that there was "nothing glorious" in the landing of American and British troops in North Africa it is clear that this development has immensely impressed the Italian people.

THE ISSUE, said Mussolini, is one of "to be or not to be." As usual, he was seeking to identify the nation with himself, its interests with his personal fortunes, its future with his own.

He achieved no small success in doing that in the past. He made the Italian people and nation the instruments of his dreams of grandeur and his megalomaniac ambitions, co-conspirators in the plot against peace and civilization. But the enforced alliance is dissolving. Mussolini knows it, which is why he who once posed as a man-eating lion now whines like a whipped cur.

And Hitler also knows it. For the fate of Mussolini is now inextricably bound up with the fate of the man who was once his disciple and ultimately became his master.

NAZI GERMANY'S contempt for her junior partner was clearly manifested in 1940, at the time of the armistice negotiations with France.

When he plunged Italy into war Mussolini had made no bones of his ambition to seize Nice, Savoy, Corsica and Tunis from a stricken France. But under the armistice Italy was only allowed to occupy a tiny corner of that country. Hitler's objective at that time was the adhesion of France to the "new order." He did not want to compromise it by satisfying Mussolini at France's expense. Indeed, Hitler hoped that a Fascist France would ultimately take the place of an enfeebled and inefficient Fascist Italy as the junior partner of the Axis. This was also Laval's game. That hope has been shattered.

No wonder, then, that Hitler now finds it necessary to do everything he can to bolster up the tottering structure of fascism in Italy.

Thus on November 11, the Italians were allowed to occupy Nice, Savoy and Corsica. Hitler has stripped his air power in Russia to prevent the Allies from securing a firm foothold on Tunisia and by so doing placing a pistol at Italy's head. And a street in Augsburg has been named Mussoliniplatz to show Italians in what high esteem their Duce is held.

For Hitler realizes that if he loses Italy, his first ally, his own destruction will only be a matter of time. He must keep Italy in the war at all costs.

Partial Text of Mussolini's Warning to Italy of Dark Days Ahead

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 2.—A partial text of Premier Mussolini's speech as recorded from Axis broadcasts follows:

The war has spread through all space and will be similarly long in time. The less one says in wartime the better.

The Italian people do not need a lot of propaganda. Nevertheless, after 18 months silence I have the vague impression that the Italian people want to hear me.

This is not a speech but rather a military statement. I am going to review the first 30 months war with statistics . . .

The most important events of the last 18 months are:

1. The war against Russia. 2. Japans entry into the war. 3. The Allied landing in North Africa.

In 1933 an Italian military mission went to Russia. After receiving its report I was convinced there was a great military state there in the East, with very different armaments from those it had in 1920.

It is significant that Russia never wanted British or American soldiers in her country.

Axis armies which withstood the last Russian winter demonstrated their mettle and ability.

Axis Will Win

In the end, victory cannot fail to come to the Axis. There is not the slightest doubt as to the end of this gigantic struggle.

Japan did not wait before striking shattering blows at America. Japan's intervention is an absolute guarantee of Axis victory. Japan is invincible.

If there were anyone in the world who wished for war that man is Roosevelt. Japan could not stand by and let the United States fire the first shot. America expected to annihilate Japan in two or three weeks.

I was not surprised by the invasion of North Africa. There was much information of intrigues between the North Americans and high French officials. There was nothing glorious in the landing. All countermeasures were instantly taken in conjunction with Berlin.

Concedes British Victory

The British bombed civilian and residential quarters. . . . The only victory Britain can boast is at El Alamein.

Here are exact figures on casualties from the bombing of Italy to deny exaggerated reports:

Italian casualties from enemy air raids and sea bombardments are 1876 killed and 3321 injured.

In Milan, 30 houses were destroyed and 2414 damaged. In Turin, 161 houses were destroyed and 3230 damaged. In Savona, 6 houses were destroyed and 1020 damaged. In Genoa, 203 houses were destroyed and 6121 damaged.

"Exact Losses"

Italian casualties during the first 30 months of war are: Dead—Army, 40,558; navy, 33,500; air force, 20,124. Wounded—Army, 80,772.

We are the only country at war which gives exact figures of losses in communiques.

In the first 30 months of war the Italian navy sank 167 merchantmen totaling 1,215,821 tons. A total of 140 enemy warships aggregating 333,986 tons was sunk.

Italian units sunk by the enemy total 172 aggregating 227,182 tons. Our air force has sunk 62 enemy warships and 117 merchant ships. The enemy air force has lost 1800 planes and probably another 173.

Our losses in prisoners in the first 30 months of war are 232,778. Over 37,000 are missing. We have in our hands 21 British officers of general rank. These are in Sicily. Italy respects international law in treatment of prisoners. The enemy does not.

British treatment of Italian prisoners almost universally is inhuman. British soldiers have flogged Italian officers.

Of other enemy nationals we have captured 21 generals, 4003 other officers and 69,167 men.

Italy Clearing Cities

Italy now is clearing her cities of women and children. Only combatants and those necessary must remain.

Germany will give powerful assistance in the form of antiaircraft artillery to insure Italian-German defenses and give raiders a hot reception.

There now is no longer an external and internal front. There is but one front.

All who can leave must leave our cities. A nightly exodus must also be arranged from cities so only fighting personnel remains.

The Italian people are not inferior to the British and Russian peoples.

Churchill's latest utterance was almost exclusively devoted to us. I will read it to you. It will demonstrate how he regards Italians—how he regards me.

Churchill calls me a hyena. The same Churchill claimed to be a gentleman of English descent.

"I Am a Gentleman"

I, Mussolini, when I read these insults, rate myself a thousand times more a gentleman than this man Churchill—intoxicated with alcohol and tobacco.

I am proud to be considered an antagonist of the British Empire.

There would have been great misery in Italy had she remained neutral because neither of the two belligerents would have come to her aid.

If I had listened to that hyena Roosevelt, he would have thought me a "chump." Churchill says my empire has gone. I reply that the last word has not yet been spoken.

The Italian people never has been happy. Nobody has ever really understood Italy. Italy never really had enough bread. Every time we asked for something we found obstacles put in our path.

Despite what Churchill says, the English-speaking public has never had any tender feelings toward Italy.

When Italy attacked France nobody believed France would suddenly collapse. France's Alpine army was still intact. But this is the France which for centuries has been stabbing Italy in the back.

Let us admit we stabbed France in the back—but this is only one stab in the back compared to the hundreds of stabs France has made on Italy in history.

We must hate. You cannot fight without hating. We must act with utmost energy against those who would appease the spirit of Italians.

People say Italians are not now so enthusiastic for war.

No people continues to be enthusiastic from morning until night. That would be a sign of weakness.

There has never been any act of sabotage or any protest against the war.

This war is not only necessary, it is a sacred cause. We are proud to participate in this battle of giants which will transform the world.

We do not like to forecast the future; today the question is "to be or not to be" in this most formidable struggle in human history.

We shall march side by side with the Germans.

The great unity of the Axis includes Nazis, Fascist, Spanish Falangists and many others.

Britain is fighting to reduce the entire world to the state which India now is in.

We must fight for the living, but we must avenge the sacrifices of our dead.

Our dead cry "Fight until victory."

Tony Martin Asks For Assignment To Gunnery School

Beverly Hills, Calif., Dec. 2 (AP). Crooner Tony Martin appeared today at his Draft Board with a request that he be sent to an Army gunnery school.

The actor, dismissed from Navy duty for "unfitness" after 11 month' service, ended a 17-hour bus trip from San Francisco this morning and went immediately to his board's headquarters in the city hall here. He was wearing civilian clothes borrowed from a friend.

"I had some gunnery experience in the Navy," he declared, "and I hope to be sent somewhere for Army gunnery training."

The board announced that his case would be considered at its next regular meeting, scheduled tomorrow.

Lieut. Jenks Killed

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Lieut. (J. G.) Henry P. Jenks, U. S. Naval Reserve, former New York and Chicago advertising executive, has been killed in action, his family announced yesterday. Jenks, 28, was the son of Maurice L. Jenks, vice president of the American Surety Co.

Japs End Mop-up In Philippines

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), Dec. 2 (AP).—Imperial Japanese Headquarters announced today "the virtual termination of mopping-up operations in the Philippines" against American and Filipino remnants holding out in mountainous or other inaccessible parts of the islands.

(Despite past claims to have wiped out all resistance, the headquarters statement confirmed that survivors from the defending army had waged a bitter if hopeless fight for six months or more after the fall of Bataan and Corregidor.)

CHANGELESS—IN A WORLD OF CHANGE

YOU DON'T mind having "cuffless" trousers or "tailless" shirts or cutting down on sugar or Sunday driving . . . no, sir, not if it helps win the war!

And if the makers of your pet products have to make a few war-time changes, you'll play ball, just as every other red-blooded American will for freedom's sake!

But with all this changing going on, it's good to remember in this Christmas Season, that OLD GRAND-DAD, OLD TAYLOR, OLD CROW, OLD OVERHOLT and MOUNT VERNON are products that needn't be and won't be changed as long as they are bonded whiskies! For generations these names have stood for the greatest bonded whiskies in the world.

Bonded whiskies are produced under the strict provisions of the Bottled-In-Bond Act which regulates the details of storage, aging, bottling and labeling to protect the whiskey until it reaches the consumer. The regulations are rigidly enforced and there are just no "cuffs" to trim off a bottle of bonded whiskey.

Central's Champs Win Again on The Post's All-Metro Eleven

Three Vikings Land Places On Club; Washington-Lee And Tech Each Place Pair

For the very good reason that they lorded it over their opposition all season, football teams of Central, Washington-Lee and Tech High Schools have contributed 7 of the first 11 players to the 1942 all-Metropolitan grid team of The Washington Post.

Central, the public school champ, led off with three stars on the mythical club, annually selected after an informal poll of coaches, officials and players. Washington-Lee, the only undefeated team in the section, placed a pair of players along with

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

It's going to be difficult to work up anything more exciting than an insoucient yawn when they finally get around to playing the New Year's Day Bowl games. With one exception, it's a meaningless sort of competition, and the only excuse for holding Bowl games on this year-end would be for charity's benefit, but the promoters haven't thought of that.

We'd say it's the worst line-up of Bowl games ever presented. They're not going to decide anything. The one team that could emerge from the New Year's frays as a champion of some kind might be Tulsa U. Its game with Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans may be the best of the day. At least the Sugar Bowl will present, in Tulsa, one unbeaten team. That is more than can be said for the Rose Bowl, the Orange Bowl and the Cotton Bowl.

Every Bowl game is, in fact, a weak compromise with what had been high hopes of pitting unbeaten teams against each other. Boston College let the Sugar Bowl down horribly by getting licked, 55 to 12, by Holy Cross. An unbeaten B. C. team in the Sugar Bowl against Tulsa, or even Tennessee, would have been at least a little bit intriguing. But the Eagles flunked out against Holy Cross and were finally grabbed by the Orange Bowl.

At Miami, Boston College will be meeting a thrice-beaten Alabama team. Anybody who can deduce anything important from that clash will be entitled to a super 20-20 rating. The Eagles, of course, are the luckiest football team in the country, no matter what happens from here in. Had they won their game with Holy Cross, they were scheduled to celebrate their victory that evening in Boston's Cocoanut Grove Club, where 480 persons perished in the Saturday night fire tragedy.

When they missed out on the Sugar Bowl invitation, B. C. took a financial rap of about $55,000 incidentally. The New Orleans game carried a $75,000 guarantee. At Miami, the Eagles will be lucky to net $20,000. And if they win they will merely have beaten an Alabama team that was licked by both Georgia, Georgia Pre-Flight and Georgia Tech, so there will be little added luster for the Eagles.

This year's Rose Bowl game can scarcely command a lot of enthusiasm. The Pasadena authorities have obtained Georgia for the Eastern representative, but marring that Georgia record is the 27-13 defeat by Auburn, a team that was tied by Georgetown and licked by four other teams.

The Rose Bowl will have Frankie Sinkwich, of course, and he threatens to overshadow the whole show. The West coach hasn't much to offer in the way of a conference champion, U. C. L. A., the favorite to end up as the West Coast representative, has already lost three games and has yet to play Southern California.

In the Cotton Bowl, they have Georgia vs. Texas. The Cotton Bowl is taking the leavings of the Georgia-Georgia Tech battle, a team that was licked, 34 to 0. And Texas, though the champion of the Southwest Conference, has already been licked twice this season. Like the Rose Bowl and the Orange Bowl, the Cotton Bowl will be the battle of the losers.

So we return to the Sugar Bowl, which at least has the distinction of presenting one unbeaten team. Nobody really knows exactly how Tulsa can be rated. They're unbeaten, however, and the Sugar Bowl officials may have obtained the best college team in the country. At least one pro league coach in a statement two weeks ago, when both Boston College and Georgia were unbeaten, declared that neither of those teams were the best he had seen. "The best team I've seen this season," he said, "is Tulsa."

We'll know more about Tulsa, of course, by dusk on January 1. Tennessee, beaten only once and tied once, will provide a stiff test for the Oklahomans. The Vols have lost only to Alabama, a team that extended both Georgia and Georgia Tech, and they've brushed aside their last six opponents impressively. The Tennessee coach at the start of the season stated, we remember, that "Tennessee may get off to a slow start, but by the end of the season we'll be a swell football team."

But the shame of all the Rose Bowl games is that they're not being played for any worthy cause except to fatten the exchequers of the college treasuries and the agencies that are promoting the contests. This would seem to be the year when the colleges and the promoters could forget the profit motive and justify the whole business by playing for war relief or a similar fund. But they're slow to think about that.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 2.—American colleges are following Yale's lead in making physical-contact sports compulsory. Ellwood Geiges, the football official who is executive assistant to Jack Kelly, civilian athletic boss, told us today that in a short time he expects a million college students to be engaged in competitive, red meat sports.

CONSIDINE

At Yale the undergrads, after undergoing a medical and physical examination, must engage in one or more body building endeavors: Running, obstacle courses, racing, vaulting, jumping, falling, boxing, wrestling, jujitsu, hockey, football, lacrosse, ditch digging, soccer, touch football, handball, fencing, hand-to-hand combat and a swimming course where the general idea is to learn how to swim 100 yards fully clothed.

Since the installation of the program, to make all Yale undergrads rough, tough and ready for whatever Uncle Sam has in mind for them, many colleges have fallen in line and are doing everything possible to make hair-on-the-chest guys out of a lot of students who otherwise would have drifted instinctively into dramatics, tennis and short-story writing.

Stanford has increased compulsory athletics from two to four years, with three to five periods per week. The university's R. O. T. C. men get an additional, Spartan athletic program, full of meat and potatoes.

Wisconsin has gone in heavily for hand-to-hand combat, self-defense and life saving. Dartmouth has adopted a physical fitness program based on the tough, all-inclusive one used at Annapolis and West Point. Southern California has put in jujitsu, rough and tumble fighting, rugby and other sports, to augment an already tough program. The Trojan program demands at least one hour per day, five times a week.

At Harvard war-time compulsory conditioning classes have been made up of all upper classmen not engaged in inter-collegiate athletics. Tulane has formed what it calls the "All-Out Club," a vast conditioning class that includes members of the faculty. The club stresses boxing, wrestling, jumping, rope-climbing, obstacle course racing and swimming.

The University of Texas has built a barricade course and sends its thousands of male students pounding through it. It calls for running, pulling, lifting, jumping, balancing and giving a friend a hand. In addition the university makes it compulsory for its men to go in for judo, boxing, weight-lifting, tumbling, swimming, grenade throwing, rifle practice, tug-of-war and the other sports which were scoffed at by effetes during times of peace, but which now form a basis for an America lean of stomach and ready for any kind of fight or privation.

You hear so much about the cupidity of horse racing—and, brother, it's all warranted—that just for a change of pace here's a sentimental item:

A "gypsy" named Herbert ("Dynamite") Kerr, who is being kept by a 9-year-old mare named Dizzy Dame, had a faithful old plater named Playmore for a number of years. Last fall he decided that Playmore had worked hard enough for him. He heard about a Maryland farmer who would keep the horse for him, feed him, and provide a pasture where he could spend the rest of his days. So Kerr sent Playmore away to what looked like a horse heaven.

Two weeks ago Kerr dropped by the farm unexpectedly to see his old charger. He looked out in the pasture and couldn't see him, but there was something hauntingly familiar about a swaybacked, rib-showing, sore-footed, bramble-stuck plug standing off to one side. It couldn't be Playmore, Kerr said to himself, but he took a chance and whistled to the forlorn bag of bones. It was a whistle he had used to attract Playmore during the days when Playmore wore fancy silks and ran on some good tracks. To Kerr's horror the creaky horse lifted his head, loped over to him and nuzzled at his sleeve.

Kerr went back to town and called the man who had promised to take care of the old boy. "I'm bringing a van out to get Playmore," he barked into the phone. "And if you try to stop me I'll run your fences down with the van."

He got him. Now Playmore is back at the races. He's not running, but he travels around with Kerr and Dizzy Dame, taking pot luck with them. Sometimes Kerr doesn't eat very regularly, when Dizzy Dame isn't feeling her oats, but Playmore does. Even carrots. Even sugar. He has fattened up and filled out, and every time Kerr is in sight Playmore comes over to him and nuzzles around him gratefully.

ODT Urges Restricted Sales of Bowl Tickets

Eastman Asks Committees to Hold Purchases to 'Immediate Areas'

By the Associated Press.

The Office of Defense Transportation yesterday urged sponsors of the five big New Year's football bowl games to sell tickets only in the immediate areas in which the contests will be played.

ODT Director Joseph B. Eastman, in telegrams to the managers of the games and to schools whose teams are expected to play in them, said the step was necessary to avoid "overburdening of common carriers."

"Long distance travel of fans and team followers must be discouraged," the telegrams said.

Eastman called attention to the annual Army-Navy game played at Annapolis, last Saturday, to which travel was minimized by restricting ticket sales to residents of Annapolis.

Eastman's telegram follows:

"Undoubtedly you are familiar with campaign to reduce passenger travel and need for voluntary curtailment by public of all travel not absolutely necessary.

"In making arrangements for Bowl game I urge careful consideration be given element of common carrier transportation in distribution of tickets.

"Current passenger transportation shortage demands that travel be minimized and that ticket distribution be confined to area where game is played similar to Army-Navy game arrangements. Long distance travel of fans and team followers must be discouraged.

"These steps to conserve transportation facilities are essential if overburdening of common carriers with resultant adverse effect on essential transportation is to be avoided, especially important during holiday period when troop furlough movements require utilization of so much equipment. Your

Hoyas' Barrett Heads South; It's No Hoax

John Barrett, hard plunging Georgetown University fullback, yesterday was officially notified he had been selected as a member of the North Team, which will meet a picked Southern All-Star team in the annual North-South game, December 26, at Montgomery, Ala., thereby easing his mind and proving he was not the victim of what he thought might be a school mate's prank.

Several nights ago, the 200-pound fullback was called to the 'phone. The voice on the other end said the name was Carl Snavely, coach of Cornell and that Johnny was wanted on the North team. Johnny almost hung-up the receiver but finally (and to his relief today) carried through and said he would be delighted to play, still thinking it was a hoax.

But yesterday the official notification from Snavely arrived in the mail and Johnny is convinced. He accepted at once. The hard plunging Hoya carried the ball 65 times this past season, picking up 289 yards, virtually 4 yards per try.

Dirty Football Charge Amazes Irish Mentor

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 2.—Ed McKeever, assistant football coach at Notre Dame University, expressed "great surprise" today at the accusation of "dirty football" made by Ed Stamm, star Stanford tackle.

Stamm charged at Palo Alto, Calif., yesterday the Notre Dame team played "dirty football" against Stanford October 10 and added he was not surprised at reports they had "used the same tactics" in the Southern California game at Los Angeles last Saturday.

McKeever, who was in charge of the Notre Dame team at the time of the Stanford game because of the illness of Coach Frank Leahy, made this reply to Stamm's charges:

"The Stanford line was the biggest and one of the best we faced all year. They averaged nearly 210 pounds from end to end and forced us to take to forward passes for each of our four touchdowns.

"Surely we would have been going way out of our way to look for trouble had we tried to play dirty football against a team that was so much bigger than we were.

"As a matter of fact, after the game had ended the players of each team circulated on the field shaking hands, patting each other on the back and offering congratulations.

"I talked to Coach Marchy Schwartz and several Stanford players immediately after the game and they had nothing but praise for our players."

Jimmy Foxx Donates Blood for Red Cross

Two at Charles Town Collect $1330 Double

'4 and 7' Combination of Orlene And Certain Party, Long Shots, Score

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 2.—Oil rationing means little in the lives of two turf fans for they have $1,330.20 bankrolls to keep them warm. That was the amount the pair of lucky bettors collected here today after investing $2 in a piece of pasteboard bearing the numbers "4 and 7." While well under the record for this State, the payoff was the largest in several years.

Naturally, the winning horses in the combination were long shots, but almost every fan on hand had some reason to kick himself for not having the right numbers. The Heloria Stable's Orlene started the snowball rolling in the first race and Lieut. Davis' Certain Party ran it up to balloon proportions in the second event.

Palumbo Rides Orlene

Jockey Sammy Palumbo rode Orlene, a nonwinner until today. The 2-year-old daughter of Challenger II and Memoirs was overlooked in the individual betting as she was in the double. She was a trailer early and came from far back to be up to win in a three-way photo finish. She nosed out Pickwick Arms and Teddy Lu was third. Orlene paid a $31 mutuel.

The possible pay-offs on the double ranged from the eventual winning figure to that of $106.40 on combinations ending in Hard Loser. Bookman took the lead early in the runing but Certain Party took command on the backstretch and it was all over but the pay-off. Jockey W. Daugherty opened a long lead with the 5-year-old and he galloped home six lengths in front of Hard Loser with Doctor's Nurse third. Despite a good record at the Pascoag track, Certain Party paid an $18 mutuel.

Palumbo and the Heloria Stable were successful again in the fifth event. Battle Line, carrying the

Fate of Phils Discussed by Baseball Men

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 2.—While the American League discussed means of reducing travel next season the National League spent an entire day today threshing out its biggest problem, what to do with the Philadelphia Phils.

The magnates of the senior circuit went into session at 11 a. m. and remained closeted until late afternoon. They had some sandwiches sent into the meeting room long after lunch time.

There was no question that the weighty problem which kept them so engrossed was the fate of the Philadelphia franchise. Gerald Nugent, president of the Phills, and his attorney, Robert Irwin, were kept sitting on a bench in the hall outside the meeting room for part of the afternoon.

However, when the confab finally ended after some 6 hours of continuous session, League President Ford Frick said nothing could be announced and might not be for two or three weeks or longer.

He added the league had not succeeded in fixing a valuation of

McSpaden Favorite in $5000 Miami Open Golf Play Today

Worsham In Starting Field of 100

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 2.—Fellow professionals tabbed Harold McSpaden of Philadelphia the favorite today to set the pace for a hundred or more golfers who will tee off tomorrow in the $5000 Miami Open—the winter's only money tournament.

After watching McSpaden break the Miami Springs course record Monday with a practice round 63, laughing Leonard Dodson of Kansas City grew serious long enough to assert:

"I'll put myself right on the spot. McSpaden will win it by six strokes."

Popular Choice

Johnny Bulla, registered out of Atlanta; Ben Loving of Miami and Clayton Heafner of Linville, N. C., chimed in with predictions of a triumph for the straight-shooting McSpaden, long a top-notch campaigner.

McSpaden himself was wary, remembering last year and the year before when he gave the course a good going over in practice, but did not come close to repeating his victory of 1938, the year he took first money with a 278.

"I eased up after that 63," he said. "I had a 70 yesterday. I don't want to shoot all of my golf in practice."

He admitted, however, that he felt keen and ready after a month's rest.

Lewis Worsham, jr., the young Washington, D. C., professional tabbed by P. G. A. Tournament Manager Freddie Corcoran as the most promising of the young tournament players, was on hand as the lone representative from his city.

Worsham barely finished in the money last year, tying for last place. The Burning Tree Club professional is the current Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion.

The big mystery on the eve of the tournament was the whereabouts of Byron Nelson, who telegraphed last week that he would arrive in time to seek his third consecutive Miami open triumph.

Defending Champ

He was not on hand for a final workout today, and did not communicate with H. H. Arnold, tournament director, who surmised that Nelson had encountered difficulties in arranging plane passage from Texas, where he has been vacationing.

Last year Nelson won with a 72-hole 268, one stroke higher than the tournament record established by Sam Snead in 1937.

Snead, now in the Navy, will be missing this year along with such stars as Ben Hogan, Craig Wood, Gene Sarazen, Tommy Armour, Porky Oliver, Vic Ghezzi and others who are in war work or the armed forces

For those who will compete, the open offers the only opportunity before next March to pick up prize money. All of the other tournaments usually played on the winter tour—with the exception of the North-South open at Pinehurst next spring—have been canceled.

Ticket Sale Curb Asked for Bowls cooperation and advice as to action taken will be appreciated."

In New Orleans, Joseph B. David, today said his group would "cooperate in every way possible."

David said the request had been received from the ODT and that he had telegraphed the director, "assuring him of our desire to fully cooperate in every way possible."

David said the Sugar Bowl group had done no out-of-town advertising and solicited no out-of-town ticket sales.

Officials of the Rose Bowl, the Cotton Bowl, and the Shrine East-West football games said their organizations also would cooperate with the ODT.

The Pasadena Tournament of Roses committee reported it will make no effort to attract spectators to the New Year's game from outside its area.

At San Francisco William M. Coffman, managing director of the Shrine's East-West game, said tickets are not being sold outside of the immediate surrounding territory. He said the decision was made before ODT's request.

President Earl B. Smyth of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association, said at Dallas:

"Reservations received to date indicate that our Cotton Bowl crowd will come from the vast population of two million residing within a 100-mile radius of Dallas. "Naturally, Texans are interested in only one thing—winning this war."

Sun Bowl officials also agreed with the ODT's request, adding that they still anticipated a capacity crowd of 15,000 in the only purely war relief bowl game.

"The ODT is absolutely correct," said Dr. R. B. Homan, jr., Sun Bowl director.

Oscar E. Dooly, jr., president of the sponsoring committee, of the Orange Bowl at Miami said they would cooperate in efforts to hold down long distance travel to the New Year's Day football games.

He said approximately 85 per cent of the tickets already had been sold in Miami, but explained it could not definitely be determined where the tickets would be sent by purchasers. He said while no efforts would be made to sell tickets outside the State, it was unlikely the bowl would refuse mailed requests.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ORLENE, $31.00, $19.60, $8.00; PICKWICK ARMS, $4.60, $3.00; TEDDY LU, $2.60.

ORLENE lacked early speed and trailed to backstretch, rallied when asked and closed with bold rush on outside to be up in final stride. PICKWICK ARMS stumbled while close up early, came to inside in final stages and barely failed to last. TEDDY LU saved ground at first turn, drew far out, but was tiring badly through stretch run. WICKCLIFFE GAL was taken up going to first turn, moved up approaching stretch and then tired.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 2:05. Off at 2:06. Winner, L. T. Davis' blk. g. (5), by Peter Hastings—Cuba Belle. Trained by owner Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:23⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CERTAIN PARTY, $18.00, $6.80, $3.20; HARD LOSER $5.40, $2.80; DOCTOR'S NURSE, $3.00.

CERTAIN PARTY, off alertly and hard hustled to obtain lead entering backstretch, opened up lengthy advantage gradually and was well in hand at the end. HARD LOSER was nearest winner throughout the last half and was hard ridden to save the place. DOCTOR'S NURSE, slow to find best stride, saved many lengths entering stretch and was going good at the end. SILVER BEAM was shut off going to first turn. BOOKMAN and CORNELIA JANE tired badly after opening half.

Daily Double—ORLENE and CERTAIN PARTY—Paid $1,330.20

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start bad. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:32½. Winner, Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KNITETTA, $6.80, $3.40, $3.60; REAL BOY, $4.00, $3.00; DONA MONTEZ, $4.00.

KNITETTA, in first flight from the start, disposed of DONA MONTEZ to assume command and then withstood a long drive to hold REAL BOY safe. The latter, always within striking distance, came through on rail to challenge the leader, but hung right at the end. DONA MONTEZ opened a long lead after beating the gate, was placed to punishment in final quarter, but was not good enough. BERSERK had no mishaps.

FOURTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:02½. Winner, T. Garisto's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SALLY OF ERIN, $42.20, $17.00, $4.60; G. C. HAMILTON, $11.80, $4.40; CUSHLAMACREE, $2.60.

SALLY OF ERIN assumed command at once under a hustling ride, was allowed to open good lead and just lasted. G. C. HAMILTON, slow to begin and forced to lose ground, reached leader at 70 yards from wire, but hung in closing test. CUSHLAMACREE was hard ridden throughout and had no apparent excuses. PENNY ROYAL was never a serious factor. BROWN CARSE had early foot, but tired badly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:31½. Winner, Heloria Stable's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BATTLE LINE, $13.80, $6.40, $4.20; PATHFINDER, $5.00, $3.20; MR. MONK, $5.40.

BATTLE LINE, faultlessly handled, saved ground while bettering position, went to outside of leader after entering stretch, displaced leader nearing end and held PATHFINDER safe. The latter, far back in the early stages, was forced to take the overland route and was going best of all at the end. MR. MONK disposed of DARK ACE to take command after the opening half, opened long lead, but weakened badly in last quarter. TACARO LILLY was within striking distance early, but failed to respond.

SIXTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $500; allowances. For all ages. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:02. Winner, W. H. Lipscomb's ch. f. (2), by Dunlin—On Top. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:55.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OVERLIN, $3.40, $2.80, $2.40; BUGLER, $6.00, $3.00; TECO TACK, $2.60.

OVERLIN, much the best, lacked speed to race with leaders early, circled field on turn, challenged leader in midstretch and drew out gradually at the end. BUGLER, showing usual high speed, outran field to turn, opened commanding lead, but was unable to resist winner. TECO TACK was hard ridden from the start and had no excuses. ELF QUEEN could not better her position.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:31½. Winner, Inwood Stable's br. g. (5), by Boojum or Kai Sang—Hedemora. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $220; second, $56; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 2:06.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AVESTA, $4.40, $2.40, $2.20; YANKEE LAD, $2.60, $2.80; JIM WALLACE, $3.80.

AVESTA was hustled to front in opening stages, was well rated while showing in front, turned back challenge of YANKEE LAD and was drawing away again at the end. YANKEE LAD, off well but not hurried, moved up boldly to challenge leader entering stretch, but hung in final drive. JIM WALLACE forced pace of winner for three-quarters and faltered. DES GRIEUX weakened after being close up early.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:01½. Winner, Inwood Stable's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROSE ANITA, $4.20, $3.60, $3.60; WILD CHANCE, $5.40, $3.60; PAMUNKEY, $4.60.

ROSE ANITA, off well and under good handling, disposed of PAMUNKEY to take command and then responded well to punishment in stretch to win with something left. WILD CHANCE, well back early, was hard ridden in closing stages and just got the place. PAMUNKEY, in front early, was tiring badly at the end and appeared weakly handled in the drive. SAY JUDGE was shut off by WILD CHANCE while trailing the field.

Bob Feller Home Before Sea Duty

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 2 (AP).—Bob Feller, former pitching star for the Cleveland Indians now in the Navy, arrived yesterday for a brief visit with his parents at nearby Van Meter before departing for sea duty.

Feller disclosed he had just finished a gunnery course. He said the type of ship on which he will start and where he reports are military secrets.

Bob was showered with congratulations upon his engagement to Miss Virginia Winther of Waukegan, Ill., which was announced Monday, but he was noncommittal about the date chosen for the wedding ceremony.

Bear Cagers Face Dehnert's Eagles

The Lichtman Washington Bears will take on "Dutch" Dehnert's Detroit Eagles in their second basketball game of the current season Sunday at 4:30 p. m. at Turner's Arena. This will be the third clash between these two clubs, the Eagles finishing on the short end in two previous contests this season.

"Dutch" Dehnert has strengthened his cagers with several former college stars, and the Bears will have to open up at top speed to get an edge on this year's edition of the Eagles.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

This track has been fortunate in drawing an outstanding big time rider at almost every meeting. This time the boy is Willie Turnbull, third leading rider in the country, with 192 winners. He is only 17 years old and comes from Hot Springs, Ark. He learned to pilot horses at the track near his home. His agent, Frank Riley, says Willie will not ride at New Orleans or Florida tracks and will rest throughout the winter unless racing is resumed at Hot Springs. Turnbull is under contract to Sport Haymaker. He has been brought forward gradually and, like old timers, sleeps in a tack room at the barn. He was a sensation in New England during the summer and lost his apprenticeship allowance there. Unlike many successful apprentices, Turnbull did not slacken his pace when he lost his bug. Since being shorn of the 5-pound allowance, he has ridden 51 winners in 50 days. Here's some good news for Washington fans. Starting Monday there will be better transportation to this track. A. B. & O. regular train leaves Washington at 10 a. m. and will connect with regular buses at Martinsburg. They will run to the Charles Town station, a short walk from the track. Returning the buses will leave the Charles Town station at 5:20 p. m. and the train arrives in Washington at 7:20. The bus round-trip from nearby Martinsburg is $1. While Bing Crosby is not in this neighborhood, two of his horses are on the grounds and will race here. Hugh Dufford, brother of Jockey Willie Dufford, has Don Bingo II and Preceptor II under his wing. Augie Gibson, who handles Walter Haight and others for Allen Clarke, has taken over the training of Gay Boo for E. C. Allnutt. E. A. Nicodemus' Mowmet went wrong in training which accounts for the speedy horse being scratched the other day. The stewards, after an investigation, reported that Thrift Shop, scratched for being unfit to run, was placed in the entries by Owner Anson Kurtz and not Trainer F. McArdle. The $25 fine assessed McArdle has been shifted to Kurtz. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race — BOUBLE B goes slumming in the day's opener and should win with speed in reserve if the effort is a serious one. DOTTIE has plenty of speed and will be in the first flight. CRIMSON LANCER was prominent at Bowie.

Second race—FAIRY BAY was a winner here opening day and defeated just about the same kind. Appears ready for another set of brackets. EXARCH is a fair sort and he belongs close. ZAC PAM may improve on that last.

Third race—LOST AND FOUND has plenty of speed and will be hard to whip from the No. 1 post position. PAT O'SEE is the one to beat in this field. Shapes up well and is dangerous. SUPER FOOT for the show end.

Fourth race—SAMUEL D. has had a race over the track and I believe his closing ability will carry him to a set of brackets in this company. TELLEVANE is good now and belongs close. BATTLE LINE will be right there if sent back today.

Fifth race—GLITTER GIRL likes this abbreviated sprint route and will give a good account of herself. I look for her to be first to the wire. RANDLE'S QUEEN is better suited at a longer route but has won this sort of race. NAVIGATION will like the going.

Sixth race—The chief strength in this field on the reserve list. PETE'S BET and LIGHT OF MORN would battle it out if they were in action. Of those assured starting positions I prefer TERRY MAY, HAPPY SLAVE and AFTER ORCHIDS.

Seventh race — CHOP STICKS tossed off that last after setting the pace. This looks like a better spot and this one will be familiar with the track this time. DARTING STAR gets the good inside position and is a threat. SAL'S SISTER for the minor money.

Eighth race—HADA STAR breaks off the rail and should make every post a winning one in the day's finale. LACKAWANNA is a good tough track horse and will be right there. ROUGH GOING to take care of the others.

Best bet—CHOP STICKS.

CLOCKER MIKE AT CHARLES TOWN

6—Terry May, After Orchids, Sir Kid.
7—Chronos, Rough Amos, Pointing.
8—Lady Jaffa, Hada Star, Rough Going.
Best bet—TERRY MAY.

Angel Keeps Record Intact, Tosses Rough Rudy Dusek

By Oscar Elder

Maurice Tillet, more widely and inappropriately known as the French Angel, defeated Rudy Dusek after 16 minutes of the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night as some 2000 fans sat entranced—their collective faces hanging wide open at the appalling ugliness of the Frenchman.

The French Angel, not to be confused with any of the Ersatz Angels who haunt the Nation's rassle emporiums, used his 276 pounds to good advantage in ending the 1-hour time limit brawl so hurriedly. He and the durable Dusek were busily engaged in trying to tear each others heads off in a furious slugfest when Mr. Angel suddenly caught Dusek around the waist in a bear hug that floored the senior member of the famous Dusek riot squad. Dusek, nearly 60 pounds lighter than his grotesque foe, succumbed to a body press.

Kept Record Intact

Thus, the Angel kept his record of Washington wins intact. However, before Dusek was pinned he did some very spectacular punching on the weird features of the angelic one, and displayed tremendous cunning in escaping from some of Argel's pet holds.

George Becker was awarded the semifinal match on a disqualification over the Yellow Mask after 16 minutes of very fine alley fighting. The Mask, using hate as a stock in trade, did a thriving business among the patrons and even antagonized Referee Berger to such an extent the arbiter awarded the bout to the gentlemanly Becker.

This was displeasing to Mr. Mystery and he essayed some more fisticuffing after the waltz was over. He rushed at Becker, but Casey Berger caught him in a full nelson, and as the hooded one was spreadeagled, Mr. Becker took several very accurate shots at his chin. The crowd began to chant for gore and Promoter Joe Turner stepped into the ring to wave the Mask to the showers and quell the impending riot.

30 Minutes to Draw

Gino Garibaldi and handsome Leo Numa, the Pacific coast grappler, worked to a strenuous and cleanly fought 30-minute draw. The men were evenly matched and staged an exhibition that was well received. Garibaldi almost took the match in the final half minute when he stormed off the ropes to catch Numa with a flying tackle. However, he missed his target and the two butted skulls, flooring both. Garibaldi was on his feet first, but was too befuddled to do any damage before the whistle.

Johnny (Tripod) Long defeated Indian Chief Bamba Tabu, alias Yaqui Joe, with a series of flying head scissors in 25 minutes, and Jack Kelly disposed of Jim Austeri in the opener with a body press in 23.

35 Novice Bouts to Open Golden Gloves

Approximately 35 novice bouts will be staged tomorrow night at Turner's Arena when the sixth annual Golden Gloves tournament gets under way at 8:30 p. m.

A total of 67 youngsters last night reported at District Boxing Commission headquarters for weighing in. Sixty-five okayed, with two rejected because of recent operations.

Several servicemen entrants were unable to report and were given permission to weigh in either today or tomorrow.

Overconfidence Not in Bears' Make-up, Says Pro Publicist

'42 Record Ample Proof —Strickler

Redskins Can Toss Out Overconfidence Angle; Holy Cross Win no Example

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

"The Bears lose the play-off because of overconfidence? Hardly!", George Strickler, director of public relations of the National Pro Football League said yesterday as he came to town to dispose of preliminaries for the December 13 championship game at Griffith Stadium.

"I'm not making any predictions on the outcome as I think it's anybody's ball game but you can look at the Chicago record for the season and toss out that overconfidence angle" said Strickler, the one-time Notre Dame publicity man who put the Four Horsemen on horses.

"The Redskins look to be the best team the Bears will play this year and have the Bears let up on any of those inferior other clubs? No. They have been running up scores in the 30s, 40s and 50s and in the last five minutes they are rolling just as hard for another score as they were at the outset."

"The Bears have been playing teams they figured to beat by several touchdowns, games where they had an opportunity to loaf, but did they? No, you bet your life they didn't. They poured it on. The lowest score the Bears have been held to this season is 16 points against the Detroit Lions and that game was in knee-deep mud on a field not fit for scoring."

Strickler was definitely of opinion that the champion Chicagoans may have their faults, but if they are going to be beaten it's going to be on the football field and not by any such angle as overconfidence.

"They know the Redskins are a good outfit," Strickler went on, "and if they can score 73 points again they will do it. That club is not going to let up mentally before or in a game on the basis of their play thus far. They've been keyed up all season and certainly they would not enter the championship game, which means everything to them, in an overconfident frame of mind."

Strickler's opinion fitted in with the writer's conversation with a man close to pro football at the George Washington University smoker Tuesday night. This pro grid follower was comparing the possibility of the Bears coming here full of overconfidence and losing with the Boston College loss to Holy Cross. It was his opinion that the same thing could not happen to the Bears.

"Boston College did not know how to lose or to come from behind They thought they were too good and dissention had already riddled the team," the speaker said. "But that will never be the case with the Bears. They have come from behind, they have lost games, and they do not think they are good in the same sense as that braggart Boston College club. These Redskin fans who are betting on the game and saying, "Well, Holy Cross beat Boston College," had better save their money or at least bet with the idea that the Redskins are a better club.

Have Patience, Espey Asks of Redskin Fans

Tickets for the championship playoff game December 13 with the Chicago Bears will not be available for a few days and the successful applicants will be notified in advance by mail as to where and when to pick up the tickets, Jack Espey, general manager of the Redskins, repeated yesterday.

The mailing of tickets was in a large sense to prevent scalping and required five times the expense of selling them over the counter, Espey explained, and he requests the applicants to have a little patience as calls to the Redskin office will avail nothing. All purchasers will be notified sometime the end of this week or the first part of next.

Indianapolis Takes Ritson From Lions

The Indianapolis Capitals yesterday stepped in to claim Al Ritson, promising winger of the Washington Lions, as part payment in the deal which has brought Left Winger Freddy Weaver and Defenseman Cully Simon to the Lions.

The Capitals, in turn, are sending Ritson to Providence to round out an early season transaction with the Rhode Island Reds, and Ritson will be included in the Providence line-up which faces the Green Shirts at Uline Arena Saturday at 8:30.

Tony Graboski, clever defenseman, acquired from Les Canadiens in exchange for Defenseman Charley Phillips yesterday, as well as Weaver and Simon, are to join the Lions in Cleveland tonight for their American Hockey League match with the Cleveland Barons.

Graboski and Simon, a pair of 190-pound defensemen, and Weaver, a fast, flashy winger, are expected to put some needed punch into a team that has lost seven games and played a tie as against one victory in its last nine starts.

Indications yesterday were that Weaver will replace Ritson on the kid line that otherwise finds Leo Richard at center and Jimmy Jamieson at right wing.

The Lions not only have strengthened their squad, but also have increased the box office appeal by acquisition of Weaver and Graboski.

Graboski last season was one of the keymen in Washington's successful late season bid for a place in the American Hockey League's playoffs. Also he was one of three Les Canadiens borrowed from Les Canadiens in early season when the Lions defeated Providence in their home opener at Uline's, 4 to 2.

Weaver, an 18-year-old platinum blond, was a huge favorite with the Washington Eagles last season, and will be welcomed back by hosts of admirers here. He is an exceptionally fast skater, an able stickhandler and brilliant on defense.

The Lions were shut out by the Barons in their last invasion of Cleveland, 4-0, but played Cleveland to a tie here last Saturday night, 3-3. They departed for the Forest City last night after having taken a final turn on the ice yesterday.

Great Lakes Gridders Voted Top Service '11'

Bernie Bierman's Iowa Seahawks Win Second Place in Sports Writer Poll

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 2.—The Great Lakes Naval Training Station, still known for the mighty football team it turned out during World Ward I, again is the Nation's leading service football power.

In the opinion of 91 sports writers participating in an Associated Press poll, the Great Lakes sailors surpassed even the Navy's four preflight schools, which had impressive records against college competition. Despite some poor early-season performances, Great Lakes polled 50 of the 91 first-place votes and amassed a total of 812 points on the usual basis of 10 points for first place, 9 for second, etc.

Seahawks In Second Place

Bernie Bierman's Iowa Pre-Flight Cadets, known as the Seahawks, earned second place with 773 points on the strength of a heavy second-place vote. Only 12 experts picked the Seahawks for the top spot, but 44 listed them second and 24 picked them for third. The Georgia Pre-Flight "Skycrackers" drew 28 first-place votes, but were third in the tabulation with 743 points. The North Carolina and California Pre-Flight schools followed with 591 and 527 points, respectively. Sixth place went to still another Navy outfit, the Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Air Station, with 386 points.

Although the tours of the Eastern and Western Army All-Star teams at the start of the season showed the Army has a wealth of football power in its ranks, the top-ranking Army team which played through the season as a unit was Camp Grant, Ill., polling 151 points.

The standing of the teams in the poll (first-place votes in parentheses, points figured on 10-9-8-7, ect. basis):

FIRST TEN

Great Lakes N. T. S. (50)	812
Iowa Pre-Flight (12)	773
Georgia Pre-Flight (28)	743
North Carolina Pre-Flight	591
California Pre-Flight (1)	527
Jacksonville N. A. S.	386
Camp Grant	151
Pensacola (Fla.) N. A. S.	115
Manhattan Beach Coast Guard	89
Corpus Christi (Tex.) N. A. S.	88

Other teams figuring in the balloting: Second Air Force (Fort George Wright, Wash.), 80; Fort Knox, Ky., 66; Lakehurst, N. J., Naval Air Station, 43; Fort Monmouth, N. J., 35; Fort Riley, Kans., 13; Camp Davis, N. C., 6; March Field, Calif., 5; Mather Field, Calif., 3; Fort Totten, N. Y., and Spence Field, Fla., 2 each; Camp Shelby, Miss., Fort Douglas, Utah, and Daniel Field, Fla., 1 each.

From First to Seventh

The difficulty of ranking the service teams was indicated by the fact that Great Lakes drew votes for every position from first to seventh. The Iowa Cadets showed the same variation and the Jacksonville Fliers were picked as high as second and as low as ninth.

Great Lakes played only one other service team during the season, beating Camp Grant, 33-0. The only encounter between two Preflight teams saw the Georgia and North Carolina schools play a 14-14 tie. Georgia Preflight also handed Jacksonville and Pensacola trimmings, while Iowa Preflight had a tussle in winning 13-7 from Fort Knox.

Wills to Meet Gene Johnson Next Monday

Frankie Wills, District welterweight champion, has been matched to meet Gene Johnson, New York Negro who scored a unanimous victory over Joe Torres recently, in one of the eight round scraps of Promoter Joe Turner's next ring card at Turner's Arena, Monday night.

Wills, who was defeated only last Monday night by Ken Stribling, local Negro, in one of the big upsets of the indoor season, frankly admitted he was decisively whipped by Stribling, stating he was definitely "off" on his timing and asked for another match with his Negro conqueror. Meanwhile, Al "Bummy" Davis, who is committee to box for Joe Turner shortly, is standing by. Wills, who was supposed to have handily defeated Stribling was to have been offered the shot, but Stribling's unexpected victory upset the plans. Inasmuch as Davis has already kayoed Stribling, another Stribling-Davis match is deemed inadvisable.

The Wills-Johnson bout will be co-featured with the Danny Petro-Billy Reed scrap, another eight rounder. Petro, who has won ten bouts as a professional, has dropped but one—that to Reed, the transplanted Indianapolis Negro, in a torrid battle. Danny is fully confident of reversing the decision and asked for the rematch.

Wills yesterday hied himself off to the Apollo gym as soon as his bout with Johnson was definitely booked.

the franchise, which yesterday he said he hoped could be done today, and that instead of concentrating on one of the "three lines of work" with which the league was considering the problem, the magnates now had half a dozen alternatives under consideration.

Meanwhile, the American League completed its business preliminary to the joint session with the National League and Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis tomorrow. Because of the frail health of Landis, who underwent a minor operation three weeks ago, the joint meeting will be held in his hotel apartment.

The attention of the junior circuit was centered chiefly on reducing travel during the 1943 season and resulted from suggestions offered by Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, whose letter announced Monday was received today.

The National League also found time to take up the Eastman letter briefly and both circuits turned over the matter of travel reduction to the individual clubs with instructions to work out the details.

The American League, with more time than the National, went into the issue thoroughly. President William Harridge said he hoped some series could be eliminated entirely by rescheduling certain games. He estimated that it might be possible to save an additional 5000 miles above the 23,000 which each league already had sliced off its mileage by adopting a "three-trip" schedule.

One of the results predicted was that some clubs would move up games scheduled in the last week of the season to earlier dates and perhaps finish several days ahead of the regular closing day, September 26. The Philadelphia Athletics did this last season.

Frick said he doubted more than 1000 additional miles could be saved in the National League but that the subject would be surveyed at length in the next few weeks.

Frick said that the effect of the Governments salary freezing order had come up for consideration, but that the league had been unable to learn anything definite about its application to baseball contracts.

League Head Resigns From War Department

Chicago, Dec. 2 (AP).—George Trautmann, who had been on leave of absence as President of the American Association while serving as a colonel in the Specialist Corps, announced today the War Department had accepted his resignation from the Army effective yesterday.

The Specialist Corps recently was disbanded.

interhigh runner-up Tech. The other four first-team berths went to Wilson, St. John's Gonzaga and Roosevelt.

Oddly enough, this year's All-Metro team is a new team. There are no "repeats." Four performers who made last year's first team dropped down to the second for assorted reasons and numerous youngsters who hadn't been heard of in 1941 zoomed right up to the big eleven.

Raba Drops Out

The most notable slip of the season was that of Elmer Raba, Gonzaga High back whose place was taken by big, rugged Phil Funk of Woodrow Wilson. A member of the All-Metro eleven for two straight years, Raba battled a knee and shoulder injury most of the season to account for his second-team spot. Funk, a wingman when he wasn't injured in 1941, moved to the backfield and proved the most devastating plunger in town. He boasted the coveted record of never having failed to make a first down for the Tigers when 4 or less yards could do it.

Gonzaga still had a first-string back in the line-up, however, with Ronny Waldron taking over at left half. With Raba ailing, the hard-hitting Waldron handled the running chores for the Eagles and stole the show. Against the Eagles' main rival, St. John's, he turned in his best performance of the year.

Billy Hall, Central's 190-pound tackle who spent last season earning all-Tennessee honors at guard, replaced the second Gonzaga star to step down. A broken hand kept Jim O'Keefe out of three games and limited his action in others, while Hall was managing to shine in all but two of the Vikings' nine outings.

First Year Pays Off

At the other tackle is George Paul, Tech's 200-pound bruiser who had little competition for the top spot in his first full season. His teammate from Tech on The Post team is Johnny Harvil, an easy choice for center and another rookie. A reserve end in 1941, Harvil replaces Washington-Lee's Johnny Grinnell on the all-Metro Club, the latter having shared his pivot post with the Little Generals with John Druckenmiller this season.

Though both played brilliant ball, most observers of Washington-Lee picked Eddie DeCelle over Teammate Jim Sprinkle and thus the drawling veteran gets the quarterback post on the all-Metro team. The backfield is rounded out with a perfect climax runner in Mike Denikos, Central's 138-pounder who kicked, passed and ran best when his foe's goal was within a mere 50 yards or so.

Two of the finest schoolboy ends ever rounded up flank the all-Metro line. Melvin Winfield, of Washington-Lee, has been called "a wonderful college prospect" by one of the local collegiate coaches. On both offense and defense he combined hard work and natural talent to sparkle all season. Charley Howard, the other end from Roosevelt, was particularly outstanding on the offense. He passed and punted for the Riders.

Of the four standout guards in the city, Central's Hank Lawler and St. John's Frank Matthews were honored with all-Metro positions. Both were bulwarks of their teams' forward walls. They earned the berths by polling a few more votes than Tech's Spicer and Wilson's O'Neill.

Women's Golf Group to Hold Meeting Today

The annual winter meeting of the District Women's Golf Association is set for Kenwood Country Club today at 12:30 p.m. with Mrs. Walter L. Weible, of the host club, slated to take the president's chair for a third straight year.

Among the reports will be one concerning the association's part towards the war effort and another on plans for next year, including what will be done with the championship tournament.

Installation of officers will follow the luncheon. Many of the usual reports which take up time at the general meeting will be heard by the executive committee in a preliminary session in order to reduce the time of the luncheon-meeting proper.

Sports Writer Strickler Suggested Job He Now Holds

Wrote of Loop's Need, Then Was Appointed to Post

Several years ago George Strickler, then a Chicago sportswriter, suggested a full-time public relations man was needed in the National Pro Football League office. His idea was adopted and when Elmer Layden moved in as league commissioner in June of 1941 Strickler personally took over his brain child.

The fast-talking Chicagoan was in Washington yesterday and his first outing was a beeline for Griffith Stadium where he supervised plans for enlarging the press box to accommodate an expected 140 reporters and telegraphers for the championship playoff December 13.

Strickler will remain here tomorrow, return to league headquarters in Chicago for the week-end, and come back early next week to handle the thousand-and-one details from the league's standpoint of the playoff and the meeting and drafting of college players the following day.

Under Arch Ward, promoter of the annual prochampion-college all-star game for 10 years, Strickler was close to the league and he was the man behind the elimination of the barnstorming tours of the league champions which usually left a sour taste with the public.

Played Pro Baseball

Strickler's first publicity job was at Notre Dame, where he posed the "Four Horsemen" on horses and started the Nation-wide publicity of the great backfield, of which Layden was a member.

Strickler was asked to take the position at Notre Dame by Knute Rockne, whom he first met when George was the star quarterback of South Bend's Central High team and attended weekly meetings at Rockne's home.

A bad knee cut short any ambitions of college football, first at Indiana and then at Notre Dame, but he played pro baseball in minor leagues in Wisconsin and Michigan.

In addition to covering national championships as a Chicago sportswriter and with International News Service and Gerogia-American, Strickler was publicity man for the Chicago stadium for a year and a half.

Strickler's latest contribution to pro football was the 1942 edition of the National Pro League Record and Roster manual, 235 pages, which tells everything from the organization of the Canton Bulldogs in 1905 to what Sammy Baugh had for breakfast.

Mosconi Tops Greenleaf in Cue Tourney

Detroit, Dec. 2 (AP).—Undefeated Willie Mosconi, who got leave from his war plant job at Jackson, Mich., to compete, pulled away to a long lead today in the World Pocket Billiards Championship by defeating the veteran Ralph Greenleaf of New York, 125 to 96 in 10 innings, for his fourth successive victory.

Second place Andrew Ponzi of Philadelphia meanwhile was beaten by his fellow townsman, Jimmy Caras, 125 to 115 in 23 innings, for his second loss in five starts, and defending champion Irving Crane of Livonia, N. Y., leveled off the field by outshooting Erwin Rudolph of Chardon, Ohio, 125 to 110 in eight innings.

With the weeklong tournament nearing the halfway mark, Crane and Rudolph each has won two and lost two, with Greenleaf winning one in four starts and Caras finally winning one after four straight defeats.

Crane rolled up the day's high run of 68 in his triumph over Rudolph. This came after Rudolph, holding a long lead, had missed a relatively easy shot, and Crane stepped to the table and went out with 68.

Chibears Top Pro League In 18 Ways

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, Dec. 2.—The 1941 edition of the world's champion, Chicago Bears, put most of the team records beyond the reach of its successor, but the 1942 edition is not revealing any tendency to let the matter interfere with its supremacy in the National Football League.

Latest audits reveal the Bears leading the league in 18 departments of team statistics. They are:

1. First downs rushing, 90.
2. Most yards gained, 3652.
3. Average distance of kickoff returns, 28.4 yards.
4. Number of penalties, 88.
5. Yards penalized, 786.
6. Total touchdowns, 50.
7. Touchdowns running, 30.
8. Extra points, 43.
9. Total points, 355.
10. Fewest opponent points allowed, 77.
11. Fewest opponent yards allowed, 1647.
12. Fewest opponent yards allowed rushing, 536.
13. Fewest opponent first downs, 93.
14. Fewest opponent first downs rushing, 35.
15. Fewest opponent rushing attempts, 275.
16. Most opponents' passes intercepted, 31.
17. Most yards interceptions returns, 402.
18. Most touchdowns on intercepted passes, 3.

Police Boys' Club Champs Honored

The Metropolitan Police Boys' Club will honor its 125 and 140-pound champion football teams tonight at 7 p. m. at the Ambassador Hotel.

Club No. 5, from Southwest Washington, won both class championships, the first club to win two titles in a year. The entire squad of 42 will be present.

Jim Pixlee, former football coach at George Washington and director of physical training for the Army Air Corps will be the principal speaker. Several board members will be present.

Football movies will be included in the entertainment.

Sheldon Boxes Biggers on Uline Shows

A pair of newcomers yesterday were signed by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn to box on the Liberty Athletic Club's all-talent heavyweight elimination show at Uline Arena Tuesday night.

Johnny Sheldon, a 6-foot-2-inch, 195-pound former New Jersey State amateur heavyweight champion and winner of eight consecutive professional starts, meets Dan Biggers, a Negro heavyweight employed in Baltimore's shipyards, in special 6-round support of cofeatured sixes pitting "One Man Gang" Earl Lowman vs. Adam Spenser and Corpl. Buddy Knox vs. King Kong.

Ahearn's policy of featuring six bouts of six rounds each at popular prices of 50 cents, $1 and $1.50, plus tax, met with favor yesterday and many reservations were reported during the day.

"We've got 6500 seats available and if we can fill them at these prices we can give the public some fine club fights in the future," Ahearn said. "Also we can build up for bigger shows.

"We expect to select opponents for Buddy Walker and Jimmy Bivins from this show, and also to discover other talent for the future."

Three additional bouts await announcement.

War Sidelights

Weak Voice Revives Talk Il Duce Is Ill

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's coughing and labored breathing on the radio today supported recent reports that he is a sick man. Obviously, he made his long speech with effort.

The Fascist commentators did lip service by noting that Il Duce appeared "vibrant with energy," but listeners outside Italy said he began coughing and breathing heavily within two minutes of the start of his 81-minute speech.

Reliable sources in Europe on November 23 said Mussolini was considering an operation for stomach ulcers which developed four years ago. Four days later a reliable South American diplomatic source said in Montevideo that Mussolini was gravely ill with stomach ulcers, complicated by a heart condition.

Raff a Full Colonel

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Dec. 2 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Edson Raff, who trained United States parachute troops for the invasion of North Africa, was promoted to full colonel today in recognition of the accomplishments of his outfit.

It was officially disclosed that Colonel Raff's men celebrated his thirty-fifth birthday November 15 by landing from the air on a Tunisian airdrome, capturing it, and then beating off Axis attempts to regain the field.

Nazis' Release Probed

Salvador, Bahia State, Brazil, Dec. 2 (AP).—The state government today ordered investigation of officials recently ousted for an order that freed 28 imprisoned Axis subjects.

Official reports said 25 fromer prisoners already had been recaptured, 2 more surrendered voluntarily, and the other still was missing. Those rearrested, they added, were suspected of espionage.

Leaders Honor Dead

Algiers, Dec. 2 (AP).—In his first public appearance since officially taking control of French North Africa, Admiral Jean Darlan participated today with Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in laying a wreath on the tomb of France's Unknown Soldier in Algeria.

In the group also was Gen. Henri Honore Giraud.

Nelson Assures Help Will Be Given to Meet '43 Crop Goals

By the Associated Press

Declaring he considered food production just as essential as the manufacture of tanks and airplanes, Chairman Donald M. Nelson assured farmers yesterday that the War Production Board would grant agriculture all the assistance possible in meeting record 1943 production goals.

The WPB chief gave this assurance in a talk before a meeting of the National Association of State Commissioners, Secretaries and Directors of Agriculture. Officials of the organization had warned that shortages of farm labor, machinery, transportation facilities and other equipment threatened next year's production.

Production Problem

"But it is necessary," Nelson said, "that everyone recognize that he can't have everything that he would like to have in the way of productive facilities. We at WPB realize that farmers need a lot more machinery, but there are a lot of other things that must be produced if we are to get this war over in a year or two instead of letting it drag along until 1946.

"However, I wish to assure farmers that we consider the production of food and fiber materials to be just as essential as the manufacture of tanks and airplanes. And we want to do everything possible to help you."

Ending a day-long discussion of Government manpower, price control and farm production policies, the association adopted a resolution asking Congress to amend price control legislation to require that ceilings on agricultural products be established on the basis of parity prices which included farm labor costs. It was estimated that such an amendment would raise the level of farm prices at least 5 per cent.

Asks More Work Hours

After hearing several State commissioners criticize the Government for retaining the AAA crop control programs and the 40-hour work week, the association adopted another resolution asking for the elimination of "any and all restrictions limiting man hours of production of essential products, materials and functions." The commissioners also asked that the Selective Service System revise its regulations to permit the deferment of a greater number of farm workers.

Allies Hurl Back Counterattack

railway already has been severed.

American P-38's and British Spitfires swept widely over the French protectorate, shooting down eight Germans and losing only one plane in the last 24 hours, headquarters said. Flying Fortresses have virtually wrecked the Aouina airdrome at Tunis, as well as the air base at Bizerte.

The Berlin radio said the British and French forces "have reached Axis defense lines before Tunis and Bizerte," indicating that the main battle was on.

A French and American column previously was reported to have reached the eastern coastal road between Sfax and Gabes, severing Axis communications with Tripoli. Thus the 20,000 to 30,000 Germans and Italians were loosely wedged into isolated positions around Bizerte, Tunis and Gabes for reduction in detail.

Bombers continued nonstop raids on Bizerte, and on Tunis and Tripoli. Others raked Sicily from one end to the other, seeking to immobilize the fountainhead of enemy supplies, reinforcements and air power.

"Both German land and air forces are still fighting hard and making no effort to pull out," an Allied headquarters spokesman said. He reiterated that a hard fight was ahead, that there was no evidence of a German withdrawal.

The Morocco radio said Allied troops were fighting a sizable Axis force between Gabes and Sfax on the east coast of Tunisia. Patrols have been active there several days and the main enemy troops were believed to be Italians. Germans are concentrated at Bizerte and Tunis.

Across Tripolitania at El Agheila, the reinforced British Eighth Army gave signs that it was ready to attack Marshal Erwin Rommel's strong defense line. Artillery, patrols and planes were active. Perhaps preparing the home front for another setback, the Germans said the British had been reinforced with a tank division and added fighter planes.

British artillery already had successfully engaged" German field guns.

Air combat increased to a moderate scale over the forward area where three enemy planes were destroyed and others were damaged.

North Africa Communique

The War Department communique, issued in Washington, follows:

"1. Allied forces in the Tebourba area have repulsed an enemy counterattack.

"2. Bombing attacks on the airfields at Tunis and Bizerte have continued. Light bombers and fighters have been cooperating in support of our forward troops. Seven enemy aircraft have been destroyed. Five of our aircraft are missing.

"3. The royal navy is assisting in the provision of cover for the advance of our forces."

You can't expect a true whiskey connoisseur to be subtle when it comes to hinting for a holiday gift of Calvert Reserve. You see, this extra-quality whiskey has a delectable "soft" flavor that makes it unique. Plus a delightful knack of blending with—rather than overpowering—the other ingredients in mixed drinks. It's grand to give, and grand to be given Calvert Reserve..."the choicest you can give or serve." Happy hinting yourself!

ing sacrifice, affecting directly or indirectly in some way, every man, woman and child."

However, observers pointed out that the cabinet shift plan was still a possibility since the oil job was given to the Secretary of Interior, rather than to Ickes by name.

The President's executive order gave Ickes power to order rationing of petroleum products to civilians where shortages of supplies make it necessary.

Rationing of gasoline to save rubber—a job now supervised by Jeffers—was not placed under Ickes control.

As in the case of rationing ordered by Jeffers, the Office of Price Administration will act to carry out any rationing directive from Ickes. In actual practice, Ickes authority over gasoline rationing will be limited to reducing the quotas allowed to shortage areas such as the East Coast, the allotment permitted by Jeffers to save rubber.

With WPB Approval

Specific provision is made for the setting-up of an allocations program for oil by Ickes with the approval of the War Production Board. A high Government official who asked to remain anonymous recently charged that the current shortage of oil on the East Coast was partly due to the lack of a planned program for allocation of petroleum products comparable to the allocation program now in effect for steel.

As a preliminary to setting up the allocations program, the President authorized Ickes to secure estimates of oil requirements from the War and Navy Departments, the Lend-Lease Administration, the State Department, Board of Economic Warfare and the War Production Board.

To Form Policies

Ickes was authorized to "establish basic policies and formulate plans and programs to assure for the prosecution of the war, the conservation and most effective development and utilization of petroleum in the United States and possessions, issue necessary policy and operating directives to parties engaged in the petroleum industry, and appoint such general, regional, local, or functional petroleum industry committees or councils as the administrator finds necessary."

of-membership clause because of a strike. The clause was withdrawn from an A. F. L. chemical workers union, which called a strike at East Alton, Ill., on September 8. Two hundred men walked out of a powder plant, causing three days of idleness for 10,000 cartridge workers.

The WLB rebuked the union for "irresponsible disregard of its national obligations" and the employer, the East Alton Manufacturing Co. (a subsidiary of the Western Cartridge Co.) for its "anti-union attitude."

Although withdrawing the maintenance-of-membership clause, the WLB said the union might apply in six months for its reinstatement.

Allies May Use Dakar as Base

Informed sources believed the use of Dakar by the Allies was a certainty, with only the extent to be determined, and naval quarters were quick to point out the advantages.

Furthermore, Allied control of Dakar's excellent harbor and good facilities would change the entire balance of sea power in the South Atlantic, where U-boat activity is expected to increase along African supply lines.

Another source declared one of the best bits of news that could come from Dakar would be official information that naval units there had come over to the Fighting French.

Units there include the cruisers Georges Leygues, Gloire and Montcalm; the destroyers Fantasques, Malin and Terrible; three 1500-ton submarines and six 600-ton submarines.

All these are understood to be in fighting trim and ready to go on active operations on short notice. The battleship Richelieu is also at Dakar but is not in commission.

84 Ships Turned Out in November

American shipbuilders moved nearer President Roosevelt's 1942 objective of 8 million tons of new cargo vessels, the Maritime Commission announced yesterday, by delivering 84 vessels totaling 891,700 deadweight tons in November.

The month's shipyard production raised the year's total to 625 vessels of 6,890,000 tons, leaving 1,110,000 tons to be delivered in December if the President's "blueprint for victory" goal is to be met.

The commission said its December schedules indicate the shipyards "will turn out the required tonnage." This would mean a record-breaking achievement of 100 vessels or more in December.

The committeemen parried all questions on possible detailed application of the new formula, pointing out that it was still subject to ratification of the executive councils.

The newsmen were particularly interested in securing comment on its application to the current dispute between the A. F. of L. Metal Trades unions and the C. I. O. Marine and Shipbuilding Workers involving three shipyards operated by Henry Kaiser, but the members declined to make any statement on the dispute.

The Kaiser dispute was brought before the National Labor Relations Board by the C. I. O. union which filed a complaint that Kaiser had signed an illegal closed shop contract with the A. F. of L. The A. F. of L. unions have raised a defense fund to fight the C. I. O. and the NLRB on the issue.

Washington labor observers pointed out that inability to settle jurisdictional disputes has been one of the most conspicious labor-relations failures of the war, causing occasional work stoppages.

"We are convinced that if peace negotiations are to be successful and unity achieved, cooperation among our respective members and organizations must be encouraged and promoted," the statement, issued yesterday, said.

"It is our belief that it would be extremely difficult to make satisfactory progress toward unity through these negotiations if in the meantime, there is absence of practical cooperation between the two organizations."

Bore No Fruit

Previous "unity" conferences were held in 1937 and 1939, but failed to bear any fruit. Early this year, John L. Lewis, former president of the C. I. O. and head of the powerful United Mine Workers, wrote open letters to Murray and William Green, president of the A. F. L., suggesting that immediate steps be taken to "accouple" the two organizations.

Lewis' move was viewed at the time as an effort to reestablish his power and prestige in the labor movement and top labor leaders immediately moved to head it off. The result was the "stop-gap" formation of the joint C. I. O.-A. F. L. "labor victory committee" which meets regularly with President Roosevelt on national labor policy.

This step, in effect a rebuff to Lewis, eventually led to his withdrawing his union from the C. I. O. greatly weakening that organization.

tenant colonel, jumping the grade of major.

For his brilliant combat record in the Philippines, Wagner was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross in December. Later he was decorated with the Purple Heart for wounds received in action.

During the dark days last winter and spring, while the Japanese rolled implacably down from the Philippines to Java, Wagner's exploits were a bright promise of the vengeance to come. In December he destroyed 26 Jap aircraft at Vigan on Luzon Island and added almost daily to his score. When flying in the Philippines was no longer possible, he escaped to Australia.

In May he led an assault on Lae and Salamaua in New Guinea, shot down three Japs and left another in flames.

Colonel Wagner returned to the United States last summer after serving on the staff of Brig. Gen. Houston George in Australia.

Born at Emeigh, Pa., October 25, 1916, Colonel Wagner became a flying cadet at Randolph Field, Texas, in 1937, after three years as a student of aeronautical engineering at the University of Pittsburgh. He was graduated as an airplane pilot and commissioned second lieutenant at Kelly Field, Texas, in 1938. After service as Selfridge Field, Mich., he was assigned to duty in the Philippines in 1940. His home is at Johnstown, Pa.

was methodically destroying enemy gun emplacements, dugouts and blockhouses. One tank unit was said to have killed 200 Germans, crippled 7 tanks and captured 10 mortars with their stockpiles of ammunition.

In another sector of this salient between the Don and Volga Rivers, the communique said Russian troops beat off German counter-attacks and wiped out 600 Nazis.

Southwest of Stalingrad more than 500 more Germans fell, the Russians said, and the Red Army also destroyed 8 enemy tanks, 31 guns, 18 trucks and 16 ammunition wagons.

Inside Stalingrad only artillery and patrol activities occurred yesterday in the northern factory area, but one enemy infantry company was said to have been destroyed.

Dispatches said the Germans still were clinging to their positions in the city although weakened by the withdrawal of some units to counter Soviet advances elsewhere. The newspaper Red Star also said the Nazis were being hammered into gradual retreat on the central front, where many German divisions had lost more than half their men.

War Outlook Best In 3 Years—Knox

Calls Navy Greater Than Ever, Says Japs Have Lost 5 to 1

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 2.—Viewing the war outlook as the brightest in three years, Secretary of Navy Knox disclosed today that Japanese casualties are believed five times greater than America's and that the United States Navy is larger and more powerful than—"the day before Pearl Harbor."

Balancing the Nation's books of war near the end of a year of fighting, Knox told the National Association of Manufacturers' convention in a prepared speech:

"We have expended a lot of precious ships and materiel, but we have exacted a toll the enemy can ill afford."

The Navy Secretary asserted that while Japanese casualty figures could not be trusted even "if they were published," United States intelligence officers estimate that since December 7, 1941, to November 25, "the Japanese in all theaters have lost in killed or permanently injured roughly 250,000 men."

Approximately 37,000, he said, are navy casualties or about 10 per cent of the estimated Japanese naval personnel. United States naval losses, he said, are about 1 per cent of the personnel strength and estimates of comparative loss and damage of ships and planes is "equally encouraging."

"We have a larger and more powerful Navy measured in tonnage, air power or anything else," he added, "than the day before Pearl Harbor—or the day after Pearl Harbor. Production records have been broken on almost every type of craft and I might add that the Navy uses more than 150 different types.

"I think you would like to know that the private companies and Government yards which are building combat ships are setting records equal to anything now being achieved in the production of merchant ships."

Acknowledging that in the war effort America had displayed "timidity, hesitancy, inefficiency, confusion, waste and all the other things the critics say," Knox declared that in contrast:

"We have converted the greatest peaceful industrial plant into the greatest arsenal of all time.

"We have maintained our freedoms and our solvency at home.

"We have an army in the South Pacific, an army in Britain and an army in Africa, and we have equipped them.

"'We have a navy on all the seas and it has no apologies for its performance to date.

"We have mounted offensives in two hemispheres.

"And the first anniversary of the war is still to come," he added. "Yes, I think as long as we do not overlook our failures there is nothing very immoral about taking a little comfort from our successes. I have said it before, and I will again risk the assertion, that in view of the complexities and the enormity of the task to date this has been America's best run war."

On the debit side, the Secretary of Navy cited the Nation's 50,000 men killed and missing since Pearl Harbor, the "staggering total" of 46 billions of dollars spent on munitions and war construction this year, and predicted that the bill for 1943 would be more than 70 billions of dollars.

"And we might as well face the hard fact right now," he said, "that we have a tough period directly ahead of us in the Atlantic. The operations in North Africa have tremendously increased the Navy's task.

Representative Melvin J. Maas (Republican), Minnesota, at the convention charged there was no real unity of political or military command among the United Nations and termed the American invasion of Africa a "compromise" second front.

Maas, Marine Corps Reserve colonel, who last November said this country's armed forces lacked unity of command in the Pacific, called upon the Allies to formulate and announce their postwar plans.

In an address prepared for delivery at the National Association of Manufacturers' convention which opened today he said:

"Four great political leaders dominate the United Nations' war effort—Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Churchill, Mr. Stalin and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

"They do not have an announced common agreement upon the major strategy of the war. In the military field there is a war committee in Washington, another in London, Stalin and his generals directing the war in Russia, Chiang Kai-shek doing the same in China, a war council in Australia, and two leaders of the non-Vichy French.

"There is no real agreement as to timing of the various offensive actions, nor even as to the methods of fighting the war. There is no real unity, in the military sense, of either political or military command among the United Nations."

Axis Sees 'Suppression' Of U. S. Newspapers

On September 5 Elmer Davis, director of War Information, announced that 239 nonessential Government publications issued in Washington had been discontinued and 284 others curtailed in order to clear the way for more important war information.

On November 29, the OWI announced yesterday, the German-controlled radio from Paris said: "The Washington director of United States War Information Bureau has decided to suppress 239 great United States newspapers and 280 other publications have suffered considerable reduction in size and circulation."

Deadly Designs

U. S. Building Some Amazing New Planes

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, Dec. 2.—The United States has some secret new planes that are "enough to make the angels gasp," the American Society of Mechanical Engineers was told today.

Maj. Nathaniel F. Silsbee, of the Army Air Force, explained in a paper prepared for a meeting of society that a score of new fighters, bombers and transports are under test. Many, he said, already have been flown, but are still on the secret list.

Alterations Quickly Made

In addition to the new designs, the air force has developed a method of making wholesale alterations in planes after manufacture. This is done in places called modification centers, of which he said there are dozens.

These centers make quick alterations demanded by battle conditions, such as, said Major Silsbee, installing different type guns, or refitting with a landing gear that will not crack up in desert fighting.

Such centers altered Doolittle's planes to fit the bombing of Japan. They have painted planes a dusty pink for the Egyptian desert, and fitted others for Arctic regions.

Tail Gun Was Surprise

He said that the tail gun added to the Flying Fortress caught the Nips so by surprise that nearly 100 Japanese planes were downed before a single ship was able to get back to tell the others what was happening.

"As the war proceeds," he added, "there is no intimating what further surprises in the way of speedy alteration and adaptation are in store for the Axis."

America is not building planes on a strictly mass production basis, but keeping the production fluid. Nevertheless, he said, there were present large-scale orders for planes in 1000 and even 5000 lots.

$67,200 Salary Limit Decreed

enable the employe to "maintain his customary contributions to charitable, educational or other organizations." However, the employe must establish "to the satisfaction" of the Government that he cannot maintain these contributions from his other income, without "undue hardship."

Up to Revenue Bureau

Similarly allowances may be made for insurance premiums, provided the employe cannot pay them from other income "without disposing of assets at a substantial financial loss resulting in undue hardship." The same kind of allowances are permissible for some fixed obligations.

Also, if the employe cannot meet his income taxes due on past income without sacrificing assets and suffering undue hardship, he may be allowed sufficient additional salary to take care of the taxes. Thus, it was apparent that in many cases the gross salary allowed would be far above $67,200.

Concerning other salaries, raises and decreases will be possible, but most of them must first be approved by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The regulations made clear that bonuses, gifts, loans, commissions, fees, additional compensation and any other remuneration in any form would be considered as falling within the concept of salary or salary payment.

However, the bureau left a loophole for payment of customary Christmas bonuses provided they do not exceed those paid last year.

The regulations stated that the burden of justifying an increase in salary rate "shall in every instance be upon the employer."

"Increases in salary rates will not be approved," the regulations continued, "unless necessary to correct maladjustments or inequalities or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war."

A promise made by an employer to his employes prior to October 3, 1942, that salaries would be increased in the future, the regulations added, "is generally to be ignored in determining whether an increase after that date should be approved."

An increase in salaries below $5000 may be approved, however, "if to deny such increase would be to force the continuation of a salary which is below the general level existing for the same or comparable work in the local area on September 15, 1942."

In cases of salaries of less than $5000 existing on October 3 or established in accordance with the regulations, the general rule is that no decrease can be made by the employer below the highest salary rate paid for such work in the local area between January 1 and September 15.

"A decrease is permitted, however," the regulations stated, "with the approval of the commissioner in order to correct a gross inequity in any case or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war."

Federal Bond Ratio of D. C. Banks Is High

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington banks have 87.1 per cent of all their security investments concentrated in Government bonds, a survey showed yesterday. The average for all the Nation's banks was 79.25.

The local ratio was exceeded only by that of two States, Maryland with 87.2 per cent and Oregon with 87.6 per cent.

The high percentage of such holdings in D. C. commercial banks indicates the relatively strong liquid position of the institutions here. It also reflects the lack of investment outlets which, with the resultant reduced earnings, have caused the majority of local banks to announce a reduction of interest rates to 1 per cent on savings deposits.

The statistics further indicate the local banks are doing their part in helping to finance the war. With the Victory Loan campaign under way this month, a further increase in holdings of Government securities will be made by Washington banks.

Distribution of Government security holdings of commercial banks is as follows by States:

Alabama, 65.71; Arizona, 80.58; Arkansas, 65.01; California, 77.19; Colorado, 78.86; Connecticut, 77.55; Delaware, 70.61.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Two Big Purchases Here

Two more large purchases of Government securities in the current Victory Loan drive here were announced last night by Winslow B. Van Devanter, chairman of the Victory Fund Committee for the District of Columbia.

The Continental Life Insurance Co., Inc., bought $350,000 worth and Equitable Life Insurance Co. purchased $200,000 of the new Treasury 2½ per cent bonds due 1963 to 1968.

On the first day, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. purchased $2,500,000 of the same issue.

Purchases by large investors here have been coming in at a gratifying rate, said Mr. Van Devanter, but it was still too early to report on results from the small investors. He emphasized that it was the smaller buyers especially that the campaign was trying to reach.

$20,697,574 Bonds Sold in First Day

Sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District on the first day of the Victory Loan drive totaled $20,697,574, Edward C. Anderson, executive manager of the district campaign, announced.

Anderson said he was "very encouraged" at the initial response to the drive, according to the Associated Press dispatch.

"There is more interest shown in the sale of the Government securities now than at any time since the war started," he declared.

The figure announced, which is the total for Monday only, does not include $7,549,000 in surplus funds which the State of Virginia is investing in Government securities.

With nearly 39 million dollars in bonds already subscribed, the two-day-old Victory Fund campaign in Maryland was off to a fast start, John Redwood, jr., manager for the Baltimore area, reported. He said that the figure included $37,366,000 subscribed in Baltimore alone and $1,493,000 in other parts of the State.

Mail Revenues at New High

Further new all-time records were established by Washington postoffice receipts in November and the first 11 months this year, according to Postmaster Vincent C. Burke.

The month's mail revenues at the City Postoffice totaled $1,074,415, as compared with $825,053 in the same month last year, or a jump of 30 per cent.

The 11 months' revenues aggregated $10,594,524, as compared with $8,517,755 in the same 1941 period.

Primm Wins High Honor

Paul H. Primm of Washington, a field underwriter for the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, already has qualified as a member of his company's National Field Club for the year ending in June 1943, according to Thomas P. Morgan, jr., Washington manager.

Mr. Primm, a graduate of Georgetown University, joined the Mutual Life in 1924. He is a past president of the Washington Life Underwriters' Association, chairman of the board of trustees of Calvary Baptist Church and vice president of the Central High School Alumni Association.

Door Called Trap In Boston Disaster

Patron Says 200-300 Lost Lives at Club's Big Revolving Exit

By the Associated Press

Boston, Dec. 2.—An assertion that a revolving door cost two or three hundred lives in the Cocoanut Grove fire and testimony that originally fireproofed decorations required annual re-flameproofing were given to a board of inquiry today.

While law enforcement officials pressed their plans for presentation of evidence for action by a grand jury, possibly next week, church bells tolled for more than 100 funeral services in various New England communities, some of them marking the burial of two or three persons in the same family.

James H. Mooney, Boston building commissioner, told an investigating board that on the basis of the building laws Cocoanut Grove provided normal egress for 1397 persons, and when asked how many exits should be provided for a panic crowd, he answered:

Can't Handle Panic

"I don't believe a panic crowd could be handled even if more exits were provided. I think there would have been a great loss of life."

Asked how he accounted for the great loss of life at the night club, Mooney said:

"I don't believe most of the people reached the exits."

A 3-year-old child was revealed as one of those in the night club when the fire broke out last Saturday night and it was believed the youngster was among those who escaped.

Meanwhile, revised figures of the Boston committee on public safety showed 490 lost their lives in the holocaust and 174 other persons were in hospitals. Only three unidentified bodies remained in Boston mortuaries.

Were Fireproofed Over

Ruben O. Bodenhorn of Boston, a designer of night clubs here and in New York, told of the fireproofing of the Cocoanut Grove. He said the decorative materials were fireproofed when installed but required re-flameproofing at least once a year.

George J. Hayes of Quincy, a patron, told the inquest:

"If it wasn't for that revolving door two or three hundred persons could have gotten out."

Licensing agencies closed the doors of 56 night spots while investigating safety conditions in the city's clubs, restaurants and hotels and continued the ban against entertainment in any of Boston's 1161 eating and drinking places.

Frederick Area Dealers Start Rationing Milk

Frederick, Md., Dec. 2 (AP).—Milk rationing was placed in effect today by several Frederick dealers who said their supplies continued to dwindle.

Meanwhile, word was being awaited from the Office of Price Administration in Washington whether any increase in retail ceiling prices would be granted dealers in this area.

Dealers asserted, however, that the increase, if approved, would have to be more than 1 cent per quart in order to keep going.

Dealears said the rationing was being done as equitably as possible, depending on the amount served customers in the past. The program included house deliveries and wholesale deliveries to stores and restaurants.

The contention was that the Frederick area was not getting its necessary amount of milk beeause higher ceiling prices in other areas were draining the local market supplied.

The opinion was expressed by dealers that there also had been an actual drop in producton since the cold weather set in.

U. S. Cafes Say Prices Can't Be Cut

Although the Office of Price Administration has evidenced interest in the food prices being charged in Government cafeterias, operators of the cafeterias yesterday discounted the possibility that such interest would lead to lowered prices.

"We just simply couldn't meet expense," declared Capt. Frank Hoover, general manager of the Welfare and Recreational Association, which operates most of the cafeterias, "if we were forced to charge less than we do now. And I don't think they'd want to run us out of business."

He said OPA officials had contacted him several days ago relative to a price increase instituted November 1 to cover an anticipated pay increase of 9 per cent for 3800 employes of the association. The pay increases, Hoover said, have been submitted to the War Labor Board for approval and when and if they become effective will be retroactive to November 1. The increase, he added, averages about 1 cent a check.

Declines OPA offer

Hoover said the OPA offered to make a cost analysis of the association's services, but he declined. "We know down to the last fraction of a cent what our costs are," he said.

From the OPA it was learned that that agency does have authority to place ceilings on prepared food served in restaurants, including Government cafeterias, although there are no such ceilings at the present time.

6 Poison Victims Released

Meantime, six of 11 persons confined to Emergency Hospital with food poisoning were discharged yesterday while an investigation of the causes of the poisoning in the Pentagon Building cafeteria was being pushed by War Department officials.

Over 50 persons were taken ill, but not all were taken to hospitals.

It is expected the probe will be completed before Secretary Henry L. Stimson holds a press conference today.

Those discharged were John Clausen, 5712 Eleventh Street, North Arlington, Va.; Sally Bombs, 1632 Nicholson Street Northwest; John Redd, 418 South Lee Avenue, Alexandria; Bartholomew Williams, Negro, 1814 Rosedale Street Northeast; Francis Caulfield, 1614 Holbrook Street, Baltimore, Md., and John Bailey, 2707 Upshur Street, Mount Rainier, Md.

Jews Start 8-Day Celebration Of Chanuko Festival Tonight

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Followers of Judaism engaged in the world struggle of the four freedoms tonight will begin commemoration of an ancient victorious battle for religious freedom—Chanuko, Festival of the Lights.

The faithful will light one candle tonight in homes and synagogues and one taper on each successive night of the eight-day celebration—recalling the rededication of the temple at Jerusalem after a bitter but triumphant fight against Syrian oppression in 165 B. C.

History records that when the temple was restored a tiny bottle of holy oil which generally lasted one day burned for eight days. Jewish hero of that era was Juda Maccabee, who led the movement to overthrow King Antiochus Epiphanes, who demanded that the Jews give up their worship of God.

Services Tonight

Some synagogues will have Chanuko services tonight, others will combine their regular Friday night services with the Chanuko celebration and numerous other events of a spiritual and social nature have been arranged for the Jewish community for the celebration.

The Washington Hebrew Congregation will mark Chanuko at its services tomorrow at 8 p. m. at 822 Eighth Street Northwest, and with a children's service there Sunday at 12 p. m.

Chanuko lights also will burn in the lobby of the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q Strets Northwest, where a number of social holiday events are scheduled.

Dance Sunday

Servicemen's get-together and discussion will be held at the Center Sunday afternoon, followed by a "candlelight dance." Dance hostesses will be members of the Minneapolitans of the Center, comprising war workers from Minneapolis, Minn.

About 200 children will have a Chanuko party at the Center Tuesday at 4 p. m., when they will present a dance-drama, "The Spinning Top."

Expenditure Lists Must Be Filed By Tomorrow

Tomorrow is the deadline for candidates in the November 3 election in Montgomery County, Md., to file with the clerk of the Circuit Court of Rockville sworn statements of their expenditures during the campaign.

The statement of Royal H. Garlock, elected to the House of Delegates as a Democrat, shows that he spent $628.23, and other candidates have reported expenditures as follows: Edward S. Dalaplane, elected chief judge of the Sixth Judicial Circuit of Maryland to succeed himself, $1,523.55; John R. Reeves, unsuccessful candidate of the Independent Party for State's attorney, $193; Charles M. Orms, Independent, defeated on the face of the returns for sheriff, $140; J. William Garrett, Independent, who lost to the Democratic candidate for register of wills, $140.18; Walter Johnson, Republican, reelected county commissioner, $105; James W. Gill, Democrat, elected to the House of Delegates, $34.82, and Stephen James, elected to the charter board, none.

Obituaries

Dr. Richardson, Civic Leader, Dies at 88

Dr. George H. Richardson, 88, District lawyer, doctor, teacher and a founder of the Federation of Civic Associations, died yesterday at his home, 309 Eleventh Street Northwest, following a long illness.

RICHARDSON

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, he was educated there and at Howard University, Washington, of whose first graduating class he was the last surviving member.

After teaching in Prince William County, Va., he came to the Nation's Capital to accept a clerkship in the Sixth Auditor's office as a Government accountant. He was for two years secretary to Representative Amos Townsend (Republican) of Cleveland.

Appointed a member of the Board of Education, he served for three years, during which time he assembled statistics and furnished arguments for opening the Normal School to all high school graduates of superior rating.

He was graduatetd from the school of law of Howard University with honors, and was admitted to practice here. Later, he was graduated from the school of medicine of Howard University with honors.

Dr. Richardson was the first president of the Federation of Civic Associations and served as such for 12 years. On his voluntary retirement he was chosen president emeritus.

He was a member of the citizens' legislative advisory council formed in 1925 by the Board of Commissioners, the only member successively elected throughout the life of the council. He served as vice president from its organization until it was dissolved.

He was the husband of the late Ida G. Richardson, one of the first Negro public school teachers here, and founder of the Sterling Relief. He is survived by a son, George H. Richardson, jr. of Los Angeles, and two daughters, Mrs. Erma West and Mrs. Virginia Richardson McGuire, former member of the Board of Education.

Mrs. Mary Dill Funeral Services Scheduled Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Dixon Dill, 60, who died at her home on Silver Spring Avenue, Silver Spring, Md., Tuesday, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the Warner Pumphrey funeral home, 8434 Georgia Avenue. Burial will be in the Colesville (Md.) Cemetery.

A lifelong resident of Montgomery County, Mrs. Dill was born at Dickenson and moved to Silver Spring about four years ago.

She is survived by her husband, John Dill; two children, Mrs. John Rush and Douglas Dill, both of Silver Spring, and several brothers and sisters. She was an active member of St. Mary's Episcopal Church at Aspen, Md.

J. A. Toomey, Lawyer and Educator, Dies at 66

James A. Toomey, 66, professor of law at Georgetown University, died early yesterday at the Georgetown University Hospital following a brief illness.

TOOMEY

Admitted to the District Bar in 1901, Mr. Toomey practiced law until 1936. From 1914 to 1931 he was an assistant professor of law at Georgetown and since 1931 had been professor of law. He also had been professor of jurisprudence in the Georgetown Medical School since 1937.

Following graduation from St. John's College, Mr. Toomey received the degree of bachelor of arts from Georgetown College in 1896 and master of arts a year later.

He joined the editorial staff of the New York American and later became assistant editor of Printer's Ink, a newspaper advertising periodical, before obtaining a bachelor of laws degree from Georgetown Law School in 1901.

Among the outstanding cases tried by Mr. Toomey was the Knickerbocker Theater collapse in 1922, in which he served as counsel for the steel directors, and the milk test cases in 1908.

The son of the late James Toomey, also a member of the District Bar, he was a member of the American and District Bar Associations, the Calvert Club and the Oldest Inhabitants Association.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marion O. Toomey, formerly of Philadelphia; two daughters, Marion C. Toomey, member of the District Bar, and Helen B. Toomey, all residing at the family home, 1875 Taylor Street Northwest, and a son, Lieut. James C. Toomey, now on active combat duty in the Pacific area.

He also is survived by two sisters, Misses Helen J. and Geraldine C. Toomey, both of Washington; and a brother, Vincent L. Toomey, a member of the Catholic University law faculty.

Plans for funeral services, which will be held Saturday, have not been completed.

Last Rites Today For Ensign Jones

By the Associated Press

The Navy Department announced last night that the parents of Ensign Stephen H. Jones of Leonardtown, Md., who was killed in the night club fire in Boston, November 28, had requested that military honors be omitted when he is buried this afternoon in Arlington National Cemetery.

Ensign Jones was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen McKinney Jones, Leonardtown. Lieut. R. W. Faulk of the Navy's Chaplain Corps, will conduct the funeral services.

Lieut., Mrs. Elliott Rites Today; Boston Fire Victims

Funeral services for Lieut. and Mrs. Jesse Duncan Elliott, jr., who died in the fire which swept the Cocoanut Grove night club in Boston Saturday night, will be held today from the Chapel at Fort Myer at 2 p. m.

Burial for the couple will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Lieutenant Elliott, who was a naval officer, was the son of Col. and Mrs. J. D. Elliott of Aquasco, Md. His wife was the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Charles K. Nulsen of San Antonio, Tex., who are expected here for the funeral. Mrs. Elliott's brother, Charles K. Nulsen, jr., is attending Episcopal High School at Alexandria, Va. The 2-year-old daughter of the couple is in San Antonio with her parents.

Lieutenant Elliott was the nephew of Babs Lincoln, Washington newspaperwoman.

The couple were married in Fort Myer Chapel—where their last rites will be held today—July, 1939. They had been reunited for less than a week when death overtook them, Lieutenant Elliott having just returned home on leave from sea duty. They were separated in October.

They were identified among the night club dead by a Naval Academy ring which the husband wore.

FROM THE BRITISH AIR COMMISSION:

"Lancaster Bombers with Nash-Kelvinator-made Propellers Have Made Fiercely Opposed Operational Flights Over Saarbruck, Bremen, Duisburg, Frankfurt, Wilhelmshaven, Dusseldorf and Essen . . ."

—British Air Commission

THERE ARE new words being sung to the Watch on the Rhine... sung by armored hosts on high.

Their thundering chant is the roar of Britain's mightiest bombers . . .

The flash of their swords is the spinning of thousands of propellers ... .

Propellers that came from America, to join with Britain in the great crusade to free the world!

Did you ever stop to think by what magic a thin blade of aluminum thrusts the 30 tons of a Lancaster aloft, 20,000 feet into the thin air—lets it lazy on half throttle for a thousand-mile run—then sends it scampering home with pursuit-plane speed?

If you could look behind the scenes in a Nash-Kelvinator plant you would see why the Hamilton Standard Propeller is one of the most amazing instruments of this war.

Picture for yourself three thin blades so beautifully machined and matched that a puff of a man's breath sends them turning in a fifteen-foot arc!

Picture for yourself a superhuman mechanism that automatically selects the right "bite" out of a thousand possible different variations for climb, for speed, for power, for altitude! Hundreds of moving parts, synchronized to chronometer perfection.

Yet—this is only one of the many war production jobs entrusted to the skilled craftsmen of Nash-Kelvinator, who yesterday made refrigerators and automobiles.

Blades of Wrath for the fighting men of the United Nations! Their thunder growing every night and day . . . until Nazism and Nipponism are crushed to earth—never to rise again!

That is our goal—that is the end to which we and every company in America—every man, woman and child are irrevocably pledged!

NASH-KELVINATOR CORPORATION, DETROIT

Dedicated to the Automobile and Refrigerator Dealers of America, who . . . despite real sacrifices and financial hardships . . . are continuing to serve their communities, keeping fast their faith in their friends, in the future of their business, and the inevitable victory of America.

Compromise Pay Bill Introduced

Assured of powerful support, a compromise Administration pay raise bill yesterday was introduced in the Senate by Majority Leader Barkley for Senator Mead who was out of the city. However, Senator Mead hopes to return early today and his office late yesterday was attempting to arrange a meeting of the Senate Civil Service Committee today at which time the bill may be reported favorably. More than a sufficient number of committee members have indicated approval of the compromise bill. Only the briefest sort of hearings will be required. Favorable Senate action within the next few days is a clear probability if the committee meets today. Some members, however, want to postpone the meeting until Monday.

The bill would cover all employes. A full 20 per cent bonus would be paid employes making up to $2900 and under. Employes paid over $2900 would all get 20 per cent on $2900 which would be $580. To deny an increase to employes making more than $2900 as was originally planned would have led to many inequalities. War and Navy officials warned they would lose thousands of inspectors and technical people who are now paid overtime if the $2900 restriction was written into the bill. Overtime pay for all "white-collar" employes is abolished by the bill. This provision would result in a small decrease in income for War and Navy employes who are paid over $2900 plus overtime.

The Saturday half holiday law would be suspended which would leave the door open to a 48-hour work-week throughout the Federal service. However, a 48-hour week isn't mandatory under the bill. The bill would be made retroactive to December 1. It would benefit all employes covered by the Classification Act, including District employes. This exempts District firemen and school teachers. The bill gives the Civil Service Commission broad authority to correct pay injustices between employes whose salaries are fixed by the Classification Act and by wage boards. All in all, it's a good bill and the employe and employe groups better get behind it. It's your last chance.

The projected switch of Harold L. Ickes to an enlarged Labor Department now appears to be off and the names of two younger men have been projected into the manpower picture. National Housing Administrator John Blanford, a member of the War Manpower Commission, and Wayne Coy, Assistant Director of the Budget Bureau, are reported to have been considered for manpower czar. Both are good administrators and old hands at Government procedures. Blanford formerly was assistant budget director and he was succeeded by Coy last spring when the President set up National Housing. However, there are many complications. Labor groups want Manpower in the Labor Department. They don't want Secretary Perkins but she would have to be given a job. And Paul McNutt, the present Manpower boss, also would have to be taken care of.

Navy's decision not to move into Pentagon will cancel several proposed transfers of War Department divisions to the field. War now has all the space it needs . . . War Production Board has decided to set up a small machine tabulating section of its own to do work of its iron, steel and copper division. Census will do the tabulating work for all other branches . . . This is how difficult machine tabulators are to get: Last weekend the War Department ordered 144 tabulators from the Civil Service Commission. None was available. The department demanded action. The War Transfer Unit went to work and produced the tabulators but it had to bring them from New York, Philadelphia and as far away as Kansas City. War Department is paying the expenses of all the employes here to do a three-week rush job after which time they'll return to their old jobs.

Capt. C. F. Macklin, administrative officer of Procurement's emergency relief branch, has been recalled to active Navy duty. He's 72 and he was retired 8 years ago. Captain Macklin was on the first Navy football team that played Army

Labor Department is making cost studies into the prices charged Federal workers in Government cafeterias. Office of Price Administration will base its action on these figures. The Truman Committee also is looking into cafeteria prices . . .

Christmas leave has been canceled for Federal workers but a number of high officials are planning to enjoy the holiday with their families who live outside of Washington . . . Officials in WPB's food division have considered resigning en masse if and when Agriculture Secretary Wickard becomes food boss.

Fish Eat Turkey

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 2.—A. F. Jamison, defense plant engineer, introduced a new type of party last night. He called it a "sucker party" and entertained at a dinner one of his recent victims. Among the guests were other victims of bets which Jamison invariably won. The guests had turkey, the host, fish.

School Gyms May House Servicemen

Board Approves Plans to Provide Weekend Shelter for Visiting Soldiers

Tentative plans for housing servicemen in the public school gymnasium over weekends were approved yesterday by the Board of Education, with Supt. Frank W. Ballou now at freedom to confer with social agency officials for immediate institution of the plans.

Dr. Ballou also was given the go-ahead signal on possible curtailment of many civilian defense and citizens' group activities in school buildings soon to be rationed on their fuel oil supply. After-hours heating of school buildings would rapidly exhaust fuel quotas, officials said.

Request for permission to set up cots and other accompanying effects in the school gymnasiums came from the War Hospitality Committee.

Made Months Ago

Although the request was made some months ago when the serviceman housing problem became acute, it has been necessary for school officials to obtain from the District Health Department opinions relative to the sanitation aspects of such a plan and from the social agencies substantial assurance of financial support.

Some time ago, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, wrote Dr. Ballou that he was "skeptical" of the practicability of the idea from a sanitation point of view. Later, he supplied Dr. Ballou with minimum health requirements which would have to be observed if the soldiers use the gymnasiums.

Since then, however, Dr. Ruhland told Dr. Ballou that he would support the proposal as a resurvey of the situation indicated the plans could be carried out.

Funds Available

The war hospitality committee, through allotments from the Community War Fund, has at least $26,000 available to support the program. For the purchase of cots they have $11,000, and a $15,000 contingency fund which could be used, if necessary, to complete support of the entire program.

Operation of the program will be under the Welfare and Recreation Association, with over-all supervision to be in the hands of First Assistant Superintendent of Schools Jere Crane.

Because of a decided increase in the wages of laborers and mechanics the board will seek a deficiency appropriation in the amount of $34,450 for repairs and improvements to school buildings during the 1943 fiscal year, it was announced.

The District Commissioners also will be notified by the board of the necessity of revising the 1944 estimates in the sum of $56,650 for these purposes during the 1944 fiscal year.

For the continuance of defense training programs in the schools there has been made a third payment from the Government, through the United States Office of Education, a third installment of $28,830, the board revealed.

Cadet Plan Approved

Approved by the board was a revised schedule of training for the senior high school cadets, expanding time given to combat strategy.

Preinduction courses in the high schools, as proposed by the Office of Education, will be incorporated into the school curricula next February. Included in the training courses will be instruction in mathematics, radio, electricity and aviation.

Breaking precedent, the board made it possible for high school graduates to enter Wilson and Miner Teachers Colleges in the term beginning February, instead of having to wait until the following September.

The board officially accepted from The Post, 40 mounted photographs showing students engaged in various school activities.

Kiwanis Club Celebration Planned Tonight

More than 100 members of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club and guests are expected to join in the club's annual ladies' night celebration tonight at 7 o'clock at the Belle Haven Country Club. A dinner, floor show and dance will constitute the program, arranged by Carter W. Friend.

In addition to the guests of individual members, the club has extended an invitation to the presidents of the Rotary, Lions, Civitan, Business and Professional Women's and Venture Clubs and their wives or husbands.

The entertainment will replace the club's regular weekly luncheon session, scheduled for today at 12:30 at the George Mason Hotel. President Andrew W. Clarke will preside.

vessel Sand Merchant carried 18 to their deaths six years ago.

The Cleveco drifted all day in stormy, well-below freezing temperatures as the Coast Guard kept track of the barge. Loaded with 24,000 barrels of oil, she was en route from Toledo to Cleveland when the tug plunged under.

The tug's crew probably had no chance to escape because of the swiftness of her sinking, said Otto Wanek, assistant manager of Cleveland Tankers, Inc., subsidiary of Allied Oil Co., owner of both vessels.

Two women pilots of the civil air patrol, Miss Clara Livingston of Jamestown, N. Y., and Miss Marilyn Miller of Wooster, Ohio, helped the Coast Guard cutters Ossipee and Crocus find the barge.

D. C. Man Dies of Injuries After Being Hit by Streetcar

Total of traffic deaths last year 95

James Edward Hall, 82-year-old Negro who was struck last Saturday by a streetcar in front of 654 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, died at 7:10 p. m. yesterday in Casualty Hospital of head injuries.

Hall resided at 115 H Street Southeast. The streetcar which hit him was operated by John P. Mediary, 28, of 204 Baker Avenue, Colmar Manor, Md., who had two months' experience at the time of the accident, according to police.

During yesterday's high winds, Policeman Paul F. Moran, directing traffic at Twelfth and G Streets Northwest, suffered minor injuries when struck by a street car. Moran was knocked to the street while picking up a traffic sign that the wind had blown down. He was treated at Sibley Hospital for hip bruises.

In another accident attributed to the weather, William Sweetney, 17, of 811 Forty-eighth Street Northeast, received a possible skull fracture when his bicycle skidded on ice at Benning Road and Forty-second Street Northeast. He was removed to Casualty Hospital.

Mrs. Alice Sweetser Hall, 75, of 3133 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, suffered head injuries when struck by a bicycle on Klingle Bridge. She was treated by a private physician. Police said the bicyclist was Harold Faucon, 14, of 3217 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

James Pry, 6, of 712 Twenty-third Street Northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for injuries to his face, legs and body when struck by an automobile at Twenty-third and G Streets Northwest. Police said the car was driven by James Thompson, 21, of Clinton, Md.

Meanwhile in Municipal Court a bus driver and a taxicab driver entered pleas of not guilty and demanded jury trials on charges of negligent homicide in connection with recent traffic deaths of an Army sergeant and a 48-year-old woman.

Harold M. Curtis, 25, of 1375½ Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, the bus driver is charged with negligence in the death of Sergt. George Perriera, 34, who died at Casualty Hospital November 20. Perriera had been stationed at the Navy Yard.

The other defendant was Foster L. Jones, 24, of 418 Kentucky Avenue Southeast, whose cab struck Mrs. Leila Fletcher of 333 C Street Southeast at Third Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast November 28.

Woman Charged With Buying Gas Without Coupon

Mrs. Anna Heavrin, 59, of 1120 Twenty-fifth Street Northwest, yesterday was ordered held for action of a Federal grand jury following a hearing in Alexandria before United States Commissioner Joseph M. Pancoast on charges that she purchased gasoline from an Arlington filling station and drove off without presenting the necessary rationing coupons.

According to police testimony offered yesterday, Mrs. Heavrin drove into the Village Service Station, 1600 Wilson Boulevard, on November 18, ordered and received a full tank of gas for which she paid, and then drove off.

An attendant gave chase and was joined by Park Policeman R. D. Livingstone, who arrested her on the Virginia side of Memorial Bridge.

Mrs. Heavrin pleaded not guilty at yesterday's hearing and was released under $500 bond.

Rodier Appointed Acting Director Of War Housing

Gilbert L. Rodier, 4515 Ellicott Street Northwest, native of Washington, has been named acting Director of the Federal War Housing Authority, Herbert Emmerick, Federal War Housing commissioner, announced yesterday.

RODIER

Rodier succeeds A. C. Shire, who resigned recently to go with the Board of Economic Welfare.

The new acting director was formerly director of war housing in Washington and prior to that he was in charge of the projects division of FPHA.

Rodier was educated in Washington schools and studied architecture at George Washington University.

Air Wardens May Control Street Lights

Tardiness of Police In Tuesday Test Renews Proposal To Transfer Duties

Renewal of a previous recommendation that street lights be transferred to the air-raid warden service during blackouts yesterday highlighted post-mortems on Tuesday night's surprise 25-minute air-raid test.

Street lights—on bridges, in the vicinity of the White House and elsewhere—were the most glaring violators of the blackout, some remaining lighted for as long as 10 and 11 minutes after the sirens wailed their alarm at 8:24 p. m.

Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive civilian defense director, said that turning off street lights by wardens had been satisfactory in Philadelphia and New York. Lights here currently are extinguished by selected policemen, but Colonal Bolles said he would reiterate a request that the job be placed in the hands of wardens.

28 To Appear

Twenty-eight persons have been summoned to appear next week at the corporation counsel's office for hearings to determine whether they should be prosecuted for blackout violations. Warnings, police said, were issued to an additional 22 persons.

Besides these, two persons were arrested Tuesday night and specifically charged with blackout violations. They were Ruth Falkerson, 20, of 410 Cedar Street Northwest, who was released yesterday when she posted $5 bond, which she elected to forfeit, and Hyman Gurewitz, 58, of 6023 Fifth Street Northwest, who posted $25 bond for his appearance in Municipal Court next Tuesday and was released.

CORRECTION

The Post inadvertently reported yesterday that a light showing at Raleigh Haberdasher, 1310 F Street Northwest, had induced a warden to bang on the door of the establishment during the blackout and accidentally set off the burglar alarm there. Actually, the light came from a building farther down the street, which was closed, and the warden was trying to gain access via Raleigh Haberdasher, which was completely blacked out.

Official comment on the Tuesday night test was that it was satisfactory generally but "spotty."

Perfection Is Goal

Colonel Bolles agreed with Chief Air-Raid Warden William J. Mileham that perfection was the goal to be sought and that even though 95 per cent or more of the city cooperated in the test, the percentage must be 100 to be effective.

Commissioner John Russell Young, civilian defense coordinator for the Washington area, reported following a tour during the test that the blackout had been effective, but he too commented on the poor showing of street lights.

It was learned yesterday that the order for a blackout was prepared late Tuesday by the Commissioners, who left the actual time blank. The hour of the test was determined by Brig. Gen. John T. Lewis, commander of the military district of Washington. Hence it was a complete surprise.

14 Go on Trial For Bootleg Whisky Sales

A group of 13 men and one woman went on trial in District Court yesterday on charges of selling whisky in the District without payment of Government taxes.

In his opening address to the jury, Assistant United States Attorney John L. Laskey, said the defendants had violated the alcohol tax laws by operating 11 stills in nearby Maryland and selling the liquor with an estimated loss to the Government of $60,000 in revenue.

The alleged offenses, Laskey said, covered the period between 1938 and 1941, and involved stills in Charles, Prince Georges, St. Mary's and Calvert counties. Each still is said to have had a daily capacity of 500 to 1200 gallons.

Eighteen persons originally were named in the indictment, returned October 21, 1941. One has gone into the Navy, another is in a hospital, and two others have not been apprehended.

Those on trial were listed as Joseph Hill, described as the chief distributor of the bootleg whisky here; Alvey D. Gamble, jr., Emory L. Bowie, Charles W. Gamble, Hyman Wolf, William Allison Wenk, Daniel L. Riley, Curtis Maurice Taylor, James J. Hawkins, Warren H. Walker, George L. Matthews, John S. Dorsey, and Mary Josephine Jackson.

Justice Bolitha J. Laws is hearing the case.

District Flier Returns Home After Downing 2 Jap Planes

HOME FROM THE SOLOMONS—Lieut. Harry March, jr., former District track and tennis star, shown with his wife, is back in Washington after downing two Jap planes in the Solomons

Lieut. (j. g.) Harry March, jr., 23, former District track and tennis star, and more recently a Navy pilot in the Solomons area where he downed two Japanese planes, gave a down-to-earth answer yesterday when friends asked him what passed through his mind during aerial combat.

"Mostly," he said, "I was wishing that I was back home."

Demands Exacting

But like all airmen, he reported that the demands of air fighting are such as to leave a pilot little time for thinking about anything other than the task at hand.

At home for a 30-day furlough, Lieutenant March paid a visit to the District Building yesterday and was congratulated by Commissioners Guy Mason and Charles W. Kutz. He was accompanied by his wife, the former Alsa Winters, and Dick Tennyson of the District Playground Department.

Lieutenant March, who resides at 1811 Monroe Street Northeast, is a graduate of McKinley High School and North Carolina State University, where, as a performer on the 1940 track team, he won the national pentathlon championship through his performances in the 200- and 1500-meter runs, the javelin and discus throws and the broad jump.

Won Tennis Title

In 1937, he won the District junior singles tennis title by defeating David Jonsen in the finals at the Army-Navy Club. That same year and in the two following years, he was a director at the Burroughs and Janney Playgrounds and a tennis instructor at other District recreation spots.

Following his graduation from North Carolina State, he enlisted in the Navy as an air cadet, was trained at Anacostia, Jacksonville, Fla., and Miami, Fla., where he won his wings and was commissioned an ensign.

Victims of his blazing guns in the Solomons were one torpedo plane and a bomber. March flew a Grumann Wildcat.

City News In Brief

Court to Review Case

The Municipal Court of Appeals yesterday consented to review the case of Miss Patricia Hall, 22-year-old Maritime Commission employe, who was awarded 85 cents in Small Claims Court November 20 on a complaint that she had paid above the OPA ceiling price for a pair of nylon stockings.

Under terms of the Emergency Price Control Act, Miss Hall, who lives at 1433 Belmont Street Northwest, was entitled to recovery of the larger of two amounts—$50 or thrice the amount of the sale—if the court had found in her favor. But Judge Hobart Newman ruled that the violation was merely technical, and awarded Miss Hall the difference between the sale price and the price fixed by OPA.

Defendent in the suit is the Stella Ladies Shop, 1926 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Cafe in Row Over Songs

If Irving Berlin has his way in District Court, there'll be no more "Blue Skies" at Maynard's Restaurant, 1508 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

His New York music publishing firm, joined by two others, asked the court to issue an injunction enjoining operations of the restaurant from continuing to allow an orchestra there to play Berlin's copyrighted "Blue Skies" and three other tunes, "Am I Blue," "I'll Pray for You" and "Easter Parade." The complaint charges that the four songs were played at the restaurant without payment of royalties.

Zoning Group Named

Appointment of a zoning committee for the Federation of Citizens Associations has been announced by Harry S. Wender, president of the federation.

First assignments for the newly appointed committee will be consideration of the proposed changes in the National Capital Park and Planning Board, which would eliminate some of the present members and give it broader powers.

Snyder Heads Committee

Ross H. Snyder, local attorney, of 4408 Stanford Street, Chevy Chase, Md., has been named chairman of the New Year's Day open house committee of the Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest. Other members are Thomas W. Dobson, George E. Harris, David Linden, Harry V. Porter, Dean V. Peterson, Dudley F. Holtman, L. W. DeGast, Ralph W. Foster, R. H. Gaber, Dr. J. A. Bell, E. S. LaFetra and F. B. McKillip.

WPB Grants Day's Grace In Gas Row

The War Production Board again consented yesterday to prolong the flow of gas to 50 homes in the River Terrace Development as attorneys for the tenants took further legal steps to bring before the United States Court of Appeals the controversy over wartime conversion of the homes to coal heating.

Officials of WPB said this latest grace period, the third since the case went into the courts, was to expire at noon today.

Already, the complaining tenants have lost their fight in District Court, where Justice F. Dickinson Letts refused on Monday to issue a temporary injunction enjoining WPB from putting into effect an order demanding conversion of the heating equipment.

Joseph C. McGarraghy, attorney for the tenants, yesterday presented to Justice Letts a final petition for stay of the WPB order—the last step before application to the Court of Appeals. Unless the jurist grants the plea this morning, McGarraghy said, he would file in the Superior Court a petition for leave to make a special appeal.

Justice Letts also was to rule today on an affidavit by Theodore Tourangeau, assistant District building inspector. The official told the court foundations for the homes in question had been completed before March 1, the deadline set by WPB beyond which gas heaters could not be installed. Letts indicated he disagreed with Tourangue's definition of "foundation," holding that a foundation included the basement walls, not only the cement footings around the cellar floor.

Erring Youth On Increase, Officer Says

War Responsible, Captain Milliken Claims, Speaking At P.-T. A. Parley

By Margaret A. Lang
Post Staff Writer

A 35 per cent increase in juvenile delinquency in the District within the past 18 months was reported yesterday by Capt. Rhoda Milliken, chief of the Woman's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department, at the sixth annual Parent-Teacher Institute at the George Washington University.

Captain Milliken compared this increase with the British increase of 40 per cent during the early part of the war and expressed the hope that something could be done in the educational system of the District to meet the needs of boys and girls who "get out of line."

She said that the delinquents were not only from homes with unfortunate conditions but also from "so called decent homes."

"Children with plenty of school allowances are stealing off counters. This seems to be a current phase," she said, "and it is a release for emotional difficulties. These children feel that they are not needed. They feel the excitement around them but they are not themselves doing anything."

Mentally Dull Easy Prey

The second important group she said was the mentally dull." She said that they are unstable and therefore easy prey for exploitation and fall easily into antisocial recreations.

She said that an appreciable number of girls are attracted by boys in uniform and although they don't think of themselves as becoming sexually promiscuous, they don't fall back into line.

This group, Captain Milliken said, feel that they are looked down on by school groups and by their parents. "The only person that seems to want their company is the man in uniform." "The boy in uniform" she said, "is often young and without great judgment or discretion."

"Games seem dull and routine," she said. "They played games before Pearl Harbor. We must provide these youngsters with something that will make them feel wanted. The school program must make them feel that they should stay at school and after school they should have activities that are useful. They must do something that they will not consider futile."

Easy Money Held Evil

Lawson T. Cantrell, assistant superintendent in charge of Junior High and Vocational Schools in the District, discussing the problems of children at work, declared that easy employment, plenty of money, and freedom from home restraints make a perfect set-up "for another jazz age with all the social evils that followed in the wake of the last World War."

Stating that a large number of boys and girls of 15, 16 and 17 years of age are being employed, he said that at the rate we are now going, close to 30,000 work permits will be issued by next June. The end of this fiscal year, as compared to 6550 issued during the fiscal year ended June, 1941.

"With the demand for labor still mounting on the one hand and the older youth being siphoned off by the draft on the other, we may expect practically all of our youth 14 to 17 years of age to become engaged in some form of productive work if this war continues another 12 months."

Early employment is bound to affect the education, the moral and the social aspects of the child's life, he continued, stating that first of all they do not receive the knowledge and skills that will be necessary to meet their social and economic needs when peace returns.

Oldest Inhabitants Honor Proctor on 75th Birthday

John Clagett Proctor, poet and staff writer of The Evening Star, was honored on his seventy-fifth birthday last night at a special meeting of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District of which he is the chronicler.

At the same meeting, Theodore W. Noyes, editor of The Star, was elected president of the association for his thirty-fifth term.

"In John Clagett Proctor we have an illustration of what it means to be useful to the community," said former Secretary of Commerce, Daniel C. Roper. "We honor him because he chose to love and serve his fellowmen . . . His practical and ethical talents, his feeling for poetry and his ability as an historian have created for him a lasting shrine in the hearts of many Washingtonians."

Considerable praise of Proctor's abilities was voiced by two more of his fellow clubmen, Fred A. Emery and Charles H. Bates, both vice presidents of the society.

Proctor was born on the north side of New York Avenue, between Sixth and Seventh Streets Northwest, and has resided in Washington all his life. He was graduated from the National University Law School in 1893 with a degree in law and was admitted to the bar here in 1894.

He is a member of Columbia Typographical Union, member of the Oldest Inhabitants for 24 years; former grand master of the Odd Fellows lodge and former grand patron of the Order of Eastern Star.

Author of "Washington, Past and Present," weekly article in The Star, Proctor now resides at 1605 Jonquil Street Northwest.

Daniel C. Roper, Clifford Berryman and Harry C. Davis were elected vice presidents of the organization. Last year's slate was unanimously accepted for the coming year.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FOR THE WOMAN IN UNIFORM

From the Cosmetic Counter

By Martha Ellyn

The tradition of the uniformed services for good grooming won't be let down by the women auxiliaries of the Army, Navy and the Coast Guard.

There are very few of us who do not have a friend or two among these volunteers who are putting their shoulders to the wheel for the war effort. We are "all for them"—that they know—but still we can give visible evidence of our appreciation of them by sending remembrances at Christmas.

Frills and furbelows, they left behind them, when they entered the service. But there are still many helpful items to give them which are more or less feminine essentials. To keep immaculate one needs grooming aids. And the women in service need them in compact form, easy to manipulate and easy to carry.

Let's take a trip through the local stores and see what the cosmetic counters are offering for the fair ones in uniform. The manufacturers of toiletries have considered the service woman from head to toes. Here are findings which I hope will prove helpful to those who want to buy gifts for members of the woman's Army.

For Gleaming Hair

HAIR—For that hundred strokes a day, so necessary to keep hair in good condition, a good brush is a necessity. Brushes with nylon bristles and lucite backs are dependable brushes. They do excellent work, are durable and are washed and dried in the blink of an eye. Prophylactic brushes with jewel-like backs are attractive as well as serviceable. Both of these types sell for around $3 and $5. Another splendid hair brush is offered by an organization well-known for hair specialties. Their brushes are fabricated, the backs of natural grain wood that will not warp or split, and the bristles are long and flexible. Shorter at the sides, bristles graduate to full thickness at the center so that the brush may penetrate to every inch of the scalp. This brush sells for $7.50, plus tax.

The same hair specialist offers excellent shampoos—castile soap, permanent wave shampoo, latherless shampoo (pine aroma), hair perfume, hair rinse, and creme-set which helps to give the hair body after shampooing.

Seaswope is also a fine shampoo. Hard water is one of the griefs of those who do their own shampooing. This shampoo is made of a seaweed derivative. It lathers like mad and cleans the hair just as well with cold or warm water, as with hot water. It rinses out readily. This shampoo is excellent for all—leaves blondes, brunettes, redheads and grayheads with shining and sparkling hair—so clean it will squeak. It sells for 60 cents for one size, $1 for the larger size.

Another dependable shampoo is known as "Young Skin." The shampoo is a special cleaner that loosens impurities giving the hair a wholesome, fresh and clean appearance. Prices, $1 and $1.75. A lotion by the same specialist, costing $1.25 for 4 ounces, and $2 for 8 ounces, contains ingredients extremely beneficial when used where hair is oily and the scalp irritated.

Cleansing cream, velva cream mask, orange skin cream and skin lotion makes up another kit, attractively boxed, and costing $3 to $5.

Sparkling with holiday cheer, another group includes cold cream for cleansing, vanishing cream for protective foundation, dreamflower powder and smoothing danya lotion. It's the perfect gift for woman-on-duty who wants her beauty aids straight and practical. All this for just $1.

The Defense Kit is one offered by a leading beauty house. A pigskin case, equipped with zipper makes it most durable. This kit contains all the necessities for proper cleansing and makeup—mirror, comb, makeup base, rouge, lipstick, skin lotion, toothpaste and brush, eye lotion, cleansing tissue and compad. Refills are available. Price is $7.50.

Hand Care

HANDS—A manicure set is almost a necessity for the woman in uniform. There's a slick little manicure case in army brown and beige, or in red and navy for the girls in blue. It's especially adapted to service life because it travels so well. The case swings from a clever brass ring handle and has a metal name plate to match her service bar. In it are all the basic implements, complete to scissors of finely tempered steel, plus manicure oil, a soft shade of polish and grime-banisher No. 1—a bottle of cuticle remover. It's known as the Suffolk Set. Its cost is $3.50. The same company offers a brocade evening bag (when the inner compartment is lifted out). It is fitted with hand-care things. All this for $5. This is to name but two of the several kits, ranging in price from $1.50 to $7.50 and a bit higher.

Your service friends can keep her fingertips as shiny as Army buttons if you give her a hand-care set, which is smart as a major with its patriotic trim. This one has a firm little bengaline case and you can have it in patriotic red or blue, or in wine. Comes with polish, polish remover, and the trimmings—nail file, emery boards, orange-wood stick. Price $1.10. Other manicure sets by this company are presented in purse-case of fine crepe print, costing $2.50; a handsome leather case trimmed in flowered print and holding the necessary manicure equipment—price, $5.

A GIFT that is certain to be warmly received is one of the series of manicure kits being offered as gift sets. Keyed to the service names they are: Soldier's Best Girl, Ensign's Bride, Adjutant's Fair Lady, Commodore's Sweetheart, Major's Mate, Hand Trousseau Trunk, Jewel Box, Colonel's Favorite, Admiral's Wife and General's Lady. They range in price from $1.50 to $15. The cases are made from choice skins of leather type, the bottles and jars are held firmly in place by clips. The nippers, scissors and rust-proof files are of the finest quality steel. The orange-wood sticks are the genuine thing and will not split or crack. The emery boards are double-sided.

Sweet Scent

PERFUMES—There's something about the gift of lovely perfume that can never quite be equalled. Perfume creates an illusion of loveliness—an illusion that every woman wants. It's an escape from the harsh realities of the moment. Every woman has her preference. But if you don't know her choice, here are some suggestions.

A remembrance box, filled with toilet water and atomizer, a bottle of body sachet, one cake of toilet soap and two cakes of tablet sachet; price $3.

A new wartime perfume named Strategy presented in a chess bottle, inclosed in a gold satin box, is something to make any woman's heart skip a few beats. This perfume has a subtle fragrance as new as tomorrow's maneuver. Here's a successful Christmas tactic. Presented in two sizes, the Knight of Chess Bottle at $10, holding one-half ounce, and the small size in the Pawn Bottle, costing $1.50. The toilet water in the Star Bottle, most graceful, costs $5.

Mille Fleurs is a young, gay, vibrant perfume of unforgettable fragrance. Price $5. The same cosmetic producer offers other lovely scents such as Blue Grass, It's You and Cyclamen.

Sirrocco, a mysterious fragrance of the East, is contained in a crystal flacon of serpentine design which plays magic tricks with light. This fragrance is also available in cream cologne, toilet water and other items.

Laughter Eau de Toilette of delicate bouquet will keep one refreshed during an active day. Its delicate scent surrounds its wearer with a subtle fragrance. It is sold in 2, 4 and 8-ounce sizes, ranging in price from $2.50 to $8.

White Magic is the white flower perfume sequence which give luxurious fragrance. In this group are White Camellia, Mystic Gardenia, White Lilac, Tropical White Fresia, Ochi Chorni (White Tobacco Plant), Swedish White Carnation, Russian White Violet, Florentine White Rose, Lily of the Valley and White Heliotrope.

FEET—Many a service woman will appreciate some foot "balm." Cosmetic houses have been thoughtful in developing kits containing aids for tired feet. One four-piece foot kit offered is presented in an attractive box containing foot cream, foot powder, foot lotion and stockings. The faithful use of these splendid products will be sure to result in "happy" feet. The cost is $3.50, plus tax.

A pedikit containing polish, polish remover, pumice stone, liquid callous remover, mentholated foot cream, adhesive tape and cotton tampoons will also be a thoughtful gift. The products will make feet feel like new. The price is $2.50.

When feet are an asset, they will need products to make them feel like they are walking on air. For quick relief, a massage of Virgin Flower Foot Balm will do the work. Packaged in a clear crystal bottle, decorated in white—4 ounces for $1.

A foot stick to cool and soothe tired feet is available too. This is priced at $1.

BEAUTY KITS—To any woman who must conserve space, as service women must, a fitted case packed with cosmetic essentials will be appreciated. When they are ordered to make ready for a change in short time, the fitted case can help tremendously. Originality and utility combines in these fitted cases.

Among the smart cases seen are ones offered by Marie Earle. The price range is wide, varying from $6.95 to $27.50. A mid-Victorian model is a replica of the one originally carried by Queen Victoria. Made up in fine quality aero-tweeds (waterproof and washable); edges and handle of hand-stitched saddle leather. A convenient "stay-hinge" holds the top open. This bag has a complete mirror top and natural washable lining. It is fitted with regular-sized packages of essential cream, cucumber emulsion, freshner lotion, eye wash, foundation cream, mascara, eye shadow, face powder, lipstick and rouge. Secret compartment holds toothbrush, toothpaste and other multitudinous odds and ends. A liftout tray gives ample room for overnight things. Available in three combinations—gray, trimmed with black saddle leather; tan with russet, and blue with natural leather. Price, $25.

The "Train Box" by the same company is a smaller edition of the "Victoria." Price $12.50. The "Triangle" is also a case that would be a decided acquisition to the service woman when she travels, or a place to store things in compact form—price is $6.95.

Coty is offering a group of leather and rawtex handbags and cases fitted with a full complement of beauty aids. The "Stroller" is a smart handbag, square and chunky, with a pointed flag held in place by a stunning plaque of gold, double strap handles and a removable vertical tray holding creams, skin freshener, toilet water, rouge, lipstick and a stunning cabochon loose powder compact. Available in red, tan and black at $10. The same make is available in other cases, such as "Sky Chief," at $18.50; "Clipper" at $35.

Dorothy Gray presents a handsome beauty kit, just the thing to hand out to a WAAC or a WAVE, or to any uniformed woman who must conserve space and who will appreciate efficiency. The "Portrait" model contains cleansing cream, night cream, skin freshener, blustery weather or special dry skin lotion, powder, lipstick, all chosen according to coloring. All this beauty and utility, plus a mirror and comb, for $5.

Daggett & Ramsdell offer smart traveling kits, ranging in price from $5 to $15. One particular beauty is priced at $15. It has a two-way folding top which allows either of two compartments to be used separately. The smaller compartment opens up to make a little mirrored "dressing table" and holds all beauty aids, even to soap with its own little waterproof bag. The larger compartment has room for a gown and other travel essentials, and tucked into the sides are rouge, lipstick, eyebrow pencil and comb. Available in red, navy, black and brown.

Primrose House offers a compact, roomy, overnight case. Removable cosmetic tray is filled with nine beauty aids milady needs. The price range is from $3.95 ot $10.50.

Elizabeth Arden offers exquisite fitted cases, complete with necessary beauty aids. These lovely cases vary in price, depending upon size and construction, from $15 up.

Helena Rubenstein has created some splendid fitted cases as lovely to look at as they are efficient to use, ranging in price from $5 to $27.50.

SHOP AND RUN

She'll Need These.

By Marianne

This is the Army and the Navy—with no private secretary around! That's why we suggest a stationary kit that's practically a filing system in itself. With a "tickler" space for unanswered letters, you'll be sure to receive yours by return mail. Another section for paper and envelopes, one for notes, a letter opener, book for appointments, and calendar, practically make a portable desk for your favorite WAAC or WAVE. It's genuine leather, too. For $5.

Seventy-five cards for $1.10 will insure plenty of thank-you notes for you alone. With quite everything prescribed, she'll appreciate these personal postcards made up in the color she likes, with her name printed on them. Gray, buff, white and blue are the choices of paper, with burgundy border and printed name. We know a Christmas spirited shop that will deliver in two weeks, and in manpower-short Washington, that's a find!

* * * *

It's an exciting duty she has undertaken and years from now, when she'll be saying "stop me if you've heard this before," a diary will help her keep her experiences in order! The best buy we found was a five-year diary of genuine leather, complete with lock and key. The price—only $1.

It's an unofficial report that they'd like to have a small razor. Although they're going to be scarce for the duration, we've found a perfect one. It's a curved razor with double edge and also some with straight edges. Get one in a kit or buy a small zipper case and toss in several packs of blades. Price 49 cents, and $1 for the razor.

* * * *

This took some shopping, but we're proud to suggest a bracelet with three small St. Christopher medals (the patron saint for protection while traveling). They're made of sterling silver, very neat-looking, and there's a bit of sentiment in the giving that expresses your thoughts better than words. $6.60.

* * * *

There's nothing "waacky" about the sturdy oxfords they wear, and no longer will they "wave" in towering pumps. So bring out the good old-fashioned shoe shine kit. It's the same one the boys are using, with a drawstring top, and contents noted: Shoe cream, four brushes for every purpose, polishing cloth and spot remover. It's a cinch she'd pass inspection with approving looks and possibly even get a glimpse of herself in her shining shoes! $1.25.

* * * *

It's going to be difficult to keep up with them, but since they will be "on the go," why not give them a fitted traveling bag made of fabrikoid or leather? Glass jars and pockets galore will hold cosmetics, there's a large mirror, convenient zipper section—all this and more: space for a nightie or a blouse, too (and a subtle suggestion that she might try to get in for a weekend). $6.50 up.

She may have to salute in a man's world, but she still needs to do such feminine jobs as sewing a button on her uniform. It's so much easier to do, though, with a sewing kit designed like a jewelry box to give her more incentive. The spring back case is lovely with soft-padded lining and striped cover. Forty shades of thread, two thimbles, scissors and needles make this a real find for $2.75.

For where to find the articles mentioned above, please call NAtional 4200, Extenson 324, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

A Gift She Can Wear

By Jeanne Contini

WAAC or WAVE, she's still a woman, and keenly aware of the fact. When you choose her Christmas gift, please don't be misled by the swell straight thinking job she's doing, or by her trim uniform. She has exchanged most of the foibles that make femininity fun, in order to release a man for active duty.

A lot of people are under the erroneous impression that everything owned by Army and Navy gals must bear the unmistakable stamp of G. I. (Government issue in case you didn't know.) On the contrary, lingerie, night and lounge clothes are subject to the sole approval of the lady who wears them. This affords you a sublime opportunity to pay tribute to the Eve beneath the twill. So, please, no khaki girdles, navy blue bedsox, or olive-drab lingerie.

To simplify matters we have combed the town and lined up gifts which would remind a WAAC or WAVE that along the line of duty there is still a Santa Claus. Save your legs and look at our list.

Purely Practical

A warm nightie with long sleeves. Your favorite WAAC will bless you for this soft, cozy gown of brushed rayon. The collar and yoke have a white edging. This gown presents no ironing problem and can be easily tubbed in the washbowl. Blinken blue or pink, under . . . $4.

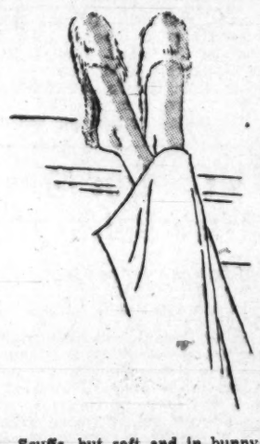
Pants are less pretty than a petticoat but are the best way according to doctors, of avoiding duck-bumps on a windy parade ground. These are 40 per cent wool . . . enough for proper warmth without challenging an allergy. They come in tea-rose, knee-length or longer . . . about $1.

In our opinion this robe is the prize of the local yield for the purpose. Pure wool flannel with a natty white pin-stripe is the fabric. The lines are princess with fairly sweeping skirt. It fits beautifully and wraps around, being belted in the front. The ties are sewn on so there's nothing to get lost. This should be a pleasure to put on at 6 o'clock of a frosty morning. Unlike quilts it ought to pack with a minimum of bulk and crease. Dusty rose, aqua, navy or black, with white stripes . . . about $14.

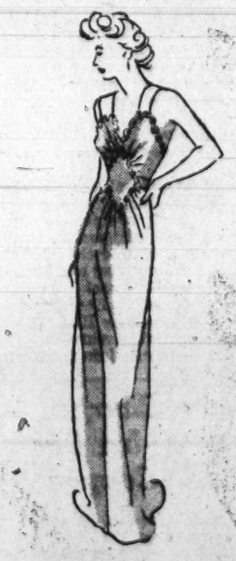
Pure Joy

Slim and a trifle wicked is this rayon jersey slip with a deep yoke and hem of black lace. The shoulder straps are adjustable and the body will not create one unwanted wrinkle under a uniform. It launders like a dream and needs no pressing. Also comes in pink with ecru lace . . . about $3.

A bed jacket is a luxury of course, but lovely to climb into after a day of K. P. Here is one that's a honey in American Beauty red quilted velvet, piped in satin. Comes in pink or blue as well and is exquisitely made about $8.



Scuffs, but soft and in bunny fur, offer a girl a warm inducement to obey reveille. White only . . . about $4.



This is the body beautiful gown in rayon jersey with chain lace. We picked this for its fine lines, and we know there's enough of a size range to back up your orders. The tremendous demand for rayon jersey gowns has greatly depleted local stocks. Lace just can't be found except at the price of endless foot-work to discover among the ones and ones the particular size and color you want. This gown is pretty without being fussy and makes a great deal of sense in communities where laundering is as complicated as a three alarm fire. It can be had in white or peach . . . about $3.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Conscience Stricken Girl, 18, Bitterly Renounces Boy She Loves, as Only Protection Against Regretted 'Affair;' but She Finds Stern Resolve Hard to Keep

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 18 years of age. Early last summer, I met a boy 20 years old. From the day we met until about a month ago, we were together nearly all the time. He didn't go with other girls, but I went out with other boys occasionally. He seemed to love me very much and before long we had drifted into an affair. I felt very badly about this, as he knew; but I didn't seem able to control the situation. We talked about marriage once in a while, but usually in terms of "after the war."

Then, last month, my conscience became so troubled that I started urging him to marry me now. He said he didn't want to, because of the war, which, according to him, "would make things so complicated." He also referred to the fact that he is an only child and said if he married so young, his mother would be terribly hurt. Shortly after that, he began to neglect me. He didn't telephone or take me out as much as before. Some of our close mutual friends told me that he had said he didn't like me any more. So I returned his fraternity pin, which he had given me a few weeks after we met. I thought everything was over between us; and that it would be best that way.

Within a week, I heard from him again. He began taking me out again, but not steady. After a few dates, we were back to the same relationship as before, but against my wishes. He told me he still loved me; but said that he wished he didn't. He said he wanted to marry me before January, but I didn't say I would marry him,—remembering what his friends had told me he said. He wanted to see me every night, but I wouldn't let him. I refused to see him at all for a while; and then, at the end of a week, I gave him a date. I had a wonderful time that evening, because he was so good to me and so attentive. He kept saying all evening that he loved me. When we got home, he came in and we sat and talked for a little while. Then the same old conflict started again and this time I stood my ground. I sent him away, but before he left, he asked me again to marry him.

She Wants Happiness On 'Clean Terms'

He telephoned the next night, but said nothing about marriage. And the night following that, I was sick and feverish and nobody was home. So I called him and asked him to come over. He said he would come, but never showed up. Two days later, he telephoned me and I begged him to let me alone. I told him never to call me again; that I would be much happier without him. I showed some bitterness. He hasn't called since.

I know that if I try hard enough, I can find happiness without him. And I am trying now; but sometimes I do get awfully lonesome for him. What I want to know is this: Should I go on trying to forget him? Or should I make the next move to get him back? I know I could get him back; but I am afraid it would have to be on his terms. And I want to find happiness on clean terms. It is hard to know the right thing to do, in these days. And there is one other question: If I should give him up and later meet someone I could like better, should that person be told about my past? Would this experience have to be confessed to the man I marry? Please answer soon, because I am nearly crazy, trying to figure things out.

ANXIOUS.

Compromise With Evil Weakens Will Power

DEAR ANXIOUS: Your resolution to end this unsavory relationship should be enforced with every ounce of moral strength and mental steadfastness at your command. You must keep faith with your conscience, beginning now, if your character and outlook are not to be permanently warped by this sordid experience. Granted that the day-to-day effort to abide belatedly by your highest convictions may seem, at first, to be almost unbearably painful, almost more than your spirit can sustain,—since weakening of the will power is the inevitable penalty instantaneously inflicted upon those who tentatively compromise with evil,—still, you will find that your ability to resist temptation's spell will grow daily, if and as you stoically stand firm on the side you know to be right.

As you have said, you want to find happiness "on clean terms." And you have been repeatedly instructed by the boy's behavior that he is morally or psychologically incapable of living by the gentleman's code, in relation to you. He is neither capable of governing his own emotions sufficiently to permit you to associate with him in peace of mind; nor is he possessed of sufficient principle to want to give you the protection of marriage. His wantonly selfish exploitation of your affections is the act of a man who doesn't yet know the meaning of love; but his craven retreat behind his mother's skirts, when called upon to recognize and shoulder the moral obligations he recklessly incurred in seducing you, is flagrantly despicable; and the more so since he has tried to take advantage of you at every opportunity since then. Obviously, you can't build any kind of decent relationship,—either in marriage or out of marriage,—with a man of so little character; and a man whose main interest in you is grossly sensual.

Wishful Thinking Is Enemy of Growth

I have stressed these facts because I feel that, by keeping the harsh truth of his shoddy personality in mind at this time, you will be helped to carry through your reborn purpose to break completely with him. Every relapse into wishful-thinking,—into the futile and bootless hope that maybe, some way, somehow, you could bring about a "better understanding," leading to an honorably conducted courtship with him,—will mark a battle lost in the struggle to emerge from this waking nightmare. Any backward looking whatsoever will dangerously enfeeble your proper resolve to become once more the captain of your soul.

So, my earnest advice is never again to dwell on the notion of "making the first move to go back to him." Dismiss the idea as soon as it occurs. Turn your mind at once to other subjects,—your studies, your work, your plans for the day or evening (and be sure you DO have such plans, to keep you in touch with friends whose influence is consistently wholesome), and so on. Also, keep yourself physically exercised to the point of healthy fatigue, when bedtime comes. Don't mope about the house. Go dancing as often as can be managed. And if you find time on your hands in the late afternoon, get out and walk briskly for miles. There is no better cure for incipient doldrums.

Don't Make Confessor Of the Average Man

As for your next question,—Whether to tell the next man in your life (the man whom you rightly hope will be more worthy of your love and trust) the story of this wretched betrayal?—I should say that what has happened is of concern only to yourself, provided you promptly abandon the demoralizing alliance and follow a "clean" course of action hereafter. The case for keeping your own counsel might be argued this way: It would be folly, as well as a breach of good taste, to confide that type of secret in any and every man who paid you the compliment of deep devotion. And as for the man you marry,—his estimate of your character and appreciation of your worth will be based on the facts of his association with you. Moreover, the greatest boon you could confer upon him would be to live up to his highest expectations of wifely excellence,—which means that your prime obligation in relation to him will be, not to confess past mistakes, but to faithfully justify his realistically established confidence in you. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

'Junior WAVES' Have Share in War

By Anne Hagner

It was a toss up whether they would turn out to be WAACS or WAVES—and because two daddies are Navy men, the WAVES won by an overwhelming majority.

So now the ace tin can collectors of the Cleveland Park area are the Junior WAVES, six seventh graders at St. Thomas School who formed the club to insure against becoming separated when they enter various high schools a year and a half hence.

In the meantime they are doing a number of jobs to prove that 11 and 12-year olds can aid the war effort: collecting tin cans, giving their dues (10 cents every two weeks) to the Community War Fund, buying war stamps, and knitting for the Red Cross.

Patsy Happ, 12, daughter of Lieut. Comdr. George H. Happ, of 2913 Porter Street Northwest, is president; Elizabeth McGowan, 11, is vice president; Roseann Morthorst, 12, is secretary treasurer; Jean Peters, 12, whose father also is a lieutenant commander in the Navy, is sergeant-at-arms; Sally Sheiry is historian, and Susanne Izac, who was unable to attend the last meeting because of illness.

Membership may be increased; rumor hath it that some sixth graders at St. Thomas will be included soon.

Now that the girls have decided upon being WAVES, they have become completely Navy conscious. Bright-eyed Elizabeth (known as "Libby") composed a song to the tune of "Anchors Aweigh" in honor of the Junior WAVES, and Sally saves clippings of all bonafide WAVE activities, along with a record of her own organization's contributions to the salvage campaign.

Meetings are held every two weeks, at different members' homes according to alphabetical order. The mothers involved, all pleased that their young daughters are becoming war conscious in the right direction, provide ice cream and cookies.

The Junior WAVES, started completely without adult advice by six Cleveland Park youngsters, meet on their president's front porch to prepare tin cans for salvage. Left to right are Elizabeth McGowan, Roseann Northorst, Jean Peters and Patsy Happ, president of the group. Two older Junior WAVES, Sally Sheiry and Suzanne Izac, had colds and were unable to attend the meeting.

Helen Merriam—Custodian of Films

By Genevieve Reynolds

She's the right arm of motion picture producers. Probably, she knows more of them personally than any other non-Hollywood resident. Yet she has no secret yearnings to be a stage or screen star.

Tall, slender Helen Merriam, film librarian at the National Archives, likes her behind the scenes role. Why not? Her job is a sort of barometer of what the American public will be discussing six weeks hence.

For example, she knows that in a few weeks people will be talking about Turkey and Italy. How and why? Simply enough. Movie producers have been besieging her with requests for historical films on those two countries.

As the war scene shifts, requests for historical films changed, according to black-haired, black-eyed Miss Merriam.

Many Requests

"More requests have come in for pictures on General MacArthur than on any other person or subject," said Miss Merriam. Whereupon, she escorted me to the projection room to see a historical film of the famous general.

In one speech General MacArthur said the Philippines constituted the only Christian state in the Far East. That was when he was first sent to the islands to take over the training of the Philippine troops.

"At present the largest requests from individuals are for films on gliders," explained the soft-spoken film librarian. "But the government agencies are asking for more and more historical pictures of occupation of the Rhineland and actual battle scenes."

Pointing out the fact that films of actual battle scenes in World War I are scarce, Miss Merriam predicted that such would not be the case after World War II. "Photographers now are taking the actual conflicts," she said. "They are going into the midst of the battles and recording. Hence, the next generations will be able to see World War II in all its terror and realism."

The March of 1918

Right now the public seems to want to see the Allies' march into Germany in 1918. Already the movie producers are accumulating all the films of that march. Therefore when the United Nations march into Germany, fly in, ride in, or however they get there—the news reels will be ready to flash back on that entry in 1918. So when the time comes you might remember that Miss Merriam — back in 1942 — sat quietly at her desk compiling data and sending the films to producers.

While she's no camera fiend, Miss Merriam is especially interested in trick or unusual photography. In fact, the technique is the thing that intrigues her most.

Originally, Miss Merriam started out to be a teacher. She taught English in Black River Academy in Vermont—remember President Calvin Coolidge was graduated from that school. Then she switched to library work—thinks she's found her niche—has been at the National Archives since January, 1937. She holds degrees in library science from Mount Holyoke College and George Washington University.

Home-Made Playthings

Remember how you loved the boxful of brightly painted wooden blocks grandpa cut out for you one Christmas? With metal toys virtually off the market this year, why not try your hand at making some wooden playthings yourself? They're durable, inexpensive, and your little boy will give them a big play.

Start off with simple blocks. Your tools will be a sharp, fine-toothed cross-cut saw, a miter box and some medium-fine sandpaper. You can make your own miter box. Take a piece of 2x4, making sure it is planed perfectly square. To the sides screw two pieces about 1 inch by 4 inches and the same length as the 2x4, forming a sort of trough.

Then, with a square, very carefully draw a line up the side pieces both insde and outside and across the narrow top edges. Just as carefully, saw down through the sides of the trough until you hit the 2x4. Do this near one end of the miter box. Near the other end make a cut at an angle of 45 degrees.

To make the blocks, take a long strip of planed wood, about 2 inches by ¾ inch. Mark off four inches and put it in your miter box, holding it firmly against the side away from you. Saw the piece off. Mark another and saw it off, and so on. By re-marking after each cut, you make sure that each block will be of the same length. Make a bunch of four-inchers, then make a few two inches long and perhaps a few only one inch.

Make several triangular blocks, 2 inches on each of the short sides, to put fancy touches on the house of blocks. Sandpaper all the rough surfaces, and paint the blocks bright colors, using paint that won't give your young hopeful colic, if he happens to chew it.

If you're handy with a coping saw, you might cut out some wooden wheels about 3 inches in diameter and attach them to a shallow box to make a wagon in which your young builder can haul his blocks off to the closet for the night. Better cut two thicknesses of quarter-inch wood for each wheel and glue them together with the grains running across each other so the wheels won't split. You can hinge a tongue to the wagon and paint wheels and tongue a different color from the box.

Women Doing 'Man's Work,' Also Eat 'Man-Sized' Meals

By Corrinne Hardesty

Columbus, Ohio (U.P.).—Jane Walsh, 24, whose war job is planning 16,000 meals a day, said today women defense workers are learning to eat a working man's meal to strengthen themselves for all-out production effort.

Miss Walsh, who learned how to balance diets at Ohio State University and is now dietitian for the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, said educating women workers to eat a hearty meal had been one of her hardest jobs since the airplane plant began hiring women six months ago.

"That old wheeze about an army marching on its stomach applies also to the industrial army," Miss Walsh, a thin girl with dark, snappy eyes, said as she left a conference with the chef and 23 cooks in the plant cafeteria.

"To my surprise we found the men ordered a better balanced meal than the women. Women were having a bowl of soup and a starchy dessert, passing up the vegetables, meat and salad.

"Men workers ordered a hearty lunch or dinner of meat, vegetables, salad and pie. That is a meal which will hold them together for the rest of the day, as well as keep up their general health and strength for the long production pull."

Miss Walsh explained that she was not advocating the balanced diet as a beauty aid, but said she was sure the former housewives and domestic workers who make up a large percentage of the women employes, would have better figures and clearer complexions as a result of their wartime diet changes.

"We had to fancy up the salad bowl to get women to order it with their lunch," she said. "The men took to it from the start. Many of the men stopped and asked me for our salad recipes."

More men than women eat breakfast in the cafeteria, which serves three times a day, Miss Walsh said.

"I guess their wives won't get up and cook breakfast for them," she said. "Men eat ham and eggs and toast. The women, when they first come to work, have a roll and coffee. They soon find that won't carry them through the morning. One by one they come around to an old-fashioned American breakfast."

Miss Walsh's program of education included working out attractive color combinations in vegetables and some discussion on eating for health.

"We try to sneak up on their blind side," she said. "What we first put on the bill as a 'balanced diet' didn't go over. Now we put lettuce in the sandwiches and in other ways slide the vegetables into the diet."

Housewives with three meals a day to prepare may think they have rationing troubles, but they don't know what hardship is, Miss Walsh said.

"Let 'em try to make 240 dozen doughnuts without sugar," she said a little grimly.

Miss Walsh said she found both men and women are eating more fresh fruit as candy and pastry become scarcer.

Thin Girl Hard Hit By Tension

By Ida Jean Kain

The ultra-thin girl is not only out of style for the duration—but for good. They don't want her in Washington because she can't stand the strain. They don't want her to teach school because she hasn't the patience. They don't even want her in Hollywood. She has too much temperament, and that holds up production and costs money.

IDA JEAN KAIN

Temperament is just a nice name for nerves. We can't afford nerves today, or nervous breakdowns, and being too thin is a risk. If your weight is below normal for your individual structure, you are too thin. Do you weigh less than 105 pounds for the first 5 feet of height, plus 5 pounds for each inch over that? With a medium frame, that would be your normal weight.

With very small bones you can weigh as little as 100 pounds for the first 5 feet, but with very heavy bones, you should go up to 110 pounds for the basic weight. In any case allow 5 pounds for each extra inch of height.

The average girl of 5 feet 4 inches should weigh about 125 pounds, and if she registers only 110 pounds she is not as fit as she should be. An additional 10 to 15 pounds would mean an exuberance of health she may never have known before. It would make her feel like Paulette Goddard looks—and maybe look a little like her. Part of that beauty is the sparkle of sheer health.

If you are below your weight par, put yourself on a program to gain. Food is first. Your three meals—and you must always have three—should be appetizing and easily digested and high in both protection and calories. You have to get the extra calories to gain, but you must have the protective nutrients to utilize the calories and build up your vitality.

During the day get a full quart of milk, at least six slices of whole-wheat or enriched bread, generously buttered; a liberal serving of cooked whole-grain cereal with rich milk and cream, a cooked green, leafy vegetable; a yellow vegetable, a salad and potatoes. You should also have a serving of meat, fish or fowl, plus an egg and at least two fresh fruits. One of these should be either citrus or tomatoes.

You must build up a habit of eating and the best way to do it is to have your meals regularly. Food must be important to you. Choose your menus carefully, eat regularly and take your time.

You also need some exercise, plenty of fresh air and from eight to nine hours' sleep.

Even on such a well-rounded program you won't gain right away.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

Need 2,500,000 Pints For War Blood Banks

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The Army and Navy require 2,500,000 pints of blood for the armed forces during the next 12 months. This blood will be stored in "banks," or blood plasma banks, and will be placed in centers so that it will be available for the treatment of shock in the wounded and injured. This has been called the largest medical undertaking in history by Dr. G. Canby Robinson, the able national director of the blood donor service. It is one of the most important war activities in which the civilian population is engaged; all of this blood is obtained from volunteer donors.

Dr. Clendening

In Los Angeles a young man in a sailor's uniform walked into the Blood Donor's Center and asked to donate a pint of blood. Workers in the Center noticed a service star pinned on the sailor's uniform. In reply to a question it was found out that his name was Mel Van Kuren, a gunner's mate, first class, of the United States Navy. He had been wounded at Pearl Harbor and had received eight transfusions of plasma. On leave, he was visiting the center to pay back the blood donations which he believed had saved his life.

Workers' Contributions

In Chicago 1000 employes of a large mail order house donated one pint of blood each within a week. On the West Coast 40,000 members of one of the major labor unions pledged donations and 507 were bled in one day.

The A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. both have blood donor's honor rolls issued to all local unions and central centers where Red Cross blood banks have been established. Already the Red Cross has exceeded the 380,000 pints of blood requested for delivery by June 30 last.

The Red Cross Centers have to be located in cities where there are processing laboratories to prepare the blood after it has been taken from the donor's arm. The Red Cross assures us that as laboratory capacity increases additional Centers will be added and nearly all of us who wish to can participate in these patriotic donations.

The new quotas require a total of 50,000 bleedings a week. The project naturally, in assuming such proportions, requires a very considerable organization. The Blood Donor Service is an assembly-line, mass-production job requiring the highest degree of control and supervision.

More Donors Needed

The blood plasma, after being prepared, is sent to various Centers which are regarded as target areas so that it will be available immediately in case of emergency. The needs of the Armed Forces, of course, come first and back-logs of blood plasma are being accumulated in the great centers where Army and Navy activity are greatest and where there is likely to be the most activity. But it is planned to enlarge the facilities so that civilian casualties may benefit from this also. Up to the present time civilian casualties from war activity have practically been nil, but in England the use of blood plasma banks has been available for civilians as well as the soldiers.

No doctor questions the great advance which has been made in the treatment of injury and shock due to injury by having available these blood plasma banks, and it is to be hoped that everyone will feel moved to offer his services for this patriotic work.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is unusual to find an individual so amusingly frank about her own weaknesses, and I might have thought this letter a joke had it not been properly signed. When a mother sees her own actions and their results so clearly there should be no need for an outsider to push her to a solution of them herself.

"I think you should write some good tips on how to control one's appetite," she writes. "Especially for those of us who are mothers for the first time. I am 26 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, and today my bathroom scales show that I weigh 286 pounds. My baby is 11 months old and the month of my boy's birth I weighed 153 pounds, or a clear gain in less than a year of 134 pounds.

"I know what is causing me to gain, but I can't control my appetite. I used to be on the go before my boy was born; now I am an enormous, lazy mass of flesh. All I think about is stuffing myself with good food and drinking beer. My husband says I am twice as big as when he married me.

"I can't help myself. I must satisfy my craving for food. Last night I ate a hearty supper and lay down on the davenport, and it collapsed. Time for help!"

The picture you draw is funny to everyone but yourself. It's pathetic from your standpoint. I have a feeling that this unnatural desire for food may be created by some physical condition.

I'd have a checkup by your physician and determine whether some glandular medicine might not help to burn up your food more quickly, thus preventing you from taking on flesh, as well as giving you the pep you used to have. Just being more energetic would be some help.

But you have to make up your mind that YOU want to lose weight. Until you do no one can help you. If you want to get thinner you can, but it means curbing your appetite and being more vigorous in your exercises. Medicines alone won't do it.

Surely you can drink water instead of beer, and the difference in food value would be incalculable. You can halve the amount of food you now eat, cut out all pastries and candy, and begin to test your will power. If you continue your present course you'll hate yourself and your looks; you'll be so imprisoned in flesh as to double your real age, and if your husband is already showing dissatisfaction, who knows, you might lose his love and respect. I'd say the best tip would be to get "wise" to yourself before it is too late.

Our leaflet, "Diet From One to Two Years," may be had for those mothers whose children are nearing the one year mark. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Michael's Girl

By SOPHIE KERR

Chapter 48

THEY left on a Saturday morning and everyone came out to see them start. The new little car shone in the sun. Michael had brought a cluster of pink roses and scented geranium leaves for Elin to wear and Letty a red button dahlia for Philip; Mrs. Morris limped down to the door to say goodby and Patsy and Dora, the new maid, came from the kitchen in starchy white uniforms and aprons. Jean and Van dashed about with baggage and parcels. Down at the gate White and his wife were waiting to wave as they drove out.

The house was strangely empty after they had left. Van walked down to the cottage with Letty and Michael. "It'll be queer without Muthy," said Van. "She's always there. It would be nice if you asked me to eat lunch with you. What you going to have?"

"Scrambled eggs and broiled tomatoes. I don't know if there's enough if you stay. You eat a lot, Van."

"That's not polite, Letty," admonished Michael. "You can break a few more eggs and broil some extra tomatoes."

"I was only funning; of course Van can stay. But how about Mrs. Morris and Miss Jean—won't they be lonesome?"

"No, they're too busy talking about Uncle Bill's coming."

The cottage living room had not changed much with the years. Michael kept it painted and repaired and Letty had a deft hand for curtains and covers. The green shelves that once held Letty's toys were now filled with her books; the piano stood open and friendly. But the printed names of Letty and Michael still had place on the mantel, though the pasted bouquets had given way to vases of real flowers. Letty spread the table with a yellow cloth. "You put the dishes on, Van," she said, "and I'll have lunch ready in no time."

Michael went on into the greenhouse and Van set the table. "Glasses for buttermilk, too," called Letty from the kitchen, and then, "I might make some hot biscuits; no, I'll make French toast instead. What you want on it—apple jelly or maple syrup?"

"Both," said Van, clattering knives and forks.

"You can't have both. We'll have the jelly. Father likes it best."

"What did you ask me for, then? Say, I can't find the napkins."

"Take paper ones, it saves laundry."

"Gee, Letty, you sound housekeepish." Van came to the kitchen door. "It would be nice if we could live here all the time, wouldn't it! Maybe we can when we're married."

Michael, in the greenhouse, stood very still, listening. It seemed to be an old discussion.

"We can't have this place," said Letty, "because it's Father's, but we can have a little one somewhere. D'you think Jean is going to get married to Mr. Tench? It'll be kind of hard on your grandmother if she does."

"You could come up and take care of Granny, couldn't you?"

"I might till school opens, but I wouldn't have time after that. Oh, Van, it'll be awful not to have you to go to school with this year."

"It would have been worse if I'd gone off somewhere to college as Father wanted. I'll be home nights and weekends this way."

"Don'll be gone, too. And you won't want to go to high school parties."

"Of course I will—don't be sill."

Letty mimicked him, giggling: "Of course I will, don't be sill! We've got a poet on our hill!"

"You're too fresh."

"I've heard that somewhere before. Get the buttermilk out of the icebox and get a pitcher of water and the maple syrup. I'm pretty near ready. Get the cream and butter, too."

"What's the cream for?"

"Raspberries. Dessert. No, leave the cream in the icebox till we're ready for 'em."

"You told me to take it out."

"Well, now I tell you to leave it in." She raised her voice. "Oh, Fath-er! We're ready if you are."

Michael came slowly to the table, grave and distant. He thought, They've settled their future, I might have known it. Young as they are, they've settled it. And I fit in it nowhere. For all my reading and writing and bank account and good suit of clothes hanging in the closet, I'm not their kind, or won't be, if they marry.

"You're not eating, Father," "Don't you feel well?"

"No," he said and looked from one to the other with authority. "I was listening to your foolish talk, about marrying and such, and I want to hear no more of it. You are still children and children do not know enough about marriage to talk of it the way you did. Marriage is an important thing; it's not to be decided in light talk. Mind what I say."

Van and Letty exchanged glances of amused tolerance, entirely unimpressed. They paid Michael's rebuke the tribute of respectful silence because they loved him.

"Don't take all the toast, Van," said Letty at last. "I do hope your manners will improve at college."

"Oh, pooh for you! Listen, Mike, is Letty going to college when she's through high school?"

"If she likes. But she wants to go to a special music school."

"There'd be other things to study besides music, Father. I don't want only music."

The world's before them, wide and full, thought Michael. He said to Van, "Is it the ball game this afternoon?"

"Sure, we're both going, but we don't have to hurry. I'm not playing; it's the kid team. Did you need me for anything, Mike?"

"I never need you on Saturday afternoons. I'll be working on the changes in the big garden; I want them done before your mother comes back, and the weather's favorable today." He pushed back his plate. "No raspberries for me, Letty, but leave a dish in the icebox; maybe I'll have them for a snack later."

He stopped in the greenhouse to pick up his tools and Letty's voice came to him there. "The garden'll be much more beautiful when it's done over. Maybe Jean and Mr. Tench would have their wedding out there."

MORE WEDDINGS

Michael went on, shaking his head. There was too much talk about weddings. He was fortunately out of earshot when Van replied, "No, I wouldn't like that. I'd rather we'd be married out there."

"But that's a long time off and the garden will still be there. Don't be a pig."

"It's not their home, Letty. It's ours."

"It's all the home Jean has. Look, half-past one—we've got to hurry."

"Why don't you leave the dishes?"

"No, sir; that's sloppy! You carry them out and I'll begin to wash. There's lots of hot water. I have to change my dress, too, but that won't take a minute. You can pump my bike tires while I'm dressing."

Van groaned, but did not protest. They worked together in high good humor. The sun was shining; there was a ball game to see. Presently they rode off on their bicycles and at the gate met Tench in his car. "Where are you two going?" he asked. "You look very gala."

"Ball game!" shouted Van. "See you later! They're waiting for you up at the house."

He watched them ride off. I wish I were as young as that, he thought. They're perfect, they've got everything, and they've got the sense to make the most of it. Michael was right, they don't need that money.

Presently he drove on, a little dashed. He knew very well what was expected of him during this visit and he wanted it and didn't want it. To marry meant to change all his neat, set bachelor ways and habits, to take the responsibility of another person's well-being and happiness. More, it meant that he must stop loving Elin, put her in second place, crowd her out, indeed, of his emotions forever. His devotion to Elin was, he realized, a comfortable thing; except at first it had not disturbed him or made him unhappy; it had been a sweet place in his hard, material days. He did not want to give it up. Jean Lloyd looked like Elin—a little—but she wasn't Elin. All the same, he had gone too far to turn back. He had offered so much to Jean Lloyd that he was bound to offer more. He was a fair and decent man for all his selfishness; if he did not ask Jean to marry him now he would be ashamed of himself always.

Girl Scouts Exceed Quota In Victory Fund

Miss Anne McLean attended her first meeting of the Washington Girl Scout Council, as the new executive secretary, early this week at Girl Scout headquarters.

Plans were made for the annual election to be held at the January meeting.

Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, jr., reported that the District Girl Scouts have gone over their quota 50 per cent in the victory fund for the rehabilitation of children in war-torn countries. It is a Nation-wide project sponsored by the Girl Scouts within their own organization.

The council went on record to participate in the OCD meeting at the Departmental Auditorium on December 10. The Girl Scouts will act as ushers and color guard for the opening ceremony. Mrs. Frederick H. Booke, former national Girl Scout president, is chairman of the meeting.

The following new members were elected to the Washington Council: Mrs. O. Forcling, Mrs. C. P. Conner, Mrs. Josep Beattie, Mrs. Stewart Godfrey.

The council recommended the suspension of the annual public report luncheon in order to conserve time and food for the war effort. The final decision was left to the districts.

It's About Time

By Dolores Boland

IT'S ABOUT TIME to give thought to the discomfort caused by too small, too high or too fragile end tables. An end table should be wabble-proof, the same height as arm of chair or divan and large enough to hold a lamp, ash tray, book, etc.

Scorched Linen

To remove scorch from white cottons or linens, wash fabric immediately or place a cloth dampened with hydrogen peroxide over stain. Put a dry cloth on this and press with a warm iron. Repeat if necessary.

Martin, Judge Travis Williams, Curtis McPherson and Judge Virginia Henry Mayfield; secretary, Bob Vail; assistant secretary, Miss Rose Lee Lamb; treasurer, Mrs. Tom Scott; sergeant at arms, Jeff D. Harris, and assistant sergeant at arms, Robert Huey.

Dr. Paul Douglass Speaks Tonight At Meeting of Girl Reserve Mothers

The Girl Reserve Mothers' Council will sponsor a dinner-meeting tonight at 6:15 o'clock in Barker Hall. Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University, will be the guest speaker of the evening. His speech will be a further expression of the ideas he presented at the Senior High School Girl Reserve conference held in October.

There will be a panel of four students from the American University representing Argentina, Brazil, the Orient and the United States. The panel will be further augmented by Mrs. Harold Saunders, chairman of the Mothers' Council, and Dr. Charles Martin or some other member of the commission on the organization of peace.

All mothers of Girl Reserves or of former Girl Reserves, and all advisers of Girl Reserve Clubs are invited to attend the dinner-meeting.

Christmas Bazaar Of Congregational Women Today

The Women's Society of the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, will open their holiday festivities with the annual Christmas bazaar and turkey dinner today. The bazaar will be held throughout the day, followed by the turkey dinner from 5 to 7:30 p. m. Dr. Lloyd C. Douglas, author and minister, will speak at 8 p. m. in the church auditorium.

The Christmas party of the women's society will be held Tuesday at the church. A business meeting, beginning at 11 a. m., will be followed by a luncheon and program of Christmas carols and a Christmas story told by Mrs. John Wallace. Mrs. Bertha Marie Henderson, soloist in an Arlington church, will sing a group of Christmas songs, accompanied by Mrs. Eleanor Furr Long.

Polish Leader Practices What He Preached as News Writer

TIMELY PERSONALITIES

Feminine Christmases Turned Topsy-Turvy by War

Poland's 'Strong Man'—

General Sikorski Is Here on Official Visit

Former Columnist Now Heads Polish Government

By Patricia Grady

No typewriter strategist he.

General Wladislaw Sikorski, prime minster of Poland's government in exile and commander in chief of its reconstituted armies, has had a chance, during the past few years, to practice what he preached as a newspaper columnist in Warsaw.

In a flying official trip to Washington to confer with President Roosevelt, General Sikorski is making his third trip to the Capital in as many years. A little known part of this brilliant military strategist's background is his experience as a columnist of seven years standing for Kurjer Warszawski, Warsaw's leading democratic newspaper. It is this phase of his career that is responsible for his avid interest in the American press and his eager questions about what is a syndicate.

Gifted with that rare quality of personality—magnetism—General Sikorski is now in command of the fifth largest army of the United Nations, numbering about one-quarter of a million. Under the spell of his leadership, this army has been twice reconstituted, first after the German conquest of Poland, then after the surrender of France. Pro-French and anti-German since the last war, it was with sorrow that General Sikorski declined General Petain's request that the Polish divisions in France surrender with the French armies. "This is a time," he is reported to have told General Petain sadly, "when I must say no to a French friend."

GEN. SIKORSKI

Conferences Are in French

This handsome military leader, who looks taller than he is, is a political realist as proved by his insistence on negotiations and understanding with Russia for which he went to Moscow last year. Though his English is halting, he finds no difficulty in making himself understood in official Washington with his fluent French. When he and the President lunched together yesterday, as they will again today, they conversed in French.

He and his daughter, Zofia, whose husband is now a German prisoner of war, share their enthusiasm for horses and are both fine riders. She is now a member of the Polish Army's feminine auxiliary, and Mme. Sikorski, who is also in London, is the leader of the Polish Red Cross. Though sociability is one of his outstanding attributes, the general drinks little, does not smoke and doesn't play cards.

A military prophet, the general wrote a book in 1933 for which he was given an award from the French Academy. Called "Modern Warfare" this work discussed modern war in all its phases and foresaw the widespread use of tanks, airplanes and motorized infantry. During the early thirties, he constantly warned his country against Germany, urging Poland to seek her political future with France, England and Russia.

But his advice was unheeded.

This 61-year-old leader was born in southern Poland, the son of a gentleman farmer, whose estates had been confiscated after the Napoleonic era. Fatherless from the age of 3, General Sikorski worked his way through the technical colleges where he studied engineering. Always a brilliant student, he was regularly first in his class. Inclined to liberalism, he was editor before the first war of a secret paper called "The Polish Question," which circulated all over the country. He was always opposed to dictatorship and from the earliest moments of his work for Polish independence, he was a champion of democracy.

Famous as Military Strategist

Famous throughout the world as a military strategist, General Sikorski is the author of several books on the subject, the prefaces of which were written by Marshal Foch. Though he loves people, the general has little time for parties and last year the large reception planned in his honor in Washington was called off at his request. During this visit his time will be taken up by official conferences, though Saturday afternoon he will take time off to meet a small group of Washingtonians, largely made up of the military attaches of the United Nations.

When he took over the Polish armies after the conquest of Poland, General Sikorski issued an order of the day from his headquarters in Paris which still stands as a superb statement of Poland's interests in the war. "On taking command of the army which is now forming, I declare that from every officer and man I expect conscientious execution of duty and the greatest sacrifice . . . We are all here to defend the honor of Poland and to defend it further, for we do not desire that the Polish army should be absent from the battles which shall decide the fate of Poland. We are not here to make politics, but to fight under the banner of honor and country."

Things Are Different Now

By Adelaide Kerr
Associated Press Feature Writer

It's a topsy turvy Christmas.

The little woman who was rocking the cradle at home last year and wondering how she would pay the grocery bill is running a drill press now and buying perfume for Christmas.

Mrs. Toplofty, who barely managed to make both ends meet on half a million last year, is busy closing the country houses to match a $25,000 income. She has put the limousine in storage, wears low-heeled shoes to walk to her first aid class and is trimming her Christmas list. Any big holiday parties she attends this year will be charity affairs.

Women who used to spend half their time assembling "best dressed" wardrobes, spend their days in simply tailored uniforms. They wedge their Christmas shopping in between selling war bonds and canteen work.

But the most topsy-turvy change is in the debutantes. Ordinarily at this season they would be in the midst of excited preparations for their gala merry-go-round season. This year they are doing war work from nine to five. Then, instead of—ing off to cocktails they go to committee meetings.

No more big, splashy, coming-out parties with champagne flowing like water. So far, not one is scheduled in New York this season. Lots of Manhattan's debs will make their debuts at small dinner parties at the St. Regis and other hotels on the night of the one Junior Assembly just before Christmas. Others will make their bows at the Victory Debutante Cotillion and Ball at the Ritz. Their papas will invest in war bonds the difference in cost between that simple debut and a big party.

New York shopkeepers report to date a good Christmas business which began earlier than usual. The way shoppers are buying upsets tradition, too.

First, they are choosing lots of useful gifts. Wool underwear, sweaters, skirts, dresses and shawls for cool houses. There is also a big play on the three Christmas favorites — lingerie, perfume and stockings (rayon or silk this year). Add to that stacks of playing cards. (People are staying at home nights.)

Second, Christmas shoppers are buying lots of luxurious gifts. Good alligator handbags, which last for years. Fur coats and jackets. And a surprisingly large amount of jewels. A west side New York department store reports that it took over a jeweler's stock valued at half a million and sold $100,000 worth the first week.

One New York beau came several times to look at a diamond bracelet for his girl—but gave it up, when a shop keeper friend was able to get him three pairs of nylon stockings instead.

MISS DIANA ROWLAND

Mrs. George Lauder of Greenwich, Conn., announces the engagement of her niece, Miss Diana Rowland, of Washington to Lieut. Robert Proddow, U. S. N. R. Miss Rowland, daughter of the well-known author, the late Dr. Henry C. Rowland, and the late Mrs. Rowland of Washington, was graduated from Miss Madeira's school and is a member of the Junior League. Lieutenant Proddow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Proddow of Red Bank, N. J., was formerly stationed in Washington and is at present on duty at the Naval Air Station in Norfolk. No date has been set for the wedding

Helen Hayes Among Celebrities Dancing at Blackout Ball

"Big names" from the world of drama and music, and "big-wigs" in the social world dined and danced at the Blackout Ball held at the Mayflower last night for the benefit of Washington's Stage Door Canteen.

Helen Hayes came down from New York to attend; Rosa Ponselle (Mrs. Carl Jackson) came over from Baltimore and adding a filip of interest to the scene was Mrs. James Doolittle, wife of America's famous flying general.

In keeping with wartime no decorations were used in the ballroom. Just as dinner ended the blackout descended, leaving only a single beam of light to spot the famous dance team, Estelle and Leroy.

Josephine Huston, well known blues singer, was also among the entertainers.

Before the fete Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis were among those gathering a few friends in for cocktails, among them Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stettinius, Mr. and Mrs. Angus MacDonald and Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss Coonley.

Down from New York was Frances Paperte, national chairman of special activities of the American Theater Wing's War Production Service, which is opening stage door canteens all over the United States. Among the guests at her table were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kauffmann, Senor and Senora de Araujo, Herbert May and Mrs. R. K. Mellon.

During the evening Miss Paperte broke the news that she had another mission in coming to Washington this time—that of conferring with the Brazilian Ambassador about the project of establishing stage door canteens in Brazil. The plans for the project have already been forwarded to the Brazilian government for consideration, and it is hopen to open a stage door canteen in Rio shortly after the first of the year.

Col. and Mrs. Andrew Van Esso had as guests Gen. and Mrs. Virgil Peterson and Gen. and Mrs. Henry D. Munnikhuysen. With Mr. and Mrs. Walter Distler were Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dodge.

Mrs. Charles M. Kittle of Chicago, sponsor of the benefit, had in her group Mrs. Ambrose Diehl of New York.

Among others at the party were Mrs. George Mesta, who had a large group for cocktails preceding the dinner; Gen. Brehon Somervell, Admiral and Mrs. Emory Scott Land, Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Paul McNutt, the First Secretary of the Bolivian Embassy and Senora Dorado, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Mrs. William Borah, Senator and Mrs. Walter George, Mrs. Thomas Cowell, Senator Arthur Capper, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Firestone, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. Sidney Lee, Lieut. and Mrs. Lawrence Rockefeller, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. G. Wayland Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Mr. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. John Pelley, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence W. Robert, Henry Low and Mrs. George F. Becker.

Many of the young people had organized Dutch treat tables.

Miss Mary Catherine Holmes, daughter of Mrs. George R. Holmes, was in a party of ten. These included Miss Virginia Campbell, Miss Virginia Early, Lieut. (j. g.) and Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., Mr. and Mrs. John White Himes of York, Pa.; Capt. Joseph Darling, Lieut. John Lyman and Ensign Louis Hogstette.

Still others present were Miss Anne Bullitt, Miss Nedenia Hutton, Miss Anne Heard, Edward Steele, Miss Ruth Bielaskie, Lieut. Weams Johnston, Miss Margaret Tuckerman, Lieut. Albert Murray, F. G. Handy, Miss Suzanne Kappler, Ensign James E. Palmer, jr., Miss Patricia Baker, Miss Lydia Langer and Charles Drinkwater.

New Red Cross Executive

L. Clifford Folger Finds Volunteer Workers Untiring

By Peggy Preston

J. Clifford Folger, newly appointed chairman of the District Red Cross, has figured in many a civic enterprise during his eleven years in Washington, but never in one that interests him so much as does his present task.

"The keen, enthusiastic response of these voluntary workers to the exacting demands of the organization, is to me a revelation," he remarked yesterday as he settled down for his first full day's work at his office in the District Red Cross headquarters.

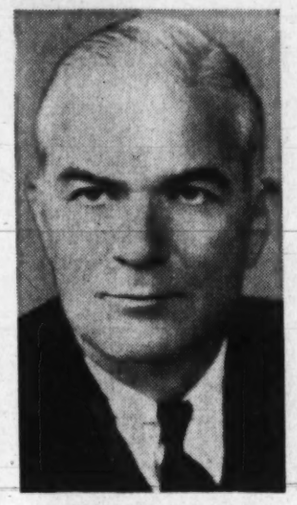
Pointing out that there are 300 voluntary workers to every paid employe of the organization, the tall, capable looking executive maintains that there is something definitely unusual in such statistics.

"It stems, I suppose, from a desire to serve," he continued, "and Washington now is filled with women whose husbands on battlefields far from home, may one day be the beneficiaries of services performed right here by their wives. At any rate the jobs they are doing are invaluable."

Succeeds Brigadier General Keefer

Named to the position of chairman a few weeks ago at the time of the retirement of Brig. Gen. Frank R. Keefer, Mr. Folger has no new plans of policy to announce at this time. His duties, he points out, will be of an administrative nature and will follow closely the policies and practices of General Keefer, who served the organization as chairman for a number of years.

There will be, however, a campaign to enlarge the blood donor service, according to Mr. Folger.



CLIFFORD FOLGER

"The Blood Donor Center in Washington is one of 18 such groups in the country," he points out, "And ours is one of the largest and most important. We plan to reach a total of 500 pints of blood a day in our center before the year is out."

Reveals Plans For Enlarging Donor Service

A native of Pullman, Wash., Mr. Folger came to Washington in 1929 and has since been engaged in the banking business. Last year he was in charge of the Community Chest campaign and has headed various charitable drives. Among his other activities has been his work on the executive committee of the cathedral and as a member of the board of Garfield Hospital.

Was Active In Civic Drives

As vice president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, Mr. Folger became known nationally as a man who got things done in short order. Organization work comes natural with him and his new job is the kind he likes best.

"I'm sure I can't add much to the work already being done here," he said. "But I'm like these women volunteers, it affords me a chance to serve."

MRS. WILLIAM N. McDONALD

Miss Ruth Seely Berry Wed to Ensign McDonald

At 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon in the Church of the Resurrection in New York City, there was a wedding of much interest throughout Virginia and New York when Miss Ruth Seely Berry and Ensign William Naylor McDonald 3d, United States Naval Reserves, were married by the Rev. Gordon Butler Wadhams.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Romeyn Berry of Stoneposts, Jacksonville, N. Y., was given in marriage by her father. She wore an empire gown of candlelight satin with long sleeves and a train and her fingertip veil of bridal illusion hung from a coronet of seed pearls. She carried calla lilies.

Mrs. Robert Spaulding Hutchings of New York, wearing a period gown of Queen Anne blue taffeta with matching coronet, was matron of honor and the maid of honor was Miss Barbara Crittenden White of Ithaca, N. Y., whose gown was of Florentine rose taffeta, made similar to the matron of honor. Her feathered coronet was the same shade as her gown and both of the attendants carried bouquets of mixed fall flowers.

Ensign McDonald, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Marshall McDonald of Gloversville, N. Y., had his father as his best man, and his ushers were Bayard McD. Stevens, Lieut. Comdr. Robert Clark, U. S. N. R., both cousins of the bridegroom; also Pvt. James Youill, U. S. A. R.; Charles Rutledge, Robert Hutchings and John Murray, all of New York. Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the Cornell Club.

The bride is a graduate of Wells College, and attended the Geneva School of International Studies in Switzerland. Her father was a former graduate manager of athletics of Cornell University.

Ensign McDonald is a grandson of the late Capt. William Naylor McDonald and Mrs. McDonald of Berryville, Va., a descendant of Col. Angus McDonald of Winchester, Va., also a descendant of Col. Charles Simms, one of the founders of the Society of Cincinnatti and descended from another Revolutionary officer on his maternal side, Col. Peter Wagner. Ensign McDonald's maternal grandfather was the late George H. Loadwick, publisher of the Morning Sentinel in Amsterdam, N. Y. The young couple will spend their honeymoon in Miami, Fla., after which the bridegroom will return to his post in Cuba where he is on active duty.

Those who attended the wedding from here were Mrs. Ellery Leckie Eustaphieve, Mrs. Bayard Stevens and Miss Katharine P. McDonald, all aunts of the bridegroom.

Mary M. Beery To Be Bride In December

Mr. and Mrs. William Warren Berry of Fort Belvoir, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Mercedes, to Lieut. Ewing Gordon Simpson, U. S. N. R., son of Mr. and Mrs. Hendree P. Simpson of Arlington.

The wedding is to take place at a candlelight ceremony on December 22 at Old Pohick Church in Fairfax County, Va.

Miss Berry attended Goucher College in Baltimore and was graduated from Beloit College, Beloit, Wis., later entering Government service. At present the bride-to-be is in the administrative personnel of the War Production Board.

Lieutenant Simpson was graduated from the University of Virginia with degrees in both electrical engineering and law, and continued his graduate study in law at Yale University. He is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa, Phi Alpha Delta Fraternities, and Tau Beta Pi Engineering Honorary Society. Before being called to active duty in the Navy, he was associated with the Federal Power Commission in Washington as senior trial examiner.

Virginia Couple On Honeymoon

Upon their return from a wedding trip to Hot Springs, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Hynes, jr., will make their home in Mount Jackson. The bride is the former Miss Dorothy Page Wissler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wissler of Strathmore, near Mount Jackson.

The couple were united in marriage on November 25, at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. J. A. Brown officiated at the 8:30 ceremony. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown, made with tight fitting bodice and circular train. Her tulle veil fell from a cap of chantilly lace and she carried her frandmother's prayerbook under a spray of white orchids. Mrs. Sydney Bird Payne was matron of honor and J. Mathews Neale was best man. A reception followed immediately.

Mrs. James Couzens Here From Michigan

Mrs. James Couzens, widow of Senator Couzens, is here from her home, Wabeek, at Pontiac, Mich., for a brief stay at the Mayflower.

Mrs. Couzens came to see her daughter, Mrs. Herbert Bryant, who has been ill and is expected to return from the hospital to her home near Alexandria today or tomorrow.

MISS JACQUELINE BOND JONES,

Bachrach

whose engagement to Lieut. Howard S. Rue, jr., U. S. N. R., of Tarrymoor, Bryn Mawr, Pa., has recently been announced. Miss Jones is the daughter of Mrs. Roy Kehlor Jones and the late Lieutenant Commander Jones, U. S. N. She attended Gunston Hall. Lieutenant Rue attended Haverford School and the University of Pennsylvania. No date has been set for the wedding. Commander Jones was killed in 1927 on the Submarine U. S. S.-4 off the New England Coast. The bride-elect's brother is a midshipman at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and will graduate in 1944

Argentine Envoy Gives Luncheon

In Washington for a brief visit on his way to New York was Angel Bohigas, codirector of Argentina's famous newspaper, La Nacion.

Senor Bohigas was guest of honor at a luncheon of about 40 guests given yesterday by the Argentine Ambassador, Don Felipe Espil, and left later for New York. He will be there until December 15.

R. Satterfields, Recently Wed, To Live Here

Raymond Satterfield, U. S. N. R., and his bride, the former Miss Ruth I. Andrews, who were married November 24, have returned from their honeymoon in New York.

The wedding was held in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church with the Rev. John W. Rustin officiating. Kenneth Brown gave his niece in marriage.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Andrews of McColl, S. C.

Attendants at the wedding were Miss Elizabeth Payne, maid of honor, and Miss Beth Whitehurst and Mrs. Jean Andrews, bridesmaids. Nancy Kay Koelker was the flower girl.

Mr. Satterfield had as his best man Troy T. Hankins, and the ushers were Joseph C. Reamy and Parker Jeffers.

Former Premier To Make Speech

Camille Chautemps, former Premier of France, and Mme. Chautemps will leave today for Princeton, N. J., where M. Chautemps will address Princeton University students and faculty at a forum, "France in the Democratic Postwar World."

The meeting is under the auspices of the American Whig-Cliosophic Society of the university.

M. and Mme. Chautemps will be honor guests at a dinner this evening at which Dean and Mrs. Christian Gauss will be hosts.

Accompanying the former Premier and Mme. Chautemps from Washington are Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz, formerly of Marseille.

On Visit Here

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniels has as her house guests Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Stephens of New Orleans, La., and Mrs. John Randolph of Richmond, Va.

Purely Personal

Dr. Vladimir Rybar, counselor of the Yugoslav Embassy, and his bride, the former Mme. Elvina Orlicz-Dreszer, have returned from New York and are making their home at 3700 Massachusetts Avenue.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long have closed their country home at Laurel, Md., and have taken up residence in their apartment at the Mayflower.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Gardner Putnam will entertain at a cocktail party in honor of Miss Marjorie Smith and her fiance, Maj. Hule Smith. The fete will take place from 5 to 7 o'clock on Saturday, December 12, in their apartment at 1735 New Hampshire Avenue.

Mrs. Thomas Leiter is spending a few days in New York at the Ritz-Carlton.

Mrs. Thomas C. Jenkins is at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York en route to her home in Washington from a stay at Saratoga Springs.

Mrs. Wallace A. Sprague has gone to Maplewood, N. J., to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Dull.

Mrs. Fulton Lewis in in New York for a brief stay. She is at the Ambassador.

Ever peek at a woman's diary?

November 20

Dear Diary:

Tonight I'm really mad! Along with everything else that's been happening to me all day, I had to come home and find Ella, the maid, ready to leave. She's off to a munitions plant in another city. "Now, isn't that a pretty mess?" I thought. And I'm still thinking . . . and seeing red! Just how and where am I going to get another maid that I can trust with Junior and who can cook, too?

November 22

Dear Diary:

Hooray! I've got a peach of a maid! Want to know how I got her so quickly? Well, when I called the office yesterday and told them why I couldn't come to work, the girl at the phone told me to advertise for a new maid in The Post. She was so enthusiastic about The Post's quick results that I placed a help wanted ad right away. It appeared this morning and one of the many applicants I interviewed proved to be just the right girl. That girl at the office was sure right. The Post brings quick results.

If your maid leaves, don't tear your hair out. Let The Post find you another girl. Help Wanted Ads are inexpensive—only 22 cents per line, even less for three or more insertions.

Phone NAtional 4200 and an experienced ad-taker will help you write your ad.

School Chiefs Ask $5,000,000 Vocational Aid

Adoption of a resolution asking the Federal Government to provide immediately five million dollars for the expansion of vocational rehabilitation divisions in schools throughout the country was announced yesterday by the National Council of Chief State School Officers.

The funds would provide services for physically handicapped persons who can be prepared for and placed in war production and other employment, council officials said at the annual conference last weekend at the Shoreham Hotel.

The council also recommended that Congress appropriate funds to support extended school services to the children of working mothers, such services not now being included and provided for in any of the school budgets. Fees might be paid by the mothers for the service, it was stated, with full responsibility to be undertaken by the council "individually and collectively."

It was agreed at the conference to oppose the appropriation of funds for education to any Federal unit other than the Office of Education, and authorized State education officers.

The meeting further stressed that all pupils should remain in high school until 18 years of age or graduation.

The War Production Board's assistance in expediting construction of needed school facilities for which certificates of necessity have been issued was urged by the council.

OPA Warns Visiting Drivers Of Tire Inspection

A warning to out-of-town passenger car users and commercial vehicle operators that they are required under OPA regulations to report for inspection of their cars and tires during the December-January period went out yesterday from the office of Whitney Leary, District OPA director.

The warning to report to one of the 287 officially designated stations in the District was issued because the numbers of out-of-town cars and commercial vehicles were not included in the list published recently in Washington papers.

The director urged that these two groups report as early as possible and declared that responsibility for this is theirs.

Motor vehicles will not be permitted to use gasoline after January 31 unless their tires have been officially inspected by that day, Leary pointed out.

Auctioning of Frank's Curios Stirs Memories of By-Gone Day

By Chandler P. Brossard
Post Staff Writer

Victorian era ghosts came off the shelves and out of the closets yesterday and paraded in all their anachronistic elegance before collectors and curious alike at Weschler's auction rooms.

All of the items and bric-a-brac imaginable that were manufactured when Oscar Wilde was being witty and Aubrey Beardsley was the god of the smart young sets were brought out on the auctioneer's table and given a new typing that started at "not under $1, please."

Charles Lee Frank, connoisseur and artist, with his great "sensitivity to the beautiful," missed not one invention of the nineties during his tours of the home holy and the shop commercial. It was his collection that went on the block.

Being an habitue of auction rooms himself, Mr. Frank surely would not have twitched in his resting place knowing that his collector's items were being sold in the market with very little pause for contemplation of the esthetic. He did so himself.

A spherical glass door stop ruffled the calmness of the scene only slightly with two bidders raising their eyebrows several times up to the $35 mark.

Call it sacrilege, but three wood ceremonial chalices were seized upon with a weak $3 grip by one woman in black.

A Dresden china stein, with miniature, hand-painted panel of Bacchus and Nymphs, was given away for $35; while its cousin, a copper luster pitcher with no bottom was purchased for $4 by a man with a dreamy countenance.

Another slight stir was created by a circular silver egg basket with hen feet. From pillar to post and back again went the basket—sans eggs—finally becoming the chattel of someone for a mere $27.50.

Th auction will be repeated today at the Adam A. Weschler & Son establishment, 915 E Street Northwest.

Gossips Asked to Be Terse As a Telegram on WPB Phones

By Kenneth L. Dixon
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Office of War Information cut in on the party line yesterday and warned the "business telephone" gossipers that the War Production Board had their number.

It seems that such confidential conversations as "shucks now, sugar, you're the only gal I ever look at," and "that sand-trap on the thirteenth hole robbed me of a birdie," are not considered essential to the war effort.

And, in view of the fact that more telephone equipment is needed in no-man's-land, even essential conversations should be shortened.

At least that's the opinion of WPB's communications equipment division which has the situation under study.

Since materials used in telephone installations and operations are "critically scarce," Director Leighton H. Peebles of the division gave a line ring to all communications companies and reeled off these recommendations:

1. Greater use of party lines on private branch exchanges.

2. Acceptance by the people) of slower service standards "in recognition of the fact that war-essential copper cannot be supplied merely to provide for the convenience of the customers."

3. Analyses of the calls handled with a view to limiting the personal and nonessential business ones and eliminating all unnecessary service.

4. Studies looking to a reduction of the average time interval of telephone conversations by adoption of more expeditious procedures.

Peebles did not enlarge on the last recommendation, but an OWI spokesman said the officials felt that lengthy conversations between sweethearts over "war essential" business phones would be frowned on. He suggested that—when absolutely necessary to love's progress—they could at least be cut short, a la cablese, to something like this:

"Hiya, Babe . . . corner drug . . . 12:15 sharp."

More Women Give Worn Hosiery For War Effort

Washington women yesterday continued to turn in to designated centers their wornout nylon and silk stockings, stimulated by reiterated declarations that the need is critical for such material, which eventually will find its way into gunpowder bags and other war goods.

All retail stores in the District having women's and misses' hosiery departments are accepting the donations.

Smaller stores which are not accumulating sufficient hosiery for shipment have been directed to deliver hosiery weekly to the nearest official shipping depot, and stores outside of the downtown area are instructed to call the District Salvage Committee when 12 to 15 pounds of hosiery has been collected.

Designated shipping centers are Hecht's, Kann's, Lansburgh's, Woodward & Lothrop, Palais Royal, Jelleff's, Garfinkle's, Sears-Roebuck, 911 Bladensburg Road Northeast and Wisconsin and Albemarle Northwest; Goldenberg's, Ida's and Hahn's Arcade Shoe Store.

'The Major and the Minor,' Palace, a Warning to Men!

Ginger Rogers Makes Plain the Hazards Of Kindness to Young Women in Distress; Varied Short Subjects Augment New Bill

"THE MAJOR AND THE MINOR." Paramount picturization of a screen play by Charles Brackett and William Wilder, costarring Ginger Rogers and Ray Milland, with Rita Johnson, Robert Benchley, Diana Lynn, Edward Fielding, Gretl Sherk, Raymond Roe, Frankie Thomas, jr., Charlie Smith, Larry Nunn, Billy Dawson, Stanley Desmond, Billy Ray, Norma Varden, Marie Blake, Mary Field and Lela Rogers. Directed by William Wyler. At Loew's Palace.

THE MASCULINE MORAL seems to be never to give succor to 12-year-olds in Pullman cars. Any one of them may turn out to be a Fannie Brice, doing a "Baby Snooks"; a Sheila Barrett, or a Ginger Rogers, beating a ride back home, as in "The Major and the Minor," which opens this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater.

For that's the way it is with Maj. Phillip Kirby and "little Susan Applegate." You know, of course, that the adolescent Susan is a "glamour gal" of parts, fleeing the great and wolfish city and merely trying, in her artful way, to cheat the conductor out of the other half of a full-fare ticket. But Major Kirby does not. So, his paternal instinct turning over on all motors, he takes the demure and desolate refugee under his protective wing, wafting him back against his will to the headmastership of the junior military academy, when what he really craves is active duty at the front. That is the shady doing of the acquisitive daughter of the commandant, to whom he is betrothed.

It should be obvious by now what fecund fields of comic conquest are opened to Miss Applegate in the circumstances. Her presence at the academy is devastating to the discipline and morale of the juvenile generals, a source of keen irritation to Pamela Hill, who perceives omens of ominous rivalry in her masquerading guest, when the major suddenly is ordered to active duty as the result of some mysterious long-distance phone calls from the school, and a sheer delight to Pamela's "scientist" kid sister who is early "in" on the whole thing.

When the hopelessly tangled complications finally begin to unravel themselves, after another precipitous flight on the part of Miss Applegate, it becomes necessary for that strangely seductive young person to abandon the 12-year-old guise and impersonate her own mother—a task theretofore devolving upon Lela Rogers, Ginger's maternal forebear in fact as well as fiction.

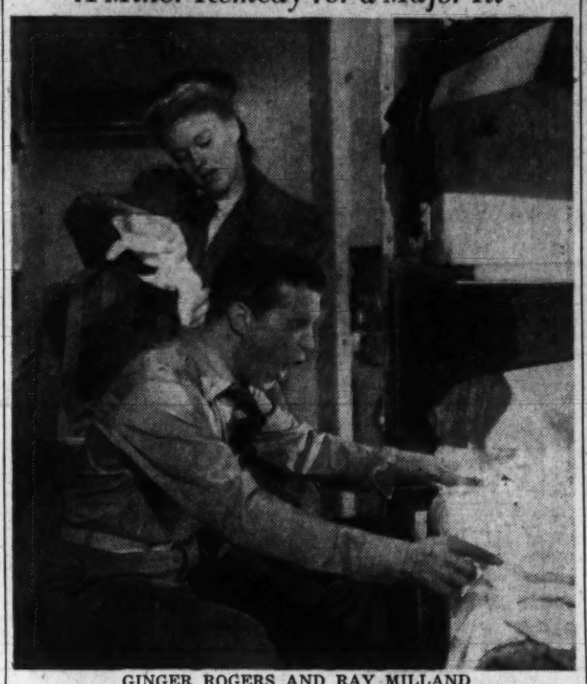
If all this sounds too complex, it isn't. If it sounds continuously convulsing, it isn't that, either. What it is, is a genially amusing comedy that sometimes places pretty severe strain on the credulity, but never raises any doubt as to the competence with which it is acted by a pleasant cast and directed by William Wyler, who had a hand with Charles Brackett in contriving the story.

Funnier in Situation Than in Characters

While Miss Rogers is given wide scope for her varied talents in the major "Minor" role of the title, the humor rests less upon her assumption of "country bumpkin" juvenility than upon the suspenseful predicaments in which she is placed. Her easy assurance in coping with the romantic inclinations of the cadet enrollment is highly diverting in a telltale sort of way, but no more so than her adult jousts with her rival Pamela, or her amiable conspiracies with the strange kid sister intent on her elder's untrussing. Through it all, somehow, to these astigmatic eyes, Miss Rogers seems strangely like Fred Astaire's former dancing partner—particularly in the hilarious scene in which she taps the switchboard away from the susceptible plebe who fancies himself to be a bit of a hoofer. Ray Milland, as the Major, turns in a thoroughly workmanlike job, as the gullible officer, and Robert Benchley has an inconspicuous, but important part, as the New York playboy executive whose confusion of a scalp treatment with the birth of the grand passion impels Miss Applegate's flight and motivates the entire charade. He turns up later at the academy at a most inopportune moment with disastrous results to Miss Applegate's apple cart. Rita Johnson, in the role of Pamela, plays with asperity and a lively charm to everyone but Susan. The juvenile roles are uniformly well taken, especially the prescient younger sister, impersonated by a youthful actress one presumes to be Diana Lynn.

The supplementary films on the new Palace bill will be found to be something more than negligible. The color cameras found a fruitful subject in the FitzPatrick Traveltalk, "Exotic Mexico," and, as usual, made the most of it. In Pete Smith's "Calling All Pa's," M.-G.-M. presents another telling example of the narrator's facile wit and the "News of the Day" keeps the screen reasonably abreast of the headlines. The weekly salute to the Government's war effort bears the title of "Keeping Fit," which is a piece of good advice that seems to require no further elucidation here. Perhaps all that remains to be said is that the bill is engaging and enlivening without pretense to anything extraordinary or "epochal."

A Minor Remedy for a Major Ill



GINGER ROGERS AND RAY MILLAND as they will be seen in one of the amusing early sequences in Paramount's production of "The Major and the Minor," opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Major Milland never should have let himself in for the Pullman car ministrations of a 12-year-old "glamour gal." At least, that's what Rita Johnson, Robert Benchley and others in the cast thought!

An Apostle of Art Drops a Hint!

Hollywood, Dec. 2.—Kitty Carlisle says it was George Jean Nathan who's responsible for her becoming a night club singer. One day, while lunching with him, she told him about a night club offer she was considering, and George said, "don't be ashamed of working in night clubs. They're the field of the future—that's where people go for relaxation." Kitty's mighty glad she took that advice.

Dinah Shore, who's now working in "Thank Your Lucky Stars," has been doing so many Army camps that she says if she ever gets all the presents the boys have promised her she'll have a museum.

Ann Sothern has heard from Bob Sterling, who's going through his tests in the Air Corps and says he hopes to be trained as a pilot. Every one there calls him Bob, though his real name, under which he enlisted, is Bill Hart.

When Prof. Frank Judson brought his University of Southern California class in cinema production to visit on the "Unconquered" set, he and Director Fritz Lang worked out plans for sneak previewing the picture at U. S. C.s Lang figures there's nothing better than a college crowd for giving you a quick cross-section of audience reaction.

Judy Garland visited over at Republic to watch that Rangoon roll number in "Hit Parade of 1943."

Bachelor Bert (Mad Russian) Gordon is running about his neighborhood teaching all the housewives about food conservation in case of air raids or gas attacks. It's one of his OCD duties, and in case he misses you, the four main dangers to food are: (1) flying glass, (2) smoke and gasses from exploding bombs, (3) dust from explosion, and (4) poison gas.

Ted Lewis tells about the time Bing Crosby's horse trainer rushed up to him and said, "One of your horses finally won a race—beat three other nags!" "That's great!" said Bing. "Who were the horses we beat?" "Well," said the trainer, "they were yours, too!"

Deanna Durbin had the hair-do of the week, with no less than 52 curls on her head, according to Hairdresser Emily Moore.

That soldier Susan Hayward has been holding hands with on the set of "Hit Parade of 1943" is none other than Pvt. Howard Mariner, her brother. Well, that's what she says!

Directors Norman Taurog and Sylvan Simon, who were in the hospital being operated on at the same time; weren't allowed to talk to each other over the phone. So they sent notes back and forth via sympathetic nurses, who censored them carefully to see that the boys weren't talking shop.

When Otto Preminger goes East to do his play, "The Seventh Cross," he'll take up his teaching job at the Yale School of Drama, which he's been doing for several years.

Marjorie Lord and John Archer, who were married almost a year ago, are finally going on a honeymoon. They're getting two weeks off from their respective studios, Universal and Twentieth, and will spend it bicycling up to Santa Barbara.

Norman Abbott, Bud's nephew, who's now a full-fledged member of the Dead End Kids, got some presents when he started "Bad Company." Uncle Bud presented him with a ham, and the rest of the gang gave him a jar of raspberries.

Columbia

That out-and-out bounder, Strickland, is now holding forth at Loew's Columbia after exerting his fatal fascination for two weeks at the Palace. Forcefully portrayed by George Sanders, the central character of W. Somerset Maugham's "The Moon and Sixpence" is the most interesting figure to be seen on the screen in some time. The unusual story of the painter, who, in his desire to express his emotions on canvas, broke all the bonds and conventions of society, is given unique screen treatment that is completely in harmony with the tale.

Herbert Marshall is seen in the role of friend and narrator, while the supporting cast includes Steve Geray, Doris Dudley, Albert Basserman and Elena Verdugo.

Broadway Bulletins

New York, Dec. 2.

Noel Coward received a record high of $500,000 for the American distribution rights to his new movie about the British navy, "In Which We Serve" . . . Chester Davis of the Federal Reserve Bank and formerly with the Department of Agriculture has been the leading candidate for the food distributor's job soon to be announced by the President . . . Five minutes before the Cocoanut Grove fire in Boston, Senator Happy Chandler drove by with an engineer who stopped him from entering by saying: "It's a fire trap."

NOEL COWARD

Harold Ickes' last words before seeing the President about taking over the manpower job were: "Unless they've thought of new ways of bringing pressure upon me, I won't give up Interior" . . . Dr. D. W. A., the diagnostician called in to treat Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, has been the only outsider allowed on the entire floor of the hospital where she's a patient. She's the only patient on the floor . . . Mrs. Louis Bromfield has completed her first novel. It will be published shortly . . . The Board of Education has one firm rule for its members—any member who is tardy for meetings, no matter the excuse, must pay a $2 fine.

Billy Leeds, the "tin-plate king," will receive a plaque from Bellevue Hospital in recognition of his gift of the blood-plasma machines there . . . Henri Bendel, New York's noted couturier, now is a sergeant in charge of the mess hall at Camp Lee, Va. . . . Washington Gridiron Dinner will be held this year on December 12, but will be for members only. And the sketches will be written by out-of-town members, so that the capital's newspaper men won't have to halt their work . . . The 4 ft. 9 inch soldier who wears an M. Sigmund Romberg, who comes from the Balkans, is writing an operetta about Mikhailovich and the Chetniks. Gene Marvey is slated for the leading role . . . Three songwriters were admitted to membership in ASCAP last Friday. They are Igor Stravinsky, Meredith Willson and Milt Ebbins, who is Count Basie's manager . . . Herman Mankiewicz, the noted screen writer, is studying Arabian dialects in the hope of getting to Africa with Ben Hecht's newspaper project . . . The Negro newspaper, Amsterdam Star-News, has changed its name to the New York Star-News, and soon will start publishing a national edition for distribution throughout America.

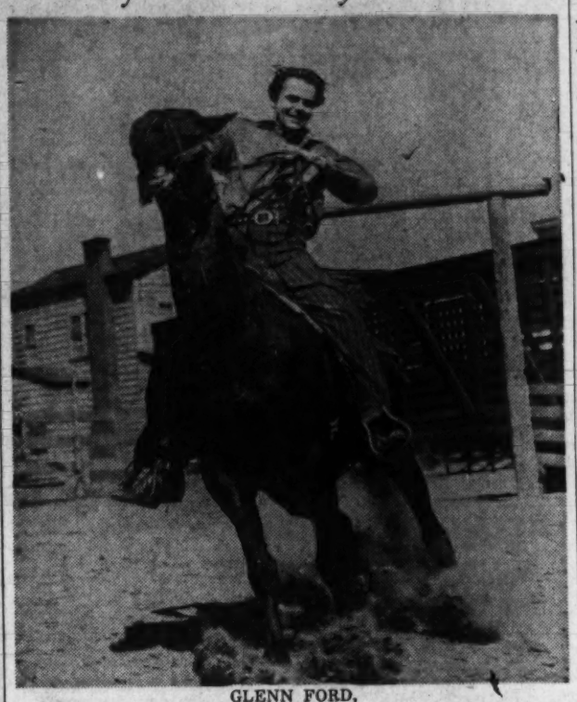
Because their work needs no translation, dancer Paul Draper and harmonica-player Larry Adler may be the first American entertainers to perform at the Russian front. They're going to London first . . . The report in Boston is that Marshall Field may invade the newspaper field there . . . Lion Feuchtwanger's new novel will be called "Double, Double, Toil and Trouble" . . . Maxwell Anderson, whose play, "High Tor," predicted that the Hudson's craggy headland would be chiseled down by quarrymen plans to foil that prediction. He's heading a committee of Hudson River folk who will raise funds to buy and present it to the Palisades Interstate Park Commission.

Lem Ward, the brilliant young director who died last week, still has his voice heard on Broadway. His is the voice broadcasting the news-bulletins in "The Eve of St. Mark," the play Ward directed . . . Federal Judge Hulbert wanted to appoint one of Tom Dewey's former aides as counsel for some of the Nazis recently convicted here. The lawyer, who had spurned a $25,000 fee in another Nazi case, finally was excused when he warned the prosecutor that the Government's evidence consisted of material he himself had dug up, when he worked on the Fritz Kuhn case for Dewey . . . Bert Lahr will play a Will Hays character in his next show.

They Insist He Really Can Ride!



GLENN FORD,

gentlest and most diffident of young men, has won the distinction of being known on the lots as "the director's dream of authenticity." For example, they say he is "a horseman who can outride any cowboy on the screen." He seems to be demonstrating it here in a shot from "The Desperadoes," in which he costars with Claire Trevor, Randolph Scott and Evelyn Keyes for Columbia—but in Technicolor

Old Favorite Back on View At the Little

If you are one of those unfortunates who have not seen that superb example of the French film at its best, "Carnet de Bal," then the opportunity is at hand for you to remedy this oversight. For the second time, the Little Theater is reviving this sharply dramatic picture, the first being the occasion of the inauguration of its foreign film policy.

Despite its generaly melancholy tone, "Carnet de Bal" is shot full of human interest which prevents it from becoming, at any time, monotonous. The story has to do with the frustration and curiosity of a lonely widow who goes in search of 10 men who once professed to love her.

Like many who have sought the happiness of the past, Christine's journey results only in the destruction of a treasured dream when she discovers that the marvelous ballroom of her girlhood days is nothing but a common, provincial town hall. Returning home, she learns that the main object of her search has been living only a few miles away. Going there at once, she finds he is dead, but seeks solace by adopting his orphan son.

While it is written in episodic form, the picture is held together by the strong sympathy created by Christine who, in tracing the men whose signatures filled the dance program of her first ball finds only disillusion and tragedy at each point.

No other foreign film has had such an imposing cast. Marie Bell is the Christine of the story, and each scene is a beautifully portrayed vignette of outstanding dramatic quality. Raimu, Harry Bauer, Louis Jouvet, Pierre Blanchar and Fernandel, all master performers, are cast in the roles of the former lovers who have all met unhappy fates.

Julian Duvivire, who directed "Tales of Manhattan," has done an excellent job, giving innumerable realistic details to each scene. The technical work and photography are better than average and the musical score by Maurice Jaubert plays an important part in conveying the moods.

Lorre Will Return To Broadway Stage

Hollywood.—Peter Lorre has signed a contract with Ernest Pascal to star in and direct the latter's new play, "I Play the Devil," on the New York stage. Lorre leaves Hollywood to start rehearsals as soon as he completes his current film role with George Raft and Brenda Marshall in Warner Brothers' "Background to Danger."

Rides Old Trail To Screen Fame

Hollywood.—Riding the same studio trails which her famed father, Jack Holt, cantered over more than a quarter of a century ago in achieving screen stardom, Jennifer Holt today is Hollywood's newest darling of Western and action picture fans.

Nineteen, blond haired and brown eyed, Jennifer is already toting a six-gun with eight notches, one for each featured leading role. Yet it was less than a year ago that she made her film bow at Universal studios as the romantic screen sweetheart of one-time grid hero Johnny Mack Brown.

In achieving this distinction, Jennifer has been riding the same trails traversed by her two-fisted father. For it was at Universal, during those early and hectic years when films were almost strictly cowboys and Indians that Jack shot his way to stardom and big money.

Jennifer's success gives the screen three Holts, for she is also young Tim Holt's kid sister and closest pal. Now definitely a part of Hollywood, Jennifer spent little of her youth in the film capital. Brought up by her mother, she studied in Europe and South America. She saw much of the world as a youngster. She finished her schooling, however, in southern California and early showed promise of becoming a concert singer.

But her birthright of acting could not be denied and after a season in New England, where she tried out her thespian wings in the summer theater, Jennifer decided to try films. She was immediately successful.

Enlist, or Else—

Hollywood—Actress Margie Stewart made her dog enlist in the Army. Screen newcomer, getting her break with Pat O'Brien, Randy Scott and Anne Shirley in RKO-Radio's "Bombardier," said it was that, or else—. Dog is a Great Dane, eats 3 pounds of meat per day. "Only enlistees," said Margie, "get that."

WAACS Train At Daytona

A new group of WAAC members assembled Tuesday at Florida's famed Daytona Beach to undergo a basic training course which will enable them to do many tasks now performed by Army officers and enlisted men. At the sea shore which attracts winter tourists, khaki will be the predominant note as the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps takes over resort hotels, attend outdoor classes in the baseball park and receive field training on the ocean front. The accompanying pictures depict activities in the daily routine of WAACS at the new training center. In these ideal surroundings, WAACS are taught a wide variety of jobs and occupations

The WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Army, Navy Wasting Youthful Manpower

THE NATION may face a shortage of manpower, but here is some of the Army and Navy wastage which seems to indicate theat they have manpower to burn.

Guards are kept on duty, day and night, in front of the dormitories in the Harvard Yard, Cambridge, Mass., to protect the young men now taking courses in naval science. These guards are trained fighting men, equipped with arms supposedly needed at the front. The students inside the dormitories presumably are in no greater danger than their predecessors during more than a century of Harvard study.

DREW PEARSON

Parking lots for officers around Army-Navy buildings are guarded by young M. P. soldiers. Nonmilitary departments use older guards, veterans of the last war.

The fall planting of grass seed around Bolling Field, Air Corps base for Washington, was done by uniformed enlisted men, who thought, when they joined the Air Corps, they might have some connection with airplanes. They were disappointed and disillusioned by this experience.

At the same air field, a trained pharmacist, who has an advanced college degree in science, is being employed as an ambulance driver. A taxicab driver could do the job just as well.

Naval yeomen carrying radio messages from one officer to another inside the Navy Department must wait 30 minutes to an hour, or even more, while each officer reads the message, confers with his associates, and acts. The yeoman cannot come back later, he has to wait. Able-bodied and intelligent, sometimes they are able to deliver only three or four messages a day.

The former president of an ordnance plant, now a private in the Army, is serving as caretaker at an officers' club at an Air Corps base.

The Navy Department is so overstaffed with officers doing paper work that one young ensign, who wanted to be sent to sea, adopted the practice of reading a brightly-bound detective novel at his desk. He made his lack of duties so conspicuous that his superiors were embarrassed, finally sent him to sea.

Many a handsome, uniformed Marine, who has joined the Marines to fight the war, finds himself stuck in the Navy Department Building running errands or standing guard in doorways. Why interior guards of combat age are needed remains a puzzle, because no one can enter the building without a special pass. Civilian departments use old World War veterans as guards.

Capital Chaff

NEW SERGEANT AT ARMS of the Senate will be Wall Doxey, retiring Senator from Mississippi, replacing Chesley Jurney, former secretary to the late Senator Copeland of New York . . . Republican Ed Moore, the Oklahoma oil man who stunned the country by defeating Democratic Josh Lee for the Senate, now seriously considers switching to the Democratic side of the Senate. Moore was once a Democrat, now thinks he could get more poltical patronage that way . . . (Wrong dope, Senator-elect Moore. Roosevelt gives the jobs to Republicans these days) . . . A wave of "fear buying" of radio batteries is sweeping the country, but is unnecessary and harmful. The WPB has limited sales of batteries to curtail this wave, but it has not frozen them . . . Representative-elect Will Rogers, son of the cowboy humorist, will be the only member of Congress who has ever been on KP duty in the Army in this war . . . Franklin Roosevelt 3d, grandson of the President, has a regular detail of Secret Service guards.

Oil for New England

CONGRESSWOMAN Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts (who authorized the legislation creating the WAACS) has been hounding Petroleum Coordinator Ickes with the warning that New England will freeze for lack of fuel oil.

"We are not going to get more than 50 per cent, and perhaps not more than 40 per cent of our normal requirements," says Mrs. Rogers. "It's a dangerous situation—far more dangerous than anyone in Washington realizes. It's more serious than merely a matter of discomfort. There is the threat of epidemic, like the flu epidemic of the last war.

Mrs. Rogers also wants F. D. R. to put the entire oil problem under either Mr. Ickes, or Mr. Henderson, or Mr. Nelson, or Mr. Eastman, instead of spliting it among them.

"Before this winter is over," she warns, "oil will be a far more serious problem than rubber."

NOTE: Latest and heaviest drains of East Coast oil are the Navy's requirements for ships going to North Africa.

More Income Ceilings

ONE OF THE TOUGHEST tax problems before Congress is to decide whether or not there should be a $25,000 ceiling on all unearned incomes.

Beginning January 1, there is a ceiling on all salaries above $25,000, but there is no provision permitting the President to limit incomes from investments. Thus the man who makes his living through a salary, can make only so much. But the man whose family accumulated a fortune, and who gets his money by clipping coupons, can receive jjust as much as before.

Reason for t!~ is the law passed by Congress last summer, giving the Presid~t the power to place a ceiling on salaries but not on unearned incomes.

The law slipped through Congress partly by accident anyway. If some of the Old Guard Senators had realized that the bill even went so far as to limit salaries, they never would have passed it. But when they asked Senator Prentiss Brown of Michigan, in charge of the bill, whether it permitted the President to place a ceiling on salaries, he replied, "We'll come back to that later."

And the Old Guard Senators forgot to come back to it.

So now having passed the limitation on salaries, Congress is faced with the problem of either repealing the salary ceiling or placing a ceiling on unearned incomes. They don't want to do either.

The gathering storm was presaged last week by Senator George, who declared that the validity of the salary ceiling was certain to be challenged by the new Congress.

NOTE: Critics of the President are saying that he benefits by the present provisions since his mother left him a considerable income from unearned investments. Real truth, however, is that F. D. R. and Mrs. Roosevelt are boosting the plan for an equalized ceiling on all incomes, both earned and unearned.

Merry-Go-Round

JOSH LEE, retiring Senator from Oklahoma, looks like a sure bet for appointment to the Civil Aeronautics Board. Josh did more than any other man in Congress to pioneer for big cargo planes . . . Also after the aeronautics appointment is Congressman Andrew Edmiston of West Virginia . . . Walter Winchell is flying to South America for a visit of about a month . . . The Nazis situation on Tunis is like Guadalcanal in reverse. They could land men by plane with small arms, but no heavy arms. Until recently that's the way the Marines were in the Solomons . . .

Laval Planning New Government

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 2 (AP).—French Chief of Government Pierre Laval has arrived in Berlin for discussions on formation of a new Vichy government, a Swiss dispatch from Milan, Italy, said tonight.

Laval already has announced formation of a volunteer "African Falange" of Frenchmen to fight beside Germany against the United States and Britain, and earlier dispatches said negotiations were under way in Paris and Vichy for the formation of a new government to organize French armament and food production for Germany's benefit.

RICHMOND B. KEECH, JAMES W. LAUDERDALE and STANLEY DeNEALE, Attorneys for Petitioners.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. In re condemnation for the acquisition of land for the widening and extension of Utah Avenue between 27th and 29th Streets, N.W., for the widening of 27th Street between Military Road and Utah Avenue, N.W., and for the widening of Military Road between Oregon Avenue and 27th Street, N.W., in the District of Columbia. District Court No. 2771. Notice and order of publication to property owners assessed for benefits, none of whose property was taken in this proceeding. Notice is hereby given that the jury in the above-entitled cause returned its verdict therein on the 27th day of November, 1942, and by said verdict assessed benefits against the following lands or parcels of land in the following amounts: Parcel 61/123, $543.40; Parcel 61/124, $1,796.60. SQUARE 2308—Lot 9, $150.00; Lot 8, $100.00; Lot 7, $100.00; Lot 6, $100.00; Lot 5, $100.00; Lot 4, $100.00; Lot 3, $75.00; Lot 2, $75.00; Lot 1, $150.00; Lot 19, $75.00; Lot 10, $85.00; Lot 11, $50.00; Lot 12, $50.00; Lot 13, $50.00; Lot 14, $50.00; Lot 15, $50.00; Lot 16, $50.00; Lot 17, $50.00; Lot 18, $60.00. SQUARE 2314—Lot 1, $60.00; Lot 2, $50.00; Lot 3, $55.00; Lot 4, $50.00; Lot 5, $50.00; Lot 6, $50.00; Lot 7, $50.00; Lot 8, $50.00; Lot 9, $50.00; Lot 10, $85.00; Lot 11, $60.00; Lot 26, $75.00; Lot 27, $25.00; Lot 28, $25.00; Lot 29, $50.00; Lot 30, $25.00. SQUARE 2315—Lot 11, $25.00; Lot 12, $25.00; Lot 13, $25.00; Lot 14, $50.00; Lot 800, $75.00. SQUARE 2302—Lot 806, $50.00; Lot 805, $50.00; Lot 802, $40.00; Lot 803, $40.00; Lot 801, $30.00; Lot 800, $30.00. SQUARE 2310—Lot 1, $85.00; Lot 2, $40.00; Lot 40, $60.00; Lot 44, $60.00; Lot 45, $75.00; Lot 801, $35.00. SQUARE 2313—Lot 1, $50.00. SQUARE 2298—Lot 805, $50.00; Lot 804, $30.00. Rock Creek Park: opposite Parcel 60/21: Military Road between 27th Street and Oregon Avenue, $1,270.00. Therefore, it is by the Court this 1st day of December, 1942, ordered that objections to said verdict of property owners assessed for benefits (no part of whose land was condemned in this proceeding) be filed in said cause on or before the 18TH DAY OF DECEMBER, 1942, otherwise said verdict will be finally ratified and confirmed upon the application therefor by the petitioners in said cause, provided, however, that a copy of this notice and order be published once in each The Washington Post, the Washington Evening Star, and the Washington Times-Herald, newspapers published in the District of Columbia, at least ten days before the said 18th day of December, 1942. EDWARD C. EICHER, Chief Justice. A true copy. Test: CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By SOPHIE LYMAN, Deputy Clerk.

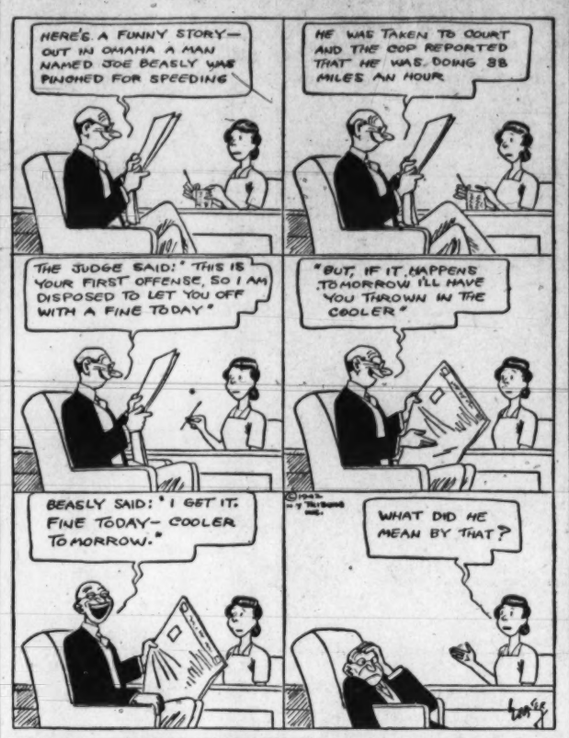
And Nothing Can Be Done About It



HERE'S A FUNNY STORY—OUT IN OMAHA A MAN NAMED JOE BEASLY WAS PINCHED FOR SPEEDING
HE WAS TAKEN TO COURT AND THE COP REPORTED THAT HE WAS DOING 38 MILES AN HOUR
THE JUDGE SAID: "THIS IS YOUR FIRST OFFENSE, SO I AM DISPOSED TO LET YOU OFF WITH A FINE TODAY"
"BUT, IF IT HAPPENS TOMORROW I'LL HAVE YOU THROWN IN THE COOLER"
BEASLY SAID: "I GET IT. FINE TODAY—COOLER TOMORROW."
WHAT DID HE MEAN BY THAT?

"My long suit was the one bid by my opponents, so I thought I'd pass to await developments. They came, all right, but they weren't as pleasant as I had expected. East, with a weak hand, was just able to eke out seven tricks at one heart; our side could easily have scored a game at no-trump.

"I try to play Culbertson. In that case, what should my proper call have been? Partner says I should have made a take-out double."

Overcall Advised

Culbertson advises a one no-trump overcall in this situation. "An overcall of an opponent's suit with one no-trump shows a fairly strong hand with three and a half or more honor tricks, at least five sure winners when vulnerable and four sure winners when not vulnerable, and one or more stoppers in the opponent's suit," he writes.

"This no-trump overcall is equivalent to a take-out double except that a goodly share of its strength is in the opponents' suit. In counting winners for this bid, an adequately guarded honor in the opponents' suit may be counted as a winner.

"If it is necessary to bid two no-trump in order to overcall the opponents' suit," Ely adds, "the hand is about the same in honor tricks but must contain one more winner."

Exposed Card Ruling

A question on rules is asked by Mrs. F. B. T. She writes: "During a friendly bridge game the other night the player who was dealing turned over one of my cards, the deuce of hearts, accidentally. One of the players suggested we have a new deal, but I said: 'Why bother because of a measly little two-spot? Let's continue.'

"As a matter of curiosity, however, we decided to ask you if there is a definite ruling on this point."

If Mrs. F. B. T. and her friends wanted to be technically correct, they should have had a new deal. The "International Laws of Contract Bridge" state that there must be a new deal by the same dealer with the same or a correct pack if it is ascertained during the deal that a player has seen and can name a card dealt to another player, or a player has looked at a card dealt to him. It makes no difference whether the card is a deuce or an ace.

Squeeze for Seven Spades

Although the declarer of today's deal did not see what cards West held, he was fairly sure of his opponent's holding because of the bidding and opening lead. Armed with this information, South developed a squeeze play on West and made his seven-spade contract.

West led the heart king, and declarer won the ace in dummy. He could count only 12 tricks—six spades, four diamonds and the club and heart aces. There was a chance, however, that West could be squeezed, provided he held the club king in addition to the heart queen, which his bidding and opening lead indicated.

Declarer drew the adverse trumps, cashed his diamonds to strip West's hand, and continued the spades. On the last spade West could not hold the heart queen and protect the club king. According to West's discard, declarer wins either the heart jack or the club queen for the thirteenth trick.

Block Leaders Carry Gospel Of Meat-Sharing to D.C. Homes

Civilian Defense block leaders—"Victory Volunteers"—will carry to housewives of the District facts on the Government's voluntary share-the-meat plan today.

In Washington's first day of this Nation-wide program 19 of the District's 56 defense areas will be covered. Another 11 will be covered on December 7. The block leader plan is still being organized, civilian defense officials said yesterday, and recruiting is still going on for volunteers to canvass the remaining 26 areas.

Each leader will visit 20 homes and provide the housewives with charts to help them keep track of the meat used. Civilians are requested to limit themselves to 2½ pounds weekly of beef, lamb, mutton, pork and veal. Children of 6 and 12 should not eat over 1½ pounds weekly and children under 6 years should be restricted to ¾ of a pound, according to the OCD.

Workers visiting families today will wear Civilian Volunteer Defense insignia and will carry identification cards and credentials.

They will be prepared to inform housewives as to why they should restrict themselves and their families in their consumption of meat and make suggestions as to how to stay within the required limit.

Equipment Not Issued Unless Training Is Taken

District Civilian Defense property will be distributed by the air-raid property clerk to voluntary workers only if they have met training requirements and otherwise qualified for volunteer defense work, Chief Air-Raid Warden William J. Mileham announced yesterday.

Volunteer workers who have not met training requirements and to whom property has been issued may retain the equipment only if they actively pursue training courses and actually meet training requirements, he said.

Trained volunteers who fail to meet service requirements or are otherwise disqualified will be required to surrender property previously issued to them.

"Every area of the warden service," he continued, "must have a duly appointed property clerk designated by letter to the chief air-raid warden."

B'nai B'rith, 2 Agencies Have 10,250 in Services

B'nai B'rith and its two youth agencies, Aleph Zadik Aleph and Hillel Foundations, have 10,250 members in the Nation's armed services, Henry Monsky, president of the parent organization, announced yesterday.

Of these, 29 have been killed in action or in line of duty and 10 have been decorated or cited for bravery. Monsky also released statistics showing widespread participation by members in all civilian pursuits related to the war.

Corps Accepts Drivers Who Do Not Own Cars

The night motor corps of the Washington American Women's Voluntary Services is now accepting women drivers who do not own cars, Mrs. Warburton Ward, corps captain, announced yesterday. Applicants must have District of Columbia driver's license before registering for the motor course, which includes driving, civilian protection and first-aid training.

The move was taken to permit competent women drivers, who are without cars because of the gasoline and tire shortage, to join the auxiliary service. Those qualifying will be assigned to drive for members of the British joint staff and the United States Government. Registration will be at A. W. V. S. headquarters, 2170 Florida Avenue Northwest, from 7 to 10 p. m. nightly.

Lloyd Douglas Sees Nation's Return to 'Hard, Rugged' Life

Sacrifices made for the war effort presage a return to the rugged "hard way" of American life, which may be the country's salvation, Author Lloyd C. Douglas asserted last night.

Dr. Douglas, author of "Magnificent Obsession;" "Green Light," "The Robes" and other successes, delivered the second in a series of special lectures on the general theme of "For Impatient Idealists" at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest.

Discussing "Abandoned Towers" last night, Douglas recalled that America was built the "hard way" but that when men began to capitalize on the fruits of their forebears' sweat and toil, the "easy way" started to dominate American life.

Emphasizing that while he did not favor returning to the oxcart-spinning wheel stage Douglas said that a return to the virtues of the simple life might prove to be a good thing for the country, after all.

He said that he could see a "hand at work" amid all war's adversities—a hand that might eventually save the country's life. "We still have faith in the American way—the 'hard way,'" he added.

Dzendolet Rites Today

The Navy announced yesterday that Lieut. Arthur Dzendolet of Cambridge, Mass., who lost his life in the Boston fire November 28, will be buried in Arlington Cemetery at 11 a. m. today. Funeral services will be conducted by Lieut. Stephen V. Hannon of the Navy's Chaplain Corps.

Missionary to Speak

Dr. George W. Carpenter, educational adviser for Protestant missions in the Belgian Congo, will address the quarterly meeting of the District Woman's Baptist Missionary Association tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest.
